PICKUP GAME

Quigley is first to pull papers

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It is clear the year ahead will be one wrought with fiscal challenges for the community. Hopefully, the generosity, kindness, creativity and community spirit we have so often reported about in this town will shine through once again in 2009.

Following is a recap of key events, decisions, and happenings around town during 2008 — the Year in Review, as we call it. At the same time, the Cohasset Mariner staff wishes everyone a happy, safe New Year and looks forward to covering the town throughout 2009 — which we expect will be another unforgettable year for Cohasset.

JANUARY

Karen Quigley shows up bright and early the first day election nominations papers are available signaling her intent to run for a seat on the Board of Selectmen.

The popular Route 3A bakery, Maggie's Corner, closes its doors at the end of the month.

One of Cohasset's premier waterfront estates, Cary Point located at 79 Atlantic Ave., is listed for $19.5 million. It is the highest listing price ever for a Cohasset property.

The Red Lion Inn is warned by Selectmen for serving alcohol after hours on the day before Thanksgiving in 2007.

The Sewer Commission tells the Planning Board there are no new connections available for potential village development (or any new development for that matter).

During the early part of the year, the Zoning Board of Appeals tackled a resident's appeal to remove the Little Harbor water and sewer project staging area from its residential location on Jerusalem Road. In February, the ZBA denies the appeal on the grounds it is allowed under the town's zoning bylaws.

Due to a new aeration system installed in Lily Pond to help the water plant, the pond is closed for winter activities including ice fishing and skating.

Members of the Cohasset Sports Partnership came before the Selectmen to seek their support in their efforts to raise money to construct a turf field at Cohasset High. They received thumbs up from the board to move forward.

Café Zuppa opens in the village taking over the storefront formerly occupied by the Silver Spoon.

A rash of pocketbook thefts from local parking lots stolen when a women is gone into a store for just a few minutes puts police and women on alert.

A home on Howe Road suffers a two-alarm fire.

A race for one seat on the Sewer Commission shapes up. Residents Wayne Sawchuk and Jim Dow pull nomination papers.

The Planning Board considers doing a study and review of the waterfront district zoning bylaws. Although it was ultimately brought before town meeting, the article was ultimately postponed.

FEBRUARY

Ghost hunters – the Enfield Paranormal Society, to be exact – set up shop in Town Hall during the first weekend of February. They find more than just offices and paperwork, they declare the old portion of Town Hall "haunted."

"Something in this Town Hall is haunted," said Matt Kondracki, founder and lead investigator. A closing door near the Board of Health office was their primary piece of evidence. The declaration sparked town-wide interest and skepticism.

Cohasset votes for Republican Mitt Romney and Democrat Barack Obama in the "Super Tuesday" presidential primary. Cohasset was one of the few communities on the South Shore to go for Obama over Hillary Clinton.

The library kicks off its second annual Cohasset Reads Together program with two reads: "Walden" by Henry David Thoreau and "A Walk in the Woods" by Bill Bryson.

Family, area teenagers, their families and the community at large try to come to terms with the devastating loss of 16-year old Scituate high school student Timothy Mahoney in a car accident on Route 3A in Cohasset. The driver of the car, Christopher Barrow, survived with serious injuries. He was later charged with on one count of motor vehicle homicide by negligent operation. The trial has been set for Feb. 25, 2009 at Quincy District Court.

Merle Brown, who has served on what seems like every town committee at one point or another, is named 2008's Citizen of the Year. His most recent achievement was his role in the renovation and restoration of Beechwood Ballpark.

Macho, a one-year old West Highland terrier, is hit by an SUV in the village. Crazy Paws Veterinary Hospital owner and vet, Fawn Stevenson, takes the dog home for the weekend and nurses him back to health.

Police nab three suspects for breaking and entering at Curtis Liquors.

A February rainstorm overflows the Cohasset wastewater treatment plant. Elm Street residents request the Sewer Commission to put all new tie-ins on hold until the town addresses the stormwater issues that lead to the sewer overflows.

A seal takes a rest on Sandy Beach drawing attention from neighbors, kids and nearby construction workers.

A class at the South Shore Art Center is channeling the beauty and intricacies of nature's plants into works of art. Some of the pieces were displayed at the New England Flower Show.

An idea to turn the Cohasset Swim Center in to a year-round facility is discussed before the Community Preservation Committee.

The recently completed technology and engineering lab is up and running and classes of sixth, seventh and eighth graders are getting hands-on experience in a cross section of engineering disciplines. The lab was funded in a joint effort between the PSO and Cohasset Education Foundation.

MARCH

Letters to the editor pour in and discussions at Selectmen meetings drag on as controversy heats up on the Treat's Pond saltmarsh restoration project is on the warrant for Annual Town Meeting.

At age 36, Cohasset resident Kevin McKeon is a two-time cancer survivor. He is preparing for the 2008 Boston Marathon to raise money for the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

The School Committee approves a $14.3 million budget for fiscal 2009, a 4.6 percent increase over the year before.

Cohasset resident Tanya Bodell is appointed to the International Chamber of Commerce Standing Committee of the International Centre for Expertise. The committee finds experts to aid global companies in a variety of business matters.

The Cohasset girls' basketball team wins the Division 4 state championship at the TB Banknorth Garden. It is the first girls' basketball state title in two decades.

Mass Paranormal offers its expertise to investigate the rumors of a haunting at Town Hall.

Jane Thomas's fourth grade class learns about El Salvador after helping raise money to buy mattresses for impoverished children and families.

The Cohasset Triathlon Association and Emotional Armor, a lifestyle messaging company, team up to create special edition t-shirts for the second annual event.

Fourth grade teacher Mike Lewis shaves his head after his class reads more than 30,000 minutes as part of the PSO Readathon fundraiser.

Ted Carroll is hired to succeed longtime Recreation Director Jack Worley. A lifelong resident of Cohasset, Carroll worked in the recreation department under Worley for many years. Worley steps down at the end of April, but continues to work part-time in the department.

POLICE BEAT

Arrest, accidents and suspicious activity

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 47-year-old Cohasset man is facing several charges after police found him in a parked car where he had been drinking on Saturday (Dec. 27) at about 1:34 a.m.

Police responded to Arrowwood Road after receiving a call about a suspicious vehicle, a gray Jeep Grand Cherokee.

Police shone the flashlight on the driver's side and spotted a man sitting behind the wheel. Further investigation revealed beer bottles and cans in the vehicle.

The man initially provided police with an incorrect date of birth and name, police said.

Police later identified him and as it turned out, his right to operate had been suspended for refusing an alcohol test in a prior incident in another state.

He is charged with operating while unlicensed, having an open container of alcohol in the vehicle, public drinking and providing false information to the police.

Mercedes

A suspicious gold Mercedes parked in the caller's driveway on Whitehead Road turned out to belong to a neighbor who was having some work done at home and had parked there temporarily, police said.

The car's owner came down and moved the car. The call came in at 11:45 a.m. on Tuesday (Dec. 23).

MV hits deer

A 2001 Nissan headed north on Route 3A hit a deer just before Stop & Shop, police said. The deer entered the roadway from the right and kept on going across the road after hitting the car.

Deer are still in the mating season so motorists need to be aware that they may try to cross the road.

"It can happen anywhere," Chief Hussey said.

This accident occurred at 11:20 p.m. on Tuesday (Dec. 23).

MV accident

At 5:09 p.m. on Sunday (Dec. 28), a 2002 Lexus had stopped at the temporary stoplight on Jerusalem Road when it was struck from behind by a 1999 Buick, police said. The Buick had a flat tire that may have contributed to why it could not stop, Chief Hussey said. Police said the flat tire could have occurred along the roadway where roadwork is being done.

No citations were issued. The Buick had to be towed. Police drove the operator home and helped her with her groceries.

Missing son

A son, who is in his 50s, was reported missing by his father at about 8:20 p.m. on Friday (Dec. 26). As it turned out, another individual had dropped the son off at his Cohasset home but he had not found his way inside due to the fact he had had too much to drink, police said.

Officers located the man; he was checked out and police left him with his father.

Suspicious man

Police investigated an incident Saturday on Jerusalem Road when a man came to the door and asked the girl if her parents were at home. The girl was home while her mother had run to the store. The parents called police because they were concerned. Police checked the area but could not find anyone; also there were no reports of similar incidents.

Police said the parents reminded their child not to answer the doorbell when home alone.

Town Meeting doesn't resolve Treat's issue

A seven-unit condo development at 25 Ripley Road is filed as a 40-B development with the state. The project does not get support from Selectmen or the neighborhood.

A busy Town Meeting leaves the Treat's Pond issue without a resolution rather an extension to leave it to be discussed another day, the opportunity for wind turbines in Cohasset, the creation of capital stabilization fund and a housing trust, the passage of a stormwater bylaw and a level services no-override budget.

APRIL

The Norfolk County District Attorney's office rules the School Committee violated the Open Meeting Law for improperly citing the reason for an executive session held in January.

The 32nd running of the Cohasset Road Race by the sea goes off without a hitch.

The PSO puts on its annual fundraising telethon featuring some of the most talented students.

A 50-plus strong group of family, friends, co-workers forms in tribute to Joe Lyons, the triathlete who suffered a fatal heart attack during the swim portion of the inaugural Cohasset Triathlon. Team Lyons, led by Karen Lyons, inspires and touches the Cohasset community. Together, the team raises over $60,000 for the triathlon's charitable partner, the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation.

The only race in the 2008 town election was for a seat on the Sewer Commission. Wayne Sawchuk edged out Jim Dow.

Cohasset's longtime public health nurse Judy Fitzsimmons retires from her post after 22 years.

Board of Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr promises residents an open and transparent process when it came to the town's involvement with the Army Corps' proposed Treat's Pond saltmarsh restoration project or other alternatives for the ailing wetland.

College senior Frannie Noble plans to tackle the open roads of America on bike as part of a non-profit organization Bike & Build.

Village design focus of workshop

Easement issues pop up surrounding Treat's Pond and the Board of Selectmen try to find an amicable solution.

A landmark of Cohasset Village, Carousel Antiques, closes its doors after 32 years of business.

Cohasset native Jerry White pens a book on overcoming tragedy and adversity. He harnesses his own experience as a survivor of a landmine explosion as well as the stories from other survivors around the world to write "I Will Not Be Broken: Five Steps to Overcoming a Life Crisis."

A well-attended workshop is held to discuss the problems and potential solutions to the flooding near Treat's Pond and Atlantic Ave. Cohasset resident Jim Drysdale gives a power point presentation to show an alternate viewpoint to restore the pond and alleviate flooding.

A Cohasset man Scott O'Day is struck by lightning while walking along the Scituate coastline with his wife and two dogs.

Local author Melissa Schorr pens her first novel, "Goy Crazy," a young adult book about interracial dating.

The Second Annual Cohasset Triathlon held on Sunday, June 29 raises more than $265,000 for its charitable partner the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF).

The Planning Board holds a workshop to get input on their village design guidelines, a complementary set of regulations to the village business district zoning bylaws.

A sign officially naming a plot of land located at the end of Parker Avenue. Mariner's Landing is commemorated with a wooden sign and small ceremony.

JULY

"Grease" is the word! The Cohasset Dramatic Club summer program puts one of the most well known and best loved musicals to great success.

Police seize evidence from several car break-ins from a Hull Street residence.

A public forum held at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library is the community's first formal introduction to a two wind turbine project proposed near the Cohasset Heights landfill. Residents came with plenty of comments and questions, but for the most part the meeting was positive.

Finance Director Mike Buckley paints a bleak picture for the budget in fiscal year 2010 for the Board of Selectmen.

The Town Hall Committee for the Restoration and Renovation lays out plans for the old portion of Town Hall. Plans were put on the table to return the building to its original and historic form, but with the modern amenities a town building demands. The committee presents a plan to essentially flip-flop the auditorium and town offices; the way the building originally was designed and constructed. The auditorium would be put on the second floor and the town offices on the first. The estimated cost of the project is $4.4 million. At a later July meeting, the Selectmen support this concept.

The Cohasset Historical Society puts together a house tour, "More Stately Mansion" of five most noteworthy homes of historical significance and modern mansion elegance.

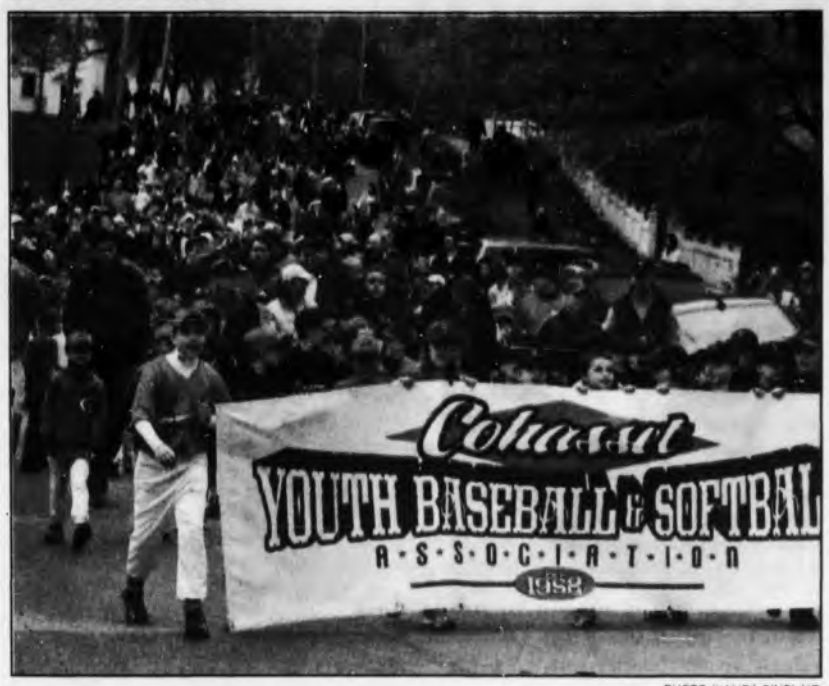
The Sandy Beach Association reports a troubling trend at the beach — dog owners not picking up after their pets.

There is "musical chairs" in the village as it undergoes a bit of change as established businesses move and change locations, new shops move in and some move out.

A "Town Hall" regional meeting with Governor Deval Patrick is held in Hull.

All the Best, owned by David Bigley, moves his shop from the James Brook Crossing shops to Ripley Road in the former Carousel Antiques space.

Two young entrepreneurs, Owen Kefallinos and Grace Gaumer, bake dozens of homemade, all natural dog treats and sell them under the name "Doggie Delights" at the Farmer's Market. They are donating a portion of the proceeds to the Scituate Animal Shelter.



The 200-apartment unit Avalon complex overcomes its last major hurdle of wastewater. The Cohasset Water Commission, which had appealed the Department of Environmental Protection's approval of the on-site groundwater discharge permit in 2007, reached a cooperation agreement with the Avalon developers. The complex, which will include one- and two-bedroom units, 25 percent will be deemed affordable, is located on a 62 acre plot off Route 3A, across from Good Sport.

AUGUST

Each summer students at the Center for Student Coastal Research team up with Board of Health inspector Tara Tradd to test the swimming waters to ensure they are safe for recreational activity. Tradd compares her professional lab results and then compares to the CSCR student results. Although the students use a different method than the lab for the past few years, the student results have been right on target.

The Old Man and the Kid

The Old Man sat down at his desk and pulled out his familiar dog-eared logbook. It was almost filled with his scribblings. He opened it to a fresh page, the last one in the book. He looked at the clock. The second hand had entered the last minute.

He wrote furiously for a moment, then put his pen down and paused to let his thoughts catch up with his hand. He picked up his pen to write again but there was no room at the bottom of the page. He recalled the words of the poet:

"The moving finger writes and having writ moves on.

"Not all thy piety and wit can call it back to cancel half a line

"Nor all thy tears wash out a word of it."

The Old Man put his pen down for the last time. Outside bombs exploded in the streets. Sirens wailed. Men, and women, too, screeched at each other from rival soapboxes. Others wallowed helpless in the wake of cupidity and greed.

Where was the Kid, he wondered. The youngster was supposed to be here early so the Old Man could brief him on what was expected to happen during his lifetime. Whatever it was would be the Kid's responsibility, not his.

He was looking at the clock, counting the seconds, when the door flew open and the Kid came in. He was natty in clean white diapers and sash but his rosy brow was knotted in a look that was at once surprised, piqued and a little disappointed.

"You're late," said the Old Man.

"Sorry," said the Kid. "I got held up at the airport. They must have thought I had a bomb in my diapers. They put my sash through an x-ray machine. I'm not even born yet, and what do they think I am, a terrorist?"

"It's the way of the world," said the Old Man, biting his tongue for having to say it.

"Not my way," said the Kid. "I'll see to that in a hurry."

He sat down at the desk and began thumbing through the Old Man's log. The Old Man watched him a trifle sadly. He recalled another young lad who entered the world so long ago brimming with confidence that he would change it. He had failed badly.

"What's this word?" asked the Kid. "B-a-i-l-o-u-t. That's a new one on me."

"It means," said the Old Man, "that Congress gave taxpayers' money to the money lenders, only they didn't lend it to those who really needed it."

"Well, I guess you screwed that one up to a fair thee well. And what's this word? T-r-i-l-l-i-o-n."

"That's the amount of the national debt."

"I never heard of it. Is it like a million?"

"Higher."

"A billion?"

"Higher. Try a million million."

"How much is the national debt?"

"Oh, around 10 or 12 trillion, no one really knows for sure."

"How did you let things get so out of hand? It's gonna take me at least until March to straighten this out."

The Old Man looked at him sharply. He's kidding, he thought. But he knew he wasn't.

"What's this?" the Kid continued. "A gallon of gas at $4. You really stuck it to everybody, didn't you."

"I couldn't help it. You see there is this organization called OPEC …"

"Save it. I'll have to take care of that, too."

Midnight was only a few ticks away and the Old Man looked so sad that even the Kid was sympathetic.

"Hey, at least you saw an African American elected president," said the Kid. "That's a plus."

"He hasn't been sworn in yet," said the Old Man, "and already they're trying to pin a scandal on him. That Blago thing in Chicago. And some guys are still trying to prove he is not a natural-born citizen and thus can't be president."

"Don't worry. I'll take care of that, too."

The Kid put aside the Old Man's log and opened his own to the first page. It gleamed at him, white and pristine, beckoning his pen. Poised to begin, he looked up from his writing.

"Suppose I …" he said. But the Old Man was gone. The Kid was left alone with a log of 365 blank pages to fill. What would he write? For the first time in his young life, he wasn't sure.

I'm a Tousler

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

When I'm near small children I feel I must tousle their hair. I'm not totally sure why. My hand is drawn to their heads like a magnet, along with dog heads and cat backs, the bridge of a horse's nose, and most any part of an alpaca. But people expect you to pet their alpacas. They sometimes would rather you didn't pet their children. I can't really blame them, the world being what it is, but I want to live in a world where children have nothing to fear from tousles like me. That's point number one.

Point number two is that this New Year's Day is a good time to dream large and imagine the kind of world we would prefer, because the current one seems about to reboot any minute. In the midst of a collapse, great thinkers stand up and plan for the eventual rebuilding, and I want to help build a world where everyone is named either Fred or Ginger, because I'm absolutely horrible with names. You know that list of seven Alzheimer's symptoms you're supposed to be watching for in your parents? I have all eight of them. And I swear name retrieval is an ability I lost in the womb at some point. I can know exactly who someone is — a fellow soccer parent, a loyal manservant — but if I haven't thought about him for over a month his name is buried beneath piles of news clippings, computer code, and inane conversations with my daughter about pimples and mood swings and why every time I mention her in the paper her popularity takes an unexpected nose dive. Pulling a name out from under all that rubble takes me at least 15 seconds — plenty long enough, I've found, for the spouse I'm staring at to decide I'm an idiot.

Since we have no choice but to spend the next decade rebuilding society from the ground up we might as well see it as an opportunity — the perfect time to make the fundamental changes we've wanted for years.

I'm not an idiot, but I happen to do a lot of idiotic things, which is why I want to live in a world where everyone has to wear a hat representing his IQ level. This way I could secretly buy a High IQ hat and people would chalk up my inability to remember their names as one more lovable quirk of the village genius. Only later when everyone was gone would I switch back into my Average IQ hat, which would be my real hat. If someone came to the door I would quickly put on my High IQ hat and throw my real hat into a special drawer that didn't look like it should contain a hat. By the time the person left he'd be completely fooled, and I would finally remember that his name was Fred and would call out, "So long, Fred! See you at work tomorrow, Freddy Boy!"

Since we have no choice but to spend the next decade rebuilding society from the ground up we might as well see it as an opportunity — the perfect time to make the fundamental changes we've wanted for years. First on the list has to be the installation of a dolphin tank in every home. Dolphins are really upbeat and communicative and probably have tons to teach us about the mysteries of the ocean depths. After that we should set up a democratic system of government in which competent representatives are elected by an educated and informed populous. Then we could put in a second dolphin tank with a tunnel between the two, so the dolphin can swim right into the kitchen where all the herring are. We would need an independent judiciary and waterproof appliances but I'm pretty sure that's all doable.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset, which he hopes to rechristen "Gingerville" in 2010 while everyone else is busy foraging.

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The more things change the more they remain the same, as we shall find out in 2009.

January – Gov. Sarah Palin of Alaska announces for president in 2012, despite urgings of her supporters that she at least wait until President Barack Obama has been inaugurated. "This pig ain't waitin' for no lipstick," she says in her best moose-hunter accent.

February – Osama bin Laden is arrested sharing a condo with Whitey Bulger in Florida. "I find that sticking close to my friend Whitey is the surest way to avoid discovery by American authorities," says noted Islamic terrorist, speaking through his lawyer, Ramsey Clark.

March – New Hampshire legislature moves the date of the state's 2012 presidential primary to Dec. 1, 2011 to preserve its status as first in the nation. Sarah Palin speaks to the NAHMNA (National Association of Hockey Moms of North America) in Berlin, N.H.

April – Price of gasoline begins to rise in preparation for the coming vacation travel season. America's yachting industry asks Congress for a billion dollar bailout so it can properly prepare boats owned by oil company executives for the coming vacation travel season.

May - Florida legislature moves the date of the state's 2012 presidential primary to Nov. 1, 2011 so it can be the nation's first. Sarah Palin speaks to the NASMNA (National Association of Surfing Moms of North America) in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

June – President Obama declines an invitation to go hunting with former Vice President Dick Cheney. "President Biden — does that tell you anything?" says Obama. Researchers find that living causes cancer. Anti-living bill is quickly filed in the Massachusetts legislature.

July – New Hampshire legislature, meeting in emergency session, moves the date of the state's presidential primary to Jan. 2, 2011. "Let's see them beat that," says the governor. Sarah Palin speaks to the NANENA (National Association of Nuclear Engineers in North America) in Seabrook, N. H.

August – Red Sox Manager Terry Francona calls the bullpen for reliever Jon Papelbon but finds his call rerouted through a switchboard in India, where they think a "relief pitcher" is something you keep in the bathroom.

September – Diehard Republicans admit President Obama may actually have been born in Hawaii as he says and not Kenya and really is eligible to run for president. Florida legislature moves the date of the state's 2012 presidential primary to July 5, 2010. Sarah Palin has run out of speeches.

October – Red Sox fail to make the American League playoffs when Japanese interpreter falls ill during crucial series with the Yankees. Globe sportswriter Dan Shaughnessey's latest book. "The Curse of Manny Ramirez," is No. 1 on most best seller lists.

November – Having successfully neutered Christmas, ACLU turns to Thanksgiving, claims "giving thanks" implies a higher power that traumatizes unbelievers and should be changed to "fall solstice day."

December – New Hampshire legislature moves the date of its state's presidential primary to Jan. 2, 2010. Due to missed deadlines, Sarah Palin finds herself the only candidate on the ballot. Ralph Nader files suit.

HEALTH NOTES

Think about all the good stuff

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

These days, the media are filled with awful stories of horrible holiday incidents — to the point that it's hard to remember that it's the media sensationalizing events to increase readership. Such depiction could well lead us to believe that our times are unique in the magnitude or number of horrific events and could be expected to cast a pall on our perception of the holiday season.

A result of such a perception is a curbing of optimism; a loss of the feeling of well being and the physical and psychological damage which follows. Studies have shown that pessimism, when adopted as a continuing part of one's psychological makeup can have a direct effect on incidence of health problems and the frequency of illness later in life.

To deal with the onslaught of terrible news depicted in the media, it's necessary to remember several facts: First, that although there are more bad things happening, there are also more people; the proportion of good to bad does not seem to be changing measurably. Second, many more good things happen to normal people than bad, and finally, you have a greater ability to make good things happen in your life than anyone else.

The new year will come; nothing will stop it. And your attitude and that of your family will play the biggest role in making it a successful one. We are in a time of big changes which will have an effect on how we live, what we do with our time and what our relationship will be with those around us — as well as how much money we will have and what we can spend it on.

Some researchers have claimed that a positive outlook motivates us to plan for our future and may even have an effect on our long-term physical health

All the issues above are personal questions which need to be considered. It would be healthier to be optimistic about them and how one expects to respond. Depending on the disruptions each of us expects in our lives because of events out of our control, one activity may provide some stability:

- Planning; a good policy at the beginning of any year. Experts seem to agree on the elements of all planning endeavors as follows:
- Where are we? Inventory & Analysis of Existing Conditions
- Where do we want to go? What will our goals be for the next year?
- How do we want to get there? Should we change our standard of living, should we consider moving? What should be changed? – or kept the same? Do we need to change anything?

Finally, if it's possible, realistic optimism is powerful medicine as is confidence in yourself and your decisions. Psychologists have established that people tend to be irrationally positive. They enjoy longer life, greater success and underestimate the likelihood of getting serious disease, financial or other difficulties. Some researchers have claimed that a positive outlook motivates us to plan for our future and may even have an effect on our long-term physical health. In fact, a study published in the journal Nature confirms the idea that having a positive outlook is a personality trait with deep, neurological roots. Researchers found that the brains of optimistic people actually behave differently on a brain scan from those who tend to be more pessimistic when they think about future events.

So, this coming year it's clearly better for your health to think about the good stuff and ignore the gloom. Days are getting longer. Before very long, flowers will be blooming and who can ignore the first signs of spring? Be optimistic! Try it; you'll like it and it'll improve your health.

Now that the new year has arrived, we can say "good riddance" to 2008. Surely it would be difficult to have as bad a year for 2009, so let's concentrate on making it, if not the best of years, at least better than last year. Hopefully you'll join me in having a moderately good New Year.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

LIBRARY CORNER

Book group to meet on Jan. 28

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348.

Movie Matinee – Join others for a free movie and light refreshments at 11 a.m., on Friday, Jan. 2. The movie "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," starring Jane Powell and Howard Keel, will be shown. Six brothers decide to find brides for themselves after the seventh brother (Howard Keel) brings home a wife in this musical. 103 minutes. Free. All are welcome.

Cohasset Reads Together 2009 – Events for Cohasset Reads Together are scheduled for January and February. The events compliment the themes of "New Boy" by Julian Houston and "A Slave no More" by David Blight, the two books selected for the town-wide reading initiative. First up, meet author Julian Houston at 10 a.m., on Saturday, Jan. 17, at First Parish Unitarian Church on Cohasset Common. Other events will include a visit by author David Blight, a movie, book discussion groups and two memoir writing workshops. Call the library for more information.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film "Ben X" at 6 p.m., on Thursday, Jan. 15. Free admission and refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Library Book Group – The January book selection is Geraldine Brook's book "People of the Book." All are welcome for coffee at 10 a.m., on Wednesday, Jan. 28. Call the library to reserve a copy of the book.

Artist Reception – Meet artist Sara "Ginger" Holbrook at a free reception at the library from 4 to 6 p.m., on Sunday, Jan. 11. Holbrook's exhibit, "Close Encounters," represents two years of work focusing on a close observation of animals, flowers, people and objects. Holbrook's artwork will be exhibited Jan. 2 through Feb. 28.

BRIEFLY CORNER

Christmas tree pick up

St. Anthony and St. Paul Youth Ministry will pick up Christmas trees in the town of Cohasset. This is a fundraiser for the summer mission trip.

Anyone who would like their tree picked up should call 781-749-6382, and leave name, telephone number and address. Trees will be picked up Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 3 and 4. Cost is $20 per tree, $15 for seniors.

Post Prom Committee to meet

The Post Prom Committee will meet at 7 p.m., on Thursday, Jan. 8, in the library of Cohasset High School. All parents of seniors are welcome to attend.

Turbine hearing Jan. 12

The Planning Board has continued the public hearing on the proposed Cohasset Heights wind turbine project until Monday, Jan. 12 at 7:30p.m. Noise, flicker and the recent balloon demonstration will be some of the topics discussed. All the additional data the Planning Board requested at their last public hearing on Dec. 1 is to be submitted to the planning board office for review by Dec. 29, giving the board's consulting engineers two weeks to review the data.

"The data has to be received by December 29, or we're just going to postpone," said Planning Board vice chair Charles Samuelson.

MLK breakfast is Jan. 17

Please note the date of the eighth annual Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Breakfast has been changed to Saturday, Jan. 17. The event will take place form 9-11 a.m. at the First Parish Unitarian Universalist /Parish House, 23 North Main St Cost is: $5 per person, $15 per family.

Please join the Cohasset Clergy and the Diversity Committee in honoring the memory and achievements of Dr. King.

A pancake breakfast will be served from 9 – 10 am followed by an uplifting program honoring the memory of Dr. King.

The featured speaker will be the Honorable Julian T. Houston, retired Associate Justice of the Superior Court of Massachusetts. Judge Houston was born in Richmond, Va. in 1944 and was educated in the public schools of that city and at the Hotchkiss School in Lakeville, Conn. In 26 years of judicial service, Houston has devoted himself to improving the relationship between residents of Boston's inner city and local institutions, particularly the institutions of the criminal justice system. Houston has also worked to develop programs that build relationships between the inner-city community and Boston's great cultural institutions.

Houston is the author of a novel, "New Boy," published by Houghton Mifflin in 2005. "New Boy" is a Cohasset Reads Together book choice in January and February along with "Slave No More," by David Blight.

Childcare will be provided during the breakfast. For more information please call Connie Afshar at 781-383-6006.

Seraphim Singers coming to St. Stephen's

Celebrating its 17th year, St. Stephen's Concert Series in Cohasset will be presenting the Seraphim Singers, directed by Jennifer Lester, in a concert on Sunday, Jan. 18, 2009, at 4 p.m., instead of the usual 3 p.m. time for St. Stephen's concerts.

Since its debut performance in 1997, The Seraphim Singers has created a special niche among Boston's performing elite with sensitive and probing performances of sacred choral music. Founded and directed by Jennifer Lester, the ensemble consists mostly of organists, composers, and other professional musicians whose vast knowledge and experience nourishes a passion for arresting and demanding repertoire. In residence at the Basilica of Our Lady of Perpetual Help (known fondly among Bostonians as "Mission Church"), The Seraphim Singers has honed refined interpretations of Roman Catholic masterworks, from Monteverdi and Byrd in the Renaissance to Poulenc and Durufle in the twentieth-century.

The church is located at 16 Highland Avenue in Cohasset, is handicap accessible, and plenty of parking is available at the village car park. Admission is free, but donations will be accepted. For information call 781-383-1083.

'Sweet Charity' auditions

Cohasset Dramatic Club will host auditions for its spring musical, "Sweet Charity," the story about a down on her luck dance hall girl, Charity Hope Valentine, who's always looking for life's silver lining. The show contains such songs as "If My Friends Could See Me Now," "I'm a Brass Band" and "Big Spender" to name a few. The original story was brought to life in the late 60s with Gwen Verdon creating the title role of Charity on Broadway. Shirley MacLaine recreated the title role in the movie version of "Sweet Charity," which was released in 1969, receiving three Oscar nominations.

Show dates will be March 13, 14, 20, 21, 27 and 28, at 7:30 p.m., and March 15, 22 and 29, at 2 p.m. Auditions are scheduled for Sunday, Jan. 4, at 6 p.m., and Monday, Jan. 5, at 7 p.m., with callbacks if necessary, on Tuesday, Jan. 7, at 7 p.m., at Cohasset Town Hall auditorium, 41 Highland Ave. People auditioning should prepare 16 bars of the song of their choice and bring sheet music. An accompanist will be provided.

The directors request that no one sing a capella. Dress appropriately, there will be a dance/movement audition. Tap experience a plus but not a necessity. Some auditioners may be asked to read from the script.

John Beck to run for sewer

After the Mariner went to press last week, current Sewer Commission chairman John Beck informed the Mariner of his intention to seek re-election. If elected, it will be his third term on the board.

First and foremost, Beck said he would like to see the Little Harbor sewer project to a conclusion.

"I want to finish the whole Little Harbor sewer project and put that chapter of long history to bed," said Beck in a phone interview. He also named the upgrades to the plant as a priority.

Long time Cohasset resident Mary Goodwin takes on the role of public health nurse.

Peggy Lewis, who made headlines in December when the Cohasset Schools took her to Superior Course in order to keep her son in special education against her wishes, filed a complaint with Office of Civil Rights on behalf her of herself and her son. The Office of Civil Rights determined there was not sufficient evidence to support a violation of civil rights.

Adrian Morris Salon moves out of the village and changes its name. Lemon Lime is located next to King Jewelers on Route 3A. Owner Adrian Morris took extra care to make the new salon as environmentally friendly as possible.

Elder Affairs tells the Selectmen it has outgrown its small space at the South Shore Community Center and needs to start making plans to move. They eye an underused building, the Recreation Garage, as a possible site for their new home. The idea is later abandoned in favor of building a structure on Cohasset Swim Center land. There are many details to be worked out and plans are only preliminary.

Jessica Wheelwright, 20, gives the Mariner her account and experience after traveling to Senegal on a missionary trip.

Parking signs mislead and confuse merchants, shoppers and law enforcement.

The Conservation Commission approves regulations to aid in enforcing the stormwater bylaw passed at the Annual Town Meeting. Local students at the Center for Student Coastal Research spend the summer monitoring two locations in Little Harbor. The project, dubbed the Little Harbor Wetlands Monitoring Project, set out in June to find out just how healthy Little Harbor is based on the types of vegetation, diversity of aquatic life and salinity levels.

The library starts a brain fitness program with the help of a specifically designed computer program to increase auditory process speed and fuzzy processing.

The Alternative Energy Committee announces there is "good wind" in Cohasset for a wind turbine. The declaration is based on a year's worth of collected wind data collected from a MET tower on Turkey Hill.

SEPTEMBER

Ready and waiting on the morning of Sept. 2 were the teachers, administration and staff of the Cohasset Public Schools as the children of Cohasset came back to for the 2008-2009 school year.

Jim Armstrong, a local musician and guitar teacher, debuts classes for pre-schools and grade school age kids at Our World.

The School Committee clears the air on military recruiters and counter-recruiters after Cohasset High is named during a radio talk show as allowing counter-recruiters attend career days. Both military and counter-recruiters have been allowed to set up booths outside the cafeteria at separate times over the last two years. Neither group was allowed to come for career or job fairs (in fact, Cohasset doesn't even host career fairs).

During the fall as the Little Harbor sewer project moves into the area around the common, the Farmer's Market moves—twice. First, it spends a week at the little league baseball fields on North Main, but after parking problems at that location it is moved to the parking lot of the South Shore Music Circus.

Laura Abrams, assistant curator of the Cohasset Historical Society's Captain John Wilson house, earns a masters' degree in museum studies, after writing her thesis paper on the Wilson House.

The Historical Society holds a lecture and exhibit on the D.S Kennedy Inc., a pioneer in the business of antennas and communication. The company was located off Route 3A for 16 years (1947-1963); it was at the forefront on antenna technology for much of its existence and was the largest manufacturer of antennas in the world during the 1950s.

The Little Harbor water and sewer project reaches its halfway point. Managers of the project expect the majority of roadwork to be substantially complete by fall 2009.

The town holds a somber remembrance ceremony on the seventh anniversary of the 9/11 terrorist attacks.

About a hundred residents come out to listen and participate in the first public hearing on the proposed Cohasset Heights wind turbine project. The project, proposed by a private developer, seeks to add two turbines to the Cohasset landscape. The turbines will be located on the hill behind Graham Waste and Hingham Lumber.

Residents of Sanctuary Pond, the closest neighborhood to the turbines, are loud and clear in their opposition of the turbines. However, many support the turbine project as an effort to reduce greenhouse gases and if an energy purchase agreement could be reached with the town, save the town money on energy costs. The public hearings on the project are set to continue on Monday, January 5.

It was a slow day at the Cohasset polls for the state primary. With only a few races to entice those to come out and vote, many skipped voting altogether. Just 7.8 percent, or 408 residents, turned up at the polls during the course of the day.

Treat's Pond makes another appearance on the Selectmen's agenda as the board grapples with how to best (and legally) access the drainage pipe on Sandy Cove beach.

The community comes together in the first ever Cohasset Day event—a day to celebrate all that the town has to offer. Cohasset Day, held in the village, was jam-packed with events for all ages. Food from local restaurants, classic cars, a decorated bike parade, music from local bands, a mini-triathlon were all a part of the day's festivities. The event was orchestrated in a partnership between the Economic Development Committee and the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce. Planning is already in the works for the second annual event—mark your calendars for September 12.

The State Police Bomb Squad is called to the police station after a cannon-ball like device is brought to the police station. The station was evacuated for a couple of hours until the bomb squad determined the device was a solid mass and not dangerous.

Cohasset Young Entrepreneurs, a co-op table at the Farmer's Market features multiple businesses completely owned and operated by kids.

Special Olympian Jessie MacDonald adds 22-mile bike ride as part of the "Ride with the Champions" event to her long list of athletic accomplishments.

Cohasset native Cara McKenney earns an Emmy for her role as producer of the opening sequence of "Mad Men."

A visit from Norfolk County Assistant District Attorney Alexei Tymoczko sets the record straight on the ins and outs of the Open Meeting Law. Members from many town boards attend.

The library kicks off a new program "Homework Help" for Cohasset students. Each Tuesday, National Honor Society students from Cohasset High help dozens of kids with their homework.

OCTOBER

The School Committee stands tough on user fees for local sports groups after a request for a waiver from the Cohasset-Scituate youth football organization is denied.

The Selectmen place three articles outlining various options for Treat's Pond on the Special Town Meeting warrant. They are later removed from the warrant so the Selectmen can gather more information.

Cohasset Schools are proud to report they met their annual goal for MCAS scores.

The Sea Chest Consignment Shop thanks its loyal volunteers with a luncheon. They also announce the consignment shop will be sponsored by a new non-profit, Sea Winds Charity which will support other local non-profits.

Due to the struggling economy and uncertainty, the schools place a freeze on all non-essential spending and hiring. All town departments follow suit the next week. Town Manager Bill Griffin prepares the Selectmen for a challenging fiscal year ahead.

The Appalachia Service Project's Pumpkin Patch returns to Wheelwright Park.

The Planning Board approves plans for the first new construction building under the village zoning bylaws. The medical building owned by Dr. Roger Pompeo will be located facing the town parking lot, behind the village gas station.

The village bids adieu to the Cohasset News and welcomes Creative Dance Center in its place.

The Cohasset Sports Partnership puts forth a citizen's petition to receive funding for the construction of a turf field at the high school. The article was approved at Town Meeting for funding up to $500,000.

Recycling Transfer Facility workers, Charlie Guarente, Phil Edgett and Chuck Baker, greet, guide and generally keep residents in line through the sometimes-tricky process of disposing their trash and recycling.

In response to the souring economy, community leaders come together to form Cohasset C.A.R.E.S. (which stands for caring and responding economically and spiritually). Faith leaders, human service providers and residents work quickly to identify local aid providers and distribute it town-wide.

Word comes down from the state that the town's match for Community Preservation money will be reduced from 100 percent to 67 percent.

On October 31, the Greenbush commuter rail celebrates its one year anniversary. Representatives from the MBTA report readership is growing.

Jeffrey Trainor, a 15-year department veteran, is promoted to sergeant to replace a retired Shellee Peters.

NOVEMBER

Eighty-five percent of Cohasset makes their way out to polls on November 4. Democratic candidate Barack Obama wins Cohasset, Massachusetts and the popular vote of the nation. Voters also made their voice heard on four ballot questions. They opposed eliminating the state income tax (question 1), supported the decriminalizing small amounts of marijuana (question 2), supported a ban on greyhound racing (question 3) and supported a non-binding public policy question directing state legislators to supporting wind energy efforts.

The American Legion Women's Auxilliary leads efforts to help local veterans, families and children.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club puts on stirring performances of "Godspell" at the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium.

A 21-year old Cohasset man is arrested on charges of distributing marijuana. Police seized about two pounds of marijuana, some crack cocaine, psilocybin mushrooms, a scale and marijuana packaging supplies. The street value of the marijuana seized is about $13,000.

After the high school Art Major class nearly completes a mural in the village pocket park between Tedeschi's and French Memories, overnight vandals spray paint over the harbor scene. The students were upset and disappointed someone would do that to their work, but vow to restore it to its prior condition. Before they are able to fix it, a good Samaritan and local painter, Jack Nash, removes the spray paint leaving only minor touch-up for the class to complete.

Blue Restaurant featuring a menu of classic comfort foods will open in the new year in the former Pacini's Italian Eatery/Acupulco's/KoKo Island space.

A four-town regional dispatch center based in Hingham is floated as a cost saving measure for the fire and police departments.

The Red Lion Inn unveils a new French-inspired menu and restaurant – Brassierre Zapp.

Cohasset native astronaut Capt. Stephen Bowen goes into space on the NASA space shuttle, Endeavor.

Five businesses, some new to the village, other tried and true, open at the built from the ground up Depot Court Building.

Cohasset honors its veterans in a ceremony at the Veteran's Memorial Park near the harbor.

The Cohasset High girls' soccer team captures its first-ever sectional title after beating out their archrival Norwell. The team dominated the state semi-final game against defending state champions Newburyport, but after 99 minutes, 38 seconds of grueling, freezing play, they lost the game in heartbreaking fashion during double overtime.

Special Town Meeting agrees to do its part in a public-private partnership to build a turf field at Alumni Field. The town will fund roughly half the cost of the field, $500,000 and private funding will make up for the remainder, approximately $550,000.

Voters also approve the purchase of a new ambulance and police cruiser, reconstruction of a portion of Jerusalem Road, and Jacob's Meadow culvert repair during the single session Town Meeting.

The 40-B project proposed for 25 Ripley Road gets the okay from Mass Housing, an early step in making the seven-unit (two affordable) condominium project a reality.

Cohasset resident Dan O'Riordan appears (and wins!) on "Wheel of Fortune."

Cohasset Triathlon race director Bill Burnett announces he plans to co-direct two more triathlons in 2009. One will be in Gloucester and the other in Marlborough.

DECEMBER

The Water Commission says it will turn off the Lily Pond aeration system so there traditional ice activities like skating and fishing can be done on the pond.

The town is in the midst of negotiating a new contract with Comcast that provides local access programming. One of the ideas floated is to have a studio in town (possibly in the Town Hall) to produce programming like the popular "Our Town" talk show.

The Board of Selectmen voted to stick with a single tax rate for both commercial and residential property. The tax rate for 2009 will approximately $10.78.

Wellspring Multi-Service Center opens an office once a week in Cohasset Town Hall as a result of the organization's involvement in Cohasset C.A.R.E.S.

The library reveals its 2009 Cohasset Reads Together books chosen for both books local connections and timely subjects: "New Boy" by Julian Houston and "Slave No More" by David Blight. Both authors will make appearances in Cohasset in 2009.

Over the third weekend in December, weather balloons are raised at the proposed siting of the Cohasset Heights wind turbines to show the Planning Board and residents how high the machines will be.

Local merchants encourage shoppers to stay local and support Cohasset businesses. Village shops have seen a drop off in sales over last year's numbers.

Rustic Market, a winter farmer's market of sorts with homemade cookies and handcrafted gifts opens in Jonathan Livingston Plaza.

Elder Affairs identifies a possible location for a new senior center—land adjacent to the Cohasset Swim Center. The plan is only preliminary, but would include a two-floor 14,000 square foot building next to the Swim Center parking lot.

The Sewer Commission says there is capacity for 56 more tie-ins at the Wastewater Treatment Plant. This is good news for future village development and re-development.

With a new year around the corner, the Selectmen begin to brainstorm resolutions and goals for 2009 and beyond.

The School Department presents a draft budget of $14.83 million, a 3.6 percent increase over last year.

The Committee on Town History publishes a town tour guide "Exploring Historic Cohasset" just in time for the holiday season.

Cohasset gets its first major snowstorm of the year in a weekend long wallop. Over a foot of snow is dumped on the South Shore. A week later, sixty degree weather helps to melt the remaining snow…that's New England for you!

Three-term School Committee member and current chairman Rick Flynn announces he will not seek re-election in the spring. First-term Selectman Ted Carr will make a run to retain his seat. The election field will begin to come into clearer focus when nomination papers become available on January 7.

Most complicated Cohasset stories of 2008

FROM THE REPORTER'S DESK

NANCEY WHITE

What were the most complicated stories to cover in 2008?

Being a reporter in the town of Cohasset is a great job. Despite its small size, Cohasset certainly has a lot going on and I'm proud to be the one to cover it for the Mariner. But, there are those few issues where I sit at my desk and struggle (for hours sometimes!) to find the right words to describe some complex issues.

Ensuring my reporting is accurate and fair is always forefront in my mind — and that's not always easy.

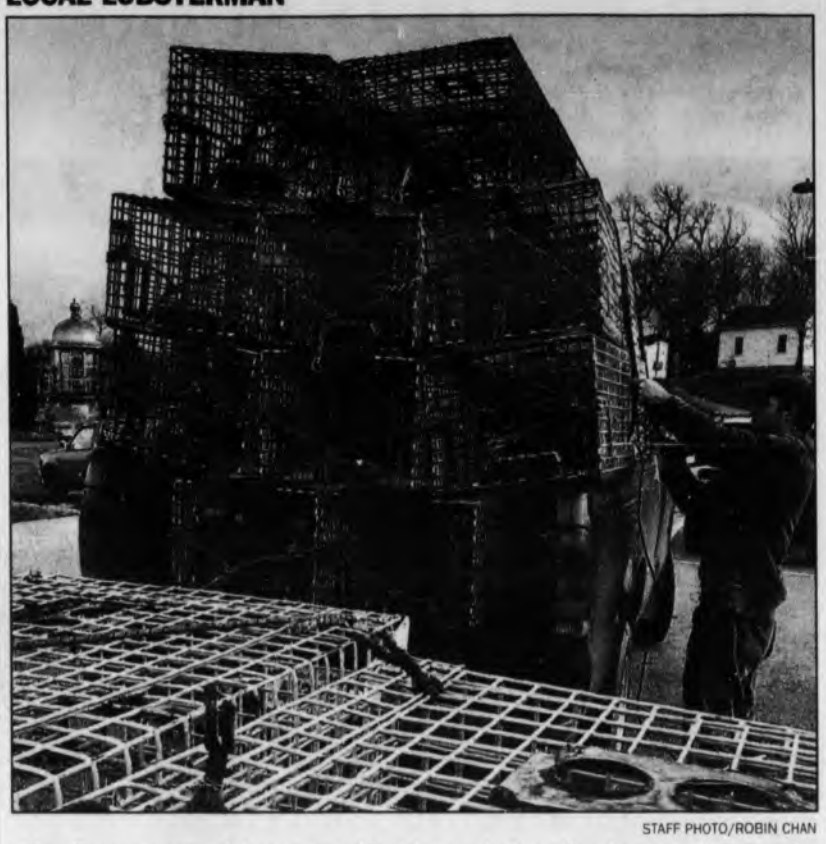
Here are a few that gave me more than one headache this year!

1. Treat's Pond

Without a doubt, the still on going Treat's Pond issue was by far the most complicated and contentious story to cover in 2008. Easements, multiple options (from the Army Corps' proposal to resident ideas to solutions proposed in the flood control master plan), differing and passionate viewpoints, hours long discussions and no resolution to date make Treat's Pond the easy choice to top the most complicated list.

2. Little Harbor staging area zoning board appeal

Zoning bylaws are inherently confusing and residents' appeal of the staging area (located on private property Jerusalem Road) did not disappoint. The issue went through many manifestations, several meetings across months, first in front of the zoning board and then before the Board of Selectmen, it was tough to keep the issue straight.



3. Wind turbines

Starting in July, I began to cover the proposed two-turbine Cohasset Heights project located off Route 3A. Before that, I did several articles on the Alternative Energy Committee's efforts and MET tower on Turkey Hill. As the first official project under the town wind energy conversion bylaw, it made its way to the formal public hearing process, it was clear there was going to be opposition to the project. There were new terms to learn —shadow flicker, anyone? New concepts to understand, what exactly is a megawatt, anyway? The long meetings where many people expressed their viewpoint gave me plenty to work with, but a challenge to edit down. This issue will continue into the new year and, despite the possibility of a few more headaches, I look forward to covering the Planning Board continued hearings on the project.

4. Ghost Investigations

Okay, so it wasn't that complicated, but it did involved a bit of learning curve. Not one who was interested in the paranormal, the fact that there were "ghost hunters" who did "paranormal investigations" and said things like "EVPs" and "EMF" and expected you to know what they were talking about was a bit overwhelming. I don't know if there is actually a ghost in Town Hall, but I do know the two groups that came to Cohasset were definitely interesting.

Cohasset's Meredith Kelley, right, tries to find a shot through the Nantucket defense during an opening round game of the 13th Annual Cohasset Holiday Basketball Classic, Monday in Cohasset.
Kelley, who was given the Tim Owens Award as Tournament MVP led the Skippers to a 64-41 win with 23 points. Sammi Lehr added 12 and Tori Lehr scored 11.
Cohasset went on to win the girls tournament with a 47-34 win over Hull to keep the Skippers undefeated at 4-0. In other girls action, Hull downed Sacred Heart 56-44 in an opener and Nantucket beat Sacred Heart 57-47 in the consolation game.
The All-Tournament team : 1. Shantel Hanniford , Nantucket; 2. Liz Abom, Sacred Heart; 3. Julie Manning, Hull; 4. Sammi Lehr Cohasset.

On the boys side, Cohasset won it's opener 75-55 over Sacred Heart, but lost the title game, 60-52 to a solid Dedham squad. The game was close into the closing minutes before Dedham pulled away.
In earlier action Dedham beat Hull 71-53 and Hull beat Sacred Heart 62-47 in the consolation game.
Boys All-Tournament team was 1. Paul Coner, Sacred Heart; 2. Triant Xypteras, Hull; 3. Danny Martin, Cohasset; 4. Doug Aitchison, Dedham.
Dedham's Nick Walch won the Coach Tim Owens Award for MVP.

Boys hoop gets double dip over Nantucket and Lynnfield

It took an extra day, but the wait was worth it as the Cohasset boys basketball team edged Nantucket 52-50, Dec. 23 in Cohasset.

The game was postponed a day; high seas and heavy winds were in the forecast making the ferry trip from Nantucket to the mainland not a very good idea.

This delay gave Coach Bo Ruggiero and his team another day of practice after three days of unscheduled rest due to the December snowstorm. It would prove fortuitous as the Whalers from Nantucket High School arrived on Tuesday, ready to go.

Coach Bo Ruggiero commented "I am pleased we won this game as Nantucket is a very, very solid athletic team. They have two big bodies, 6'5" and 6'4" and quick perimeter players. I was very impressed with their level of talent. They were a 14 win team last year and qualified for the tournament and returned almost their complete team."

Nantucket rallied to a 17-11 lead after the first quarter. The Skippers moved the ball well on offense and forced Nantucket into a few turnovers but Cohasset shot poorly from the field and the much bigger Nantucket squad looked like they might be able to run away with it.

Nantucket had the ball to start the second quarter, but it was a defensive battle on both ends of the court. Cohasset began the rally with a Marcus Charles steal (20 points, 5 rebounds, 2 steals) that fed Danny Martin (12 points, 13 rebounds, 4 blocked shots) for a dunk for 2. The Skippers then went man-to-man defense which fed the fast break.

Charles was fouled going to the hoop and hit both from the charity stripe.

Nantucket earned a technical foul for improper numbering and Robert Jones (8 points, 4 assists)

"I am pleased we won this game as Nantucket is a very, very solid athletic team."
Cohasset coach Bo Ruggiero

hit both free throws and Cohasset was down by one.

Tenacious full court defense by the Skippers forced turnovers by the Whalers and they only scored one more basket in the quarter. A Martin fast break bucket and a Charles 3 pointer ignited the crowd.

Momentum was beginning to shift to the home town Skippers as they took the lead for the first time in the game. Cohasset finished the quarter up 26-23 on a pair of Jones free throws.

Charles started the third with the second of his three, three-pointers. Freshman Robbie Mahoney got a couple of buckets in the paint, Martin continued to dominate the boards. Senior guard Owen Landon drove to the basket a few times and landed at the charity stripe, dropping in points for the Skippers. Cohasset led at the end of 3, 39-31.

The fourth quarter started with a lot of back and forth.

The full court pressure of the Skippers forced Nantucket to turn the ball over and Cohasset started to get the ball in the bucket consistently.

The quick hands of Jones, Charles and John Sturino (5 points) kept Nantucket from breaking the press, giving Cohasset the scoring opportunities. Nantucket rallied back but it was the Cohasset D that kept them from winning.

"Our poor free throw shooting was a key factor in the game being as close down the stretch as it was.," Ruggerio said. " We missed three front ends of one-and-one and a first of a two shot foul in the last 90 seconds of the game while Nantucket hit some big three's.. John Sturino made a big one with 1.8 seconds on the clock to put us up two. You really can't teach foul shooting after the players have the fundamentals down. Players need to make free throws and we emphasize the importance of that in free throw shooting every day at practice. We will continue to concentrate on that as the free throw is of prime importance."

Ruggiero was glad to get the win.

"The win was a good one," he said. "Hopefully it gave the team additional confidence in what we are preaching that the game is 32 minutes and they cannot take a single ball possession off. I'm very happy for the kids, they played hard."

Next up was away in Lynnfield, Saturday night. Coming into this game, Lynnfield was 3-0 and leading their league.

"They are a perennial tournament team out of the Cape Ann League and were coming off a 12-8 season last year" said Ruggeiro, "They are very long, very athletic and a very solid basketball team".

The first quarter saw Cohasset get off to a terrific start with Senior Co-Captain John Sturino (15 points, 5 rebounds) getting seven points in the first frame and Junior forward Johnny Maher (12 rebounds) hitting the defensive boards hard for

CHS skaters frustrated by South Shore Voke, 1-1

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The CHS skaters get back to real action tomorrow when they host Carver (Pilgrim Arena, 5:40 p.m.).

This is why they play the games.

The members of the Cohasset High hockey team felt pretty good about getting their first win of the season going into Saturday's game with rebuilding South Shore Voc Tech.

It was clear almost from the opening puck drop the Skippers were the stronger team. That observation, along with Brendan Doonan's goal (Andy McKenna assist) before the mid-point of the first period, only increased the feelings of optimism.

That, however, would be it for Skippers offense on the night, and it would be answered when the centering feed of SSV's Mitchell Boothman later in the opening frame kicked off a Cohasset defenseman and in over the shoulder of goalie Johnny Wade.

Fortunately, Wade was equal to everything else thrown at him, and the Skippers were able to salvage at least their first point of the season with a 1-1 tie.

"That was a pretty frustrating game," noted Skippers coach Bob Walsh, whose team went to 0-3-1 with the tie. "We were all over them in just about every area, but it was more of what's been plaguing us all season; we're really struggling to finish right now."

SSV goalie's Josh White was credited with 27 saves, but the Skippers ticketed at least another 15 shots for net that wound up smothered or deflected by SSV defenders.

"You've got to give the Vikings some of the credit," noted Walsh. "They did a good job of packing it in tight defensively. We didn't do a very good job of adjusting to that, though. We need to do a better job of taking what we're given to create quality shots."

Based on that assessment, it was not surprising to learn that Walsh juggled his scoring lines in practices on Monday and Tuesday.

Walsh chose not to disclose changes, but did say the shake-up appeared to be having the desired effects.

Clipper grapplers tie up opponents

By Emily Toomey
CHS CORRESPONDENT

The Cohasset wrestling team was off to a busy, but successful start this week, demonstrating that hard work yields triumph.

December 23, they went up against North Plymouth and Hingham, each tough competitors.

The outcomes could not have been better.

While wrestling against North Plymouth, Cohasset easily won every match, losing only six points for forfeiting a weight class that remains unfilled.

Gus Helbock gave the team a strong start, winning 4-2.

Graden Foley and Matt Dooley won by forfeits and were followed by Derek Froio, who pinned his opponent in an unbelievable sixteen seconds.

Colin Tarpey also won by a forfeit, and Robbie Hill and Jack Murphy both made pins during the second period of their matches.

Andrew Littauer added to the team score by pinning just at the end of the first period with seconds remaining.

The three captains also pinned, with Ross Collins- Wooley finishing in the third period, David Toomey in the second, and Mike Froio in the first. Cam Washak pinned with 49.4 seconds left in the last period and Alex Kinnealey, who wrestled up along with captains Toomey and Froio, pinned at the end of the first period. The final score was 69-6.

Competing against Hingham was more nerve-racking, involving fans from each team screaming till the very end. Cohasset had a shaky beginning- only Foley, winning by forfeit, and Derek Froio won in the first six matches. However, Littauer's victory of 4-0 turned the tide, setting off a winning streak in the Cohasset wrestling team. Toomey pinned with 26 seconds left in the first period, Mike Froio won by forfeit, and Thomas Fliboite won by five points.

Washak's pin in the third period brought the team to their feet as they began to see hope for beating Hingham. Kinnealey, who wrestled far past his weight class, had an extremely close match, but could not defeat his 285 pound opponent. This brought each team to 33 points, leaving the fate of the competition to the 103 weight class, Helbock approached the mat with confidence and pinned with 1 minute and 33 seconds left in the first period, giving Cohasset an unexpected six points over Hingham to win.

Fans, wrestlers, and coaches agreed that this meet predicted a promising season for the Cohasset wrestling team.

CNC SUPER TEAM

...Cross-Country...

NAME: Maggie Dow
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Senior
STATS: Finished her senior season with a strong XC campaign, highlighted by a second place finish at the Atlantic Coast League Championships. In the postseason, Dow just missed an All-State berth with a 23rd place finish at the Div. 2 State Meet (20:20). Took sixth at the Hockomock Invite (18:56). Also runs indoor and outdoor track at MHS. The ACL All-star will continue her running career at the University of Vermont.

NAME: Shauna McNiff
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Senior
STATS: Arguably the best runner on the South Shore this fall, McNiff went undefeated during the dual-meet season and set three course records (Silver Lake, Pembroke, Whitman/Hanson) in the process. In the postseason she shined just as bright, taking second at the Div. 3 State Meet (18:57) and eighth at the Div. 2 All-State Championships despite a fall. The PL All-star was voted Team MVP and plans to continue running in college.

NAME: Heather Connick
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Sophomore
STATS: Had a very strong season for the Titans and had a strong postseason showing as well. Connick's consistent performances helped Pembroke to third in the Patriot League. Finished a strong second in the Div. 4 State Meet (19:09) before taking ninth in the Div. 2 All-State Championships (19:25). The PL All-star also won the Brown Invitational Div. 1 race in 18:30. Already has aspirations of running at the collegiate level.

NAME: Shannon Ferguson
SCHOOL: Norwell
GRADE: Junior
STATS: This talented harrier won the South Shore League Championship Meet in 16:17 at Strawberry Valley (2.7 miles). Shined in the postseason as well, taking fifth at the Div. 4 State Meet (19:41) and 35th at the Div. 2 All-State Championships (20:25). The SSL All-star is hopeful to attend Penn State and continue her running career.

NAME: Katie Sheehan
SCHOOL: Scituate
GRADE: Sophomore
STATS: Just a sophomore, Sheehan took big strides in the Patriot League and beyond this season. Voted Team MVP and a PL All-star, Sheehan was seventh at the league championships (19:50). From there, she took 15th at the Div. 3 State Meet (20:12) and 50th at the Div. 2 All-State Championships (20:53). Sheehan already has plans of running in college.

NAME: Carolyn Connolly
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Senior
STATS: The top harrier on the Weymouth squad, which runs in the difficult Div. 1 circuit, Connolly was voted Team MVP and made the Bay State Conference All-star team. This season she ran 17:16 on the Wompatuck State Park course, cracking the top 10 best times. She was 28th at the Bay State Invite Div. 1 race (20:25) and 37th at the Brown Invitational (19:40). Connolly plans to continue her running career in college.

NAME: Jonathan McKinley
SCHOOL: Duxbury
GRADE: Sophomore
STATS: Just a sophomore, McKinley is already making big strides on area courses and capped his rookie XC season. He was sixth at the Patriot League Championships (16:44) and went on to take 29th at the Div. 3 State Meet (17:33). McKinley was 10th at the Bay State Invite (17:29) and 13th at the Catholic Memorial Invite (16:44). The PL All-star also runs indoor and outdoor track at DHS.

NAME: Drew Morrissey
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Senior
STATS: This talented runner has enjoyed a stellar four-year career with the Harbormen. Career stats find him with a 30-5 dual-meet record. Finished fifth at the Patriot League Championships (16:35). From there, Morrissey was 12th at the Div. 3 State Meet (17:06) and 16th at the All-State Championships (17:13). The PL All-star also runs indoor and outdoor track at HHS and plans to continue running in college.

NAME: Dan Joyce
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Junior
STATS: Had a breakout season for the Rams this fall, going undefeated on Marshfield's home course in dual meets. Joyce was seventh at the Div. 2 State Meet (16:30) and took 17th at the Div. 3 All-State Championships (16:38). The Atlantic Coast League All-star was 12th at the Catholic Memorial Invite (16:42) and 28th at the Bay State Invite (16:55).

NAME: Andrew McGillowey
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Senior (captain)
STATS: Came back from injury to shine at the postseason meets. Though still not at 100 percent, McGillowey had strong showings at both the State and All-State meets. The senior was 20th at the Div. 2 State Meet (16:57) and 40th at the All-State Championships (17:05). The Atlantic Coast League All-star was 21st at the Catholic Memorial Invite (17:28). Would like to continue running in college.

NAME: Ryan Kelley
GRADE: Sophomore
STATS: Was an essential part of the Titans team that won the Div. 4 State Meet title this fall. Kelley took third at the Div. 4 Meet (16:27) and went onto take ninth at the Div. 2 All-State Championships (16:53), the fastest time by a sophomore. The Patriot League All-star is the owner of the course record at Pembroke High (15:48), took ninth at the Brown Invite, and sixth at the Bay State Invite.

Cohasset. In the second quarter, Lynnfield adjusted to the Cohasset defense and began a perimeter assault on Cohasset and when those shots didn't drop Lynnfield scored on second chance points. By the end of the half, Lynnfield had outscored Cohasset 22-12 and was leading 29-27.

Three minutes into the third quarter, Cohasset had regained the lead with baskets by Sturino and Senior Co-Captain Danny Martin (18 points, 17 rebounds, 3 blocked shots). But Lynnfield continued to battle back. But it was the Cohasset defense that held solid and steady and prevented Lynnfield from getting too close.

Coach Ruggeiro "Lynnfield shot the ball well from the three-point range as they buried eight of them, six of them by their 6'1" senior," Ruggeiro said. "We made some defensive adjustments and went to our 1-3-1 zone and held the other four in check and this kid was deep hitting three but we maintained discipline and did not let the rest of them beat us. Danny Martin was the Windex man in the last five minutes of the game. He was really cleaning the boards up. It was a very good win for Cohasset. Again, our discipline and conditioning paid off in the end. Dan Martin was huge off the defensive glass in the second half, Robert Jones hit 6 of 8 free throws in the closing minutes. Sturino and Senior Co-Captain Marcus Charles (20 points) were terrific running the floor and scoring in our fastbreak system so it was again a very good team effort. Owen Landon again was a strong contributor off the bench and freshman Robbie Mahoney also did a good job against a much bigger and athletic front court than ours." In closing Ruggiero said "It was a close game that could have gone either way, but we had the discipline an team offensive balance in the end to come out on top. Now we're 3-0 going into the Christmas tournament. It's going to be lots of fun ."

"There definitely appeared to be more offensive spark in these practices," reported the Skippers third year coach. "We'll see how that translates to game action Saturday,"

The CHS skaters get back to real action tomorrow when they host Carver (Pilgrim Arena, 5:40 p.m.). They'll then have nothing but practices for another week. Hull is on the slate for next Saturday (Pilgrim, 8 p.m.).

On paper, the Skippers appear better than both of these rebuilding teams. However, after the SSV tie, Walsh is doing his utmost to assure his charges look past no team.

"Some of the kids were talking about how much Carver lost to Rockland, but that's the kind of talk and thinking that could get us in trouble," said Walsh. "We're not good enough yet to think anyone is going to be a pushover."

That said, Walsh did single out a handful of players for "stepped up play" of late, among them junior Brendan Doonan, sophomores Sam Leahy, Anders Goetz and Travis Craven, and freshmen Coleman Hernan, Alex Evans and Sean McKenna.

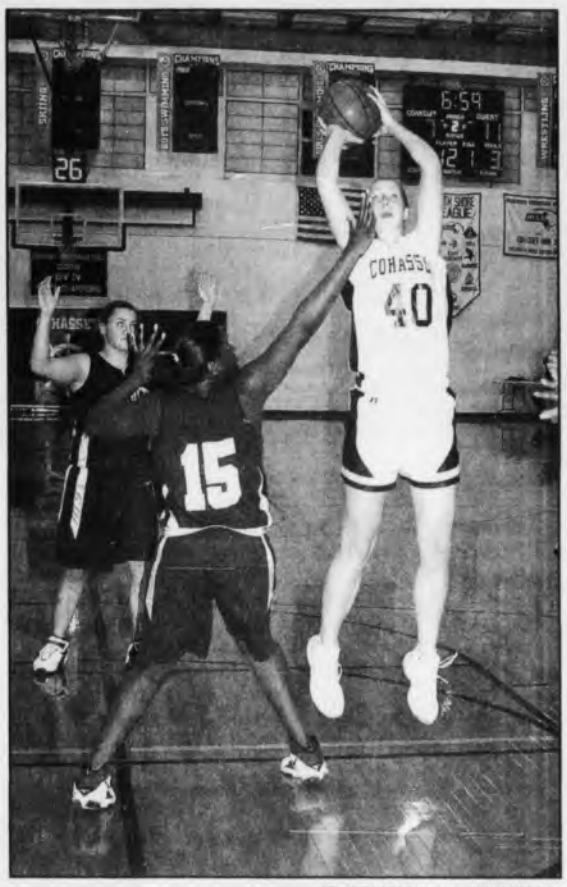
Not only did Doonan score the goal in Saturday's varsity game, he also had a goal in Tuesday's JV win over Abington, 5-2, and was a force throughout, according to Walsh.

Craven, continued to state a strong case for a regular varsity shift with a pair of pretty tallies in the JV win.

Walsh chose not to disclose changes, but did say the shakeup appeared to be having the desired effects.

Leahy took advantage of late season varsity call-up last winter, and Walsh said he continues to make steady progress as a top four defenseman.

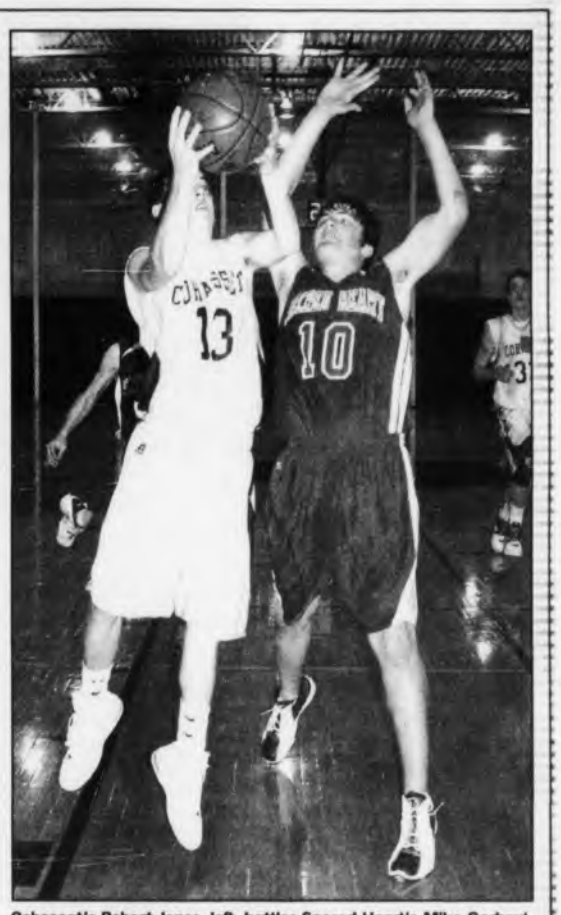
Hernan, who checks in at barely 5-feet and 100-pounds, raised his stock as a defenseman with intelligent play in the Voke game.



Goetz is another player who eschews the lack of size excuse. The sophomore continues to assert himself as one of the Skippers most hard-nosed muckers.

Evans is another hard-nosed player and one of the most pleasant surprises for Walsh to date.

Ditto for McKenna, a lifelong forward who Walsh converted to a defenseman this winter.



The freshman has come a long way in just few weeks, and Walsh now considers him his number five varsity defenseman. "And he's nipping at the heels of the two guys in front of him," said Walsh.

"Sean is a very intelligent player who limits his mistakes," continued Walsh. "He's proving real quick to be very dependable with the way he reads the ice and stands strong in front of the net."

Cruising in South America on luxury line Silversea

Luxury ship Silver Shadow cruises around the world, including South America.

Dancers and musicians perform at sights including the Tutelar Figures, desert sculptures created by Chilean Artist Diaz Fleming, near Arica, Chile.

LIMA, PERU — Some people think cruise and see the sunny Caribbean. But in reality, cruise ships sail around the world, including to the increasingly popular destination of South America.

From fall to spring, on a variety of lines, you can cruise the Atlantic or Pacific sides of South America, or both if you go around Cape Horn. Many of the cruises are for two weeks or more — it's a big continent. Destinations are as diverse as desert, rainforest and glaciers. The cruises are offered fall to spring.

I got a taste of the desert on a Pacific cruise from Lima, Peru, to Valparaiso (the port for Santiago), Chile. Port calls included three northern Chile ports — Arica, Iquique and Antofagasta — all places with low-key sights and only minimal visits from cruise ships.

My home away from home for a week in the Pacific was Silversea Cruises' gorgeous luxury ship Silver Shadow.

Now granted, you could probably be happy cruising anywhere on a contemporary ship with Italian-inspired decor, spacious suites, gourmet cuisine, complimentary booze and top-notch service. Shortly after I arrived onboard two apron-wearing attendants showed up at my suite door bearing a tray with a selection of toiletries from which I could choose, including Bvlgari and Acqua Di Parma. Very la di da.

But my goal was to sample South America. Fortunately, cultural experiences were close at hand. Shipboard, pisco sours - the popular Peruvian libation — were on offer at the bars and some local dishes, including delicious roasted chicken and Chilean sea bass with tomatillo sauce, were featured on menus. A music and dance troupe in colorful costumes came onboard one evening in Chile, capping off a fantastic poolside barbecue (there was even a whole roasted pig).

Dancers and musicians greeted us at some of the ports and sights as well, enthusiastically performing folk numbers. This welcoming atmosphere included a TV crew, who met the ship in Valparaiso to interview passengers about what it's like to cruise in Chile — where we were the first ship to visit this season.

Of the most interest to me were shore excursions to the Chilean desert to see the geoglyphs. These hillside renderings were left by pre-Incan people between 1000 and 1400, and no one knows why. Were they ancient advertising? Maps to the sea? Signs meant to be seen from UFOs in outer space?

Some — like those near the sleepy port city of Arica — were created by piling rocks into patterns. Others were carved into rocky hillsides, which is the case with the Pintagos Geoglyphs, located about 1.5 hours into the desert from Iquique.

Wandering a hot path past the dry earth at Pintagos, where more than 300 geoglyphs — representing people, animals and geometric shapes — cover slopes leading to a dried-out lake, I embraced the UFO theory. How else to explain what look like directional arrows and squares that could represent landing pads?

At all the ports in Chile you could wander around and talk with friendly locals — if you could speak a little Spanish.

Taking advantage of Silversea's complimentary shuttle to the city center in Antofagasta, Chile's third largest city, my traveling companion and I had a lovely conversation about the weather (my Spanish is limited) with a senior couple sitting on a bench in the pleasant main square, under a Big Ben-style clock.

Later, we wandered past the stalls of a food market and chatted with shopkeepers on the main shopping street — a chance to feel part of the local scene, even if only for a few hours. Before boarding the ship, we picked up a couple of bottles of Chilean wine to bring home (nice wine too, and only $10 a bottle).

As great as it is to visit ports of call, a couple of days at sea afforded the opportunity to enjoy the ship. And the 380-passenger Silver Shadow proved to be a convivial place. A political science professor talked about major events in Chile's history for those seeking intellectual stimulation.

Other activities included a cooking demonstration and fitness classes. Some passengers played bridge, and others worked out in fitness classes or lounged in the sun — the ship's spa also offered a host of relaxation treatments.

For me, the daily trivia contest, with teams energetically competing, was good fun.

Fares for Silversea's South American sailings are from $4,301 per person, for an eight — day itinerary. For more information on Silversea, log on to www.silversea.com or call your travel agent.

Lima's Enchantments

Many people fly through Lima on their way to Machu Picchu, the famous "Lost City of the Incas," which is several hours from the city — you'd have to plan at least a two-day trip. But seeing the highlights of Lima on a quick tour I was impressed that the city is surprisingly pretty, especially along the Pacific coast and in the colonial center.

The "City of Kings" was founded in 1535, after Spaniards conquered the Inca civilization, and today is home to more than 7.6 million, or about one-third the Peruvian population.

Lima boasts lovely colonial buildings and baroque churches at the main square, Plaza Mayor. A stop at a market provided the best souvenirs of the trip — hand-knitted Peruvian hats and gloves for $3.

The Silver Shadow overnights in Lima and a full-day shore excursion ($175) offered a chance to see the pre-Inca Pachacamac ruins, about 20 miles into the desert from Lima. Temples and other structures, at this religious center, date from 200 to 1533.

The excursion also included a visit to Hacienda Mamacona, a family owned ranch where Peruvian Paso horses are bred. Costumed riders on horseback showed how elegant these horses are — not only are they beautiful to look at, but they have a magnificently precise gait. A team of folk dancers showed off their moves as well, while we sipped pisco sours and enjoyed a buffet that included tamales and other Peruvian dishes. And there was even a chance to ride on a horse for a few minutes.

Obituaries

Charles H. Jones III

Former Cohasset resident

Charles H. Jones III, 79, husband of Jessie D. "Jill" Jones of Auburn, Maine, died Dec. 15, 2008 in the Central Maine Medical Center, Lewiston, Maine following his brief illness.

Born in Boston, he was the son of the late Charles H. and Margaret (French) Jones. He was raised in Cohasset and was a 1948 graduate of Milton Academy. He continued his education at Dartmouth, graduating in 1952 after a five-year program that included a MBA from the Tuck School.

He enlisted in the U.S. Army, and was stationed in Berlin during the early years of the Cold War. He served as the editor of the military newspaper "The Berlin Observer." Following his honorable discharge he returned to Cohasset and worked for Bostonian Shoe, the company his grandfather had founded.

Moving to Monmouth, Maine in the early 1970s, he continued his involvement with Bostonian, supervising the Maine factories. In his retirement, he enjoyed his next 10 years of employment crafting furniture at Thomas Moser Cabinetmakers of Auburn. He will be remembered as the creator of the Cherry Chuggers, miniature wooden cars sold at Moser showrooms.

As a young man, he was an avid blue water sailor, a longtime member of the Cohasset Yacht Club and the Blue Water Sailing Club. Following his relocation to Maine, he enjoyed skiing, both downhill and cross country. His passion for being on the water evolved into the sport of sea kayaking. He enjoyed paddling amongst the islands of mid-coastal Maine, with many trips to Matinicus and Monhegan, which became yearly traditions with friends and family. He was an enthusiastic and competitive kayak racer, competing as recently as this July's Moxie Festival Androscoggin River Race.

In addition to his wife of 34 years, he leaves his son, Daniel C. Jones and his wife Karen of Hanover, daughters Deborah Jones Cerretani and her husband Craig of Ipswich, and Leslie Gutiérrez-Jones and her husband Carl of Santa Barbara, Calif.; six granddaughters, Samantha and Caroline Jones of Hanover, Kendra and Marissa Cerretani of Ipswich, and Marina and Natalia Gutie'rrez-Jones of Santa Barbara. He is also survived by his former wife, Joan Jones of Plymouth. He was the brother of the late Leslie Jones Jackson, formerly of West Falmouth.

A memorial paddle will be held this summer on the waters of Penobscot Bay. Arrangements under the direction of the Whittier-Porter Funeral Home of Ipswich. Those who wish may make memorial contributions in his name to the Maine Island Trail Association, 58 Fore Street, Suite 30-3, Portland, ME 04101.

Pamela Jean Keefe

Internationally known home decorator

Pamela Jean (Stillwell) Keefe of Scituate died Dec. 29, 2008, surrounded by her family.

Mrs. Keefe fought a long battle with appendicle cancer under the care of the staff at Dana-Farber Cancer Center, University of Pittsburgh Medical Center and South Shore Hospital. Her husband, David, was her primary caregiver and life long companion.

Mrs. Keefe was born in Cloquet, Minn., the daughter of Harris Stillwell of Cloquet, Minn., and the late Jean Eleanor Stillwell. She graduated as a National Merit Scholar from Cloquet High School, and received a bachelor of art's degree in education from Gustavus Adolphus College in St. Peter, Minn., in 1971, and lettered on the varsity tennis team all four years. She continued to be a top amateur tennis player in women's leagues in Palos Verde, Calif., and Cohasset.

She married David Keefe of Quincy in 1971. The couple met at the South Shore YMCA Camps in Sandwich during the summer of 1969. It was the beginning of a life adventure of almost 40 years.

Mrs. Keefe enjoyed each day of living life. She and her family moved 30 times, establishing households all over the United States, Budapest, Hong Kong, Warsaw and Americana, Brazil. For the past 20 years, Mrs. Keefe and her family maintained their homes in Cohasset and Scituate. She was a world-class home decorator and was internationally recognized for creating a comfortable and classy home environment.

Her proudest achievement was the success of her family. Her constant coaching of their life decisions and pursuit of a clear path of living life to the fullest was famous in her family circle. Family meals and vacations were her favorite events allowing time for her to review the events of the day and praise and coach her children. Pamela and David celebrated their 37th wedding anniversary on Dec. 18, and Mrs. Keefe enjoyed a wonderful Christmas surrounded by her family.

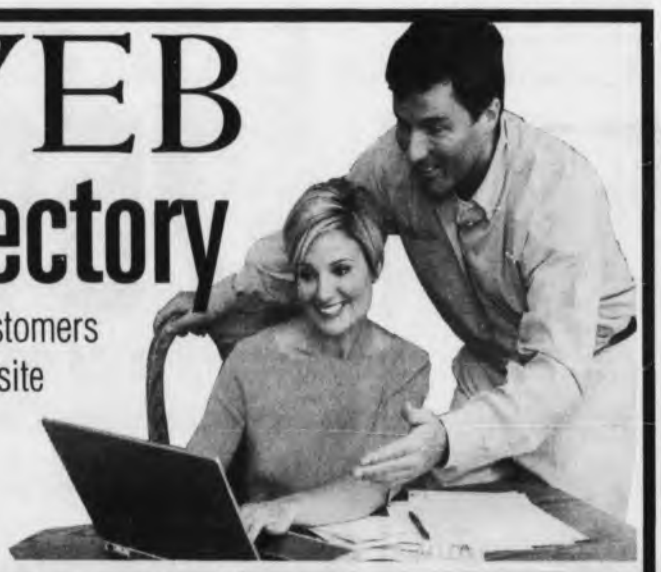
In addition to her father, Harris Stillwell and his wife, Marge, she leaves her husband, David Keefe; her children, Matthew and his partner, Alexandra Smith, of Salt Lake City, Utah, Benjamin and his wife, Nora (Lonborg), of Scituate, Emily Howell and her husband, Glenn (Bo), and their daughter, Hailey Jean, of Lexington, Ky.; her sister, Linda Rue and her husband, Dr. Paul Rue, of Minneapolis, Minn.; her nieces, Dr. Eden Rue Scholin and her husband, Christopher, and their sons, Oscar and Forrest, and Jessica Kesti, and her husband, Gary, and their eight children, of Flagstaff, Ariz.; and her nephew, Dr. John Rue and his wife, Beth, and their children Milo, Mattie and Meredith of Annapolis, Md.

She was the mother of the late Mary Melissa Keefe, and the sister of the late Sue Ann Johnson.

Services will be held at 11 a.m., on Saturday, Jan. 3, at First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church, 23 North Main St, Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to Pamela's Place, Pamela Jean Keefe Center for Creative Achievement, Camp Hayward, Sandwich, MA 02563 or Friends of Scituate Animal Shelter, P.O. Box 823, Scituate, MA 02066.

Please email editor, Mary Ford



The Mariner experienced computer problems on Tuesday which essentially deleted hundreds of editors' and reporters' email accounts. The good news is that email has been restored; the bad news is all the address books were lost.

All email in our "in boxes" was also lost. That means we could not update the worship guide this week.

Please send Mary Ford an email at: mford@cnc.com so she can rebuild her email address book.

SALOME'S STARSFOR RELEASE WEEK OF DEC. 29, 2008

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might be busier than you had expected right now. But between the socializing rounds and the workplace tasks, there are opportunities for special moments with that certain someone.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your creative approach leads to a quicker-than-expected solution to a workplace problem. Now you can devote more time to that proposal you hope to introduce by midmonth.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Technological glitches create problems early on. But by midweek, all runs smoothly once again, and you're well and truly on your way toward meeting all your deadlines.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your energy levels are high, and you feel you can handle everything that comes along. But try to take a break from your hectic pace for some quiet time with someone close to you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Before you pounce on that shiny new opportunity, take more time to check it out to see how much substance actually lies beneath all that glitter. A family member has important news.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A personal situation you thought was resolved resurfaces, thanks to a possibly well-intentioned move that went awry. Deal with it as soon as possible. Accept the help of a trusted friend.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) That goal you set way back when is finally in sight. Maintain your focus on achieving it, and don't allow yourself to be distracted by unimportant demands for your attention.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A temperamental flare-up creates negative feelings that need to be dealt with immediately. But things once again go well after the apologies are made and hurt feelings are soothed.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) An early impulsive act causes confusion. But all is smoothed over once explanations are made. Expect a friend or family member to ask for your kind and always wise advice.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might have to do some juggling of your priorities, as a personal matter appears to require more time and attention. Put your pride aside and accept help from those who offer it.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your creative aspect is strong. Not only does it help you accomplish your goals, but it also inspires others. This could lead to a potentially rewarding collaboration opportunity.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Be careful about making major decisions when you're not really committed to them. And resist any pressure to do otherwise. Better to delay action until all doubts are resolved.

BORN THIS WEEK: You set goals and are rarely distracted by any attempt to move you off the path you've chosen to reach them.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

What's happening on the South Shore

JANUARY 1-9, 2009

Calendar of events

Thursday, Jan. 1

The Friends of the Boston Harbor Islands are sponsoring the annual Seafarers' Island Holiday on New Year's Day Jan. 1, 2009. There will be two separate ticketed cruises from Rowes Wharf Water Transport to Spectacle Island: from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., and from noon to 4 p.m. Rowes Wharf is in downtown Boston (by the Boston Harbor Hotel, Atlantic Avenue). The closest T stations are South Station (Red Line), Courthouse (Silver Line), and Aquarium (Blue Line). The trip goes regardless of the weather, with no rain date. Since space is limited, advance paid reservations are strongly recommended. Subject to availability, tickets can be bought on the day (cash only please) from 10 a.m. at Rowes Wharf. The cost is $25 for adults, $22 for seniors (65+) and FRIENDS members, $17 for children (3 – 12), $15 for FBHI members' children, and babies travel for free (but still need a ticket). For more information about FRIENDS activities visit www.fbhi.org or call 781-740-4290.

Quotes of note in 2008

"This board takes our responsibility very seriously. Believe me, we are very serious and we are very thorough and we are nowhere near done."
— Al Moore, Planning Board chairman after receiving criticism from audience members that the Planning Board was going too easy on the wind turbine applicant

"The need is great, there is the oil situation, the economic situation, it's making it more difficult for everyone."
— Vinny Harte, executive director of Wellspring Multi-Service Center. In response to economic crisis and to reach as many as possible, Wellspring held office hours in Cohasset Town Hall during December.

"It's going to be tough year, a tough budget year…we're going to have a lot of tough decisions to make."
— Rick Flynn, School Committee Chairman on the upcoming fiscal year.

"Both republicans and democrats can look to the fact with great pride…It has been just a short 40 years after civil rights movement and this proves the miracle of American democracy is alive and well."
— Kevin McCarthy, Democratic Town Committee Chairman on Barack Obama's presidential win

"The public needs to be educated."
— Ted Carr, Board of Selectmen Chairman, as the board made its decision to remove all articles related to Treat's Pond from the Special Town Meeting warrant.

"This economic situation is so unique in that it affects all of us, I figured if we got together to brainstorm we might not only discover who was doing what but also might thing creatively about new ways to reach out."
— Margot Critchfield, rector at St. Stephen's Episcopal and member of Cohasset C.A.R.E.S.

"Cohasset was in Cohasset having a marvelous time. We couldn't have written a better script. It was great because of the cast of people, the people of Cohasset were the stars of the show."
— Alain Pinel, member of the Economic Development Committee and primary organizers of Cohasset Day

"This was really our last big hurdle, the next steps to construction are administrative. We're pretty excited. It's been a long journey to this point and we're pretty confident what we built is going to be successful."
— Scott Dale, vice president of development and project manager for Avalon Cohasset. Following an agreement on an on-site wastewater treatment plant with the Water Commission, Avalon should break ground in 2009.

"I was so amazed at the community support of the race. Athletes from Jarrod Shoemaker on down told me how many people were on the course cheering and clapping. It was a great day for Cohasset."
— Bill Burnett, Cohasset Triathlon race director.

"The power of the human spirit is most inspiring."
— Jerry White, Cohasset native, author and founder of Survivor Corps

"That's 32 years [Carousel Antiques] has been there. It's another icon, like Cohasset Hardware, gone. These are things that have been in town for a long time."
David Bigley, owner of All the Best Natural Foods on the changing landscape of Cohasset Village

"People admire high school seniors because of their atti tude, the unique and powerfully hopeful perspective we have towards our future. Right now, we believe anything is possible."
— Sarah Brown, CHS Class of 2008 valedictorian

"It just goes to show you every vote counts."
— Wayne Sawchuk, after narrowly edging out Jim Dow for a seat on the Sewer Commission

"It hit me, I need to finish the race for him. It just had to be done."
— Karen Lyons, the widow of fallen triathlete Joe Lyons on her decision to race in the second annual Cohasset Triathlon and raise money for JDRF.

"None of the routes are good, but they are the only ones that exist."
— Gary Vanderweil, former Board of Selectmen chairman, speaking on the Treat's Pond issue.

"In all those years we have not moved more than a mile away since we first came. We're a townie family."
— Merle Brown, 2008 Citizen of the Year

"Something in this Town Hall is haunted."
— Matt Kondracki, founder of Enfield Paranormal Society

"I don't think the contractor appreciates the amount of ledge."
— Kevin McRae, resident engineer for the Little Harbor sewer project.

Ripley Road project stalled

Application withdrawn from ZBA

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The proposed seven-unit condominium development at 25 Ripley Road, which includes two affordable housing units, is going through the paces.

This week, Cohasset resident, property owner and developer, Will Charles, met with the Board of Selectmen and was scheduled to meet Tuesday to begin the project's Zoning Board of Appeals comprehensive permit application process.

Following Monday night's meeting, the applicant withdrew his comprehensive permit application for the project. The application was withdrawn "without prejudice," which means the project is not penalized and can file again with no time restraints.

On Tuesday morning, Robert Barrett, the attorney representing Will Charles, submitted a letter to the ZBA withdrawing the application.

"Our intentions are to meet with the boards advisory to the ZBA and the abutters and resubmit a more complete application at a later date," stated Barrett in the letter.

In a phone interview, Charles said he plans to re-file with the ZBA within 30 days.

"We want to show up in front of the ZBA and have all our ducks in a row,"

Land buy on the table

Morrissey property is up for sale

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The town has the opportunity to bring approximately 12 acres located behind Town Hall from private ownership into protected conservation status.

But, if they will remains to be seen.

Representatives from the Trust for Public Land and members of the Open Space Committee came before the Selectmen to offer a preliminary presentation on the parcel known as the Morrissey property and its viability and desirability for the town.

Open Space Committee member Sandra Durant said the property is in an ideal location and would increase access and use of other conservation properties.

"At this point in time it is a golden opportunity to preserve this property," said Durant. The 12-acre property includes two access points: one from the Town Hall parking lot and the other from Beach Street.

Durant said the property, which is mostly wooded, has expansive views of Little Harbor and the ocean as well as some interesting ledge outcroppings. The property is also home to wildlife from the red-tailed hawk to deer to coyotes.

"At this point in time it is a golden opportunity to preserve this property."
— Sandra Durant, Open Space Committee

Making the land even more attractive is it abuts or is in proximity to several of the Cohasset Conservation Trust properties (Great Brewster Woods, Deans Meadow, Sumner Smith Overlook, Blake property) as well as some undeveloped town parcels.

Project manager Chris LaPointe of the Trust for Public Land said the links to existing conservation land made it more desirable for his organization to get involved.

And the survey says...

Open space survey available online

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

What better way to find out what the town is looking for from open space and recreation than to ask them.

That's what the Open Space Committee has set out to do with a short survey to gauge how the town uses current open space and recreation lands and what they would like to see in the future.

"The survey is the key to where we go with the Open Space and Recreation plan," said Recreation Director Ted Carroll and member of the Open Space Committee.

The results of the survey will be used during the development of the town's Open Space and Recreation Plan, which was allocated $25,000 of community preservation funding at November's Special Town Meeting. The Open Space Committee is currently reviewing and ranking a total of six proposals that have come from consulting firms. Carroll expects a firm to be chosen by the time all the surveys are due, Feb. 1.

The Open Space Committee has set an ambitious goal to receive back 20 to 25 percent of the households (about 640) to respond. The surveys were sent out to 3200 households with the quarterly tax bills, but Carroll is hoping many will take advantage of the online version of the survey.

"It is so easy to do online now," said Carroll, adding the whole survey takes less than 10 minutes to complete either way it is completed. The online version also makes compiling the data easier.

The survey is an integral and required part of the open space and recreation plan. The past two plans, one completed in 1996 and the other in 2002 both included surveys. In 1996, 10 percent of the households returned the surveys and in 2002, 16 percent returned them. About three dozen surveys have been returned as of earlier this week.

The town-wide open space and recreation plan is needed to apply for a wide variety of federal and state grants. The previous open space plan was drafted in 2002 and expired in 2006. The past two plans were completed solely by the Computer problems with emails

The Cohasset Mariner and Gatehouse newspapers experienced computer problems last week, which essentially deleted hundreds of editors' and reporters' email accounts including emails in their inboxes.

The good news is that (as of Monday) email has been restored; the bad news is all the address books were lost as well as emails sitting in inboxes.

If readers sent an email during the past TWO-THREE weeks, it may have been lost. Please send it again.

Also, please send Mary Ford an email at: mford@cnc.com so she can rebuild her email address book.

Free legal clinics

The Bar Association of Norfolk County will sponsor free evening legal clinics as a public service to the community. A panel of attorneys experienced in all areas of the law will be available for a one-on-one consultation to discuss legal questions. All consultations are confidential.

Legal clinics will take place from 6 to 8 p.m., on Tuesday evenings, in Quincy District Court as follows: April 7, May 19, June 2, July 7 and Aug. 4.

For more information, call Adrienne C. Clark, Bar Association of Norfolk County, at 617-471-9693.

Celebrating National Tax Advice Day

In honor of National Tax Advice Day, the Cohasset office of H&R Block is having an open house. Come by any time between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m., on Thursday, Jan. 15, and a tax professional will answer questions about the new tax law changes for 2009. People can enter a raffle to win a free Second Look Review of tax returns.

The Cohasset office is at Tedeschi Plaza, 790 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy. For information, call 781-383-6454.

Election Update

McNabb first to pull papers

John McNabb is seeking his fourth term as a water commissioner and has served on the board since 1997.

It could have been the foul wintry mix weather we were having, but the Town Clerk's office was not flooded with hopeful candidates on Wednesday morning when nomination papers became available.

It was a slow start to the 2009 election season when just one potential candidate — John McNabb for the Water Commission — pulled papers.

McNabb is seeking his fourth term as a water commissioner and has served on the board since 1997.

McNabb has also served on several other town boards and committees, including the Board of Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, the Committee to Survey the Structure and Functions of Town Government, the Stormwater Committee, the Water Resources Protection Committee, and the Recycling Committee. For seven years, 1998-2005, he served as one of Cohasset's representatives to the South Shore Recycling Cooperative, which he co-founded.

Positions available for the 2009 town election include: Selectmen — one three-year position; School Committee – two three-year positions; Trustees Paul Pratt Memorial Library – three three-year positions; Assessor— one three-year position; Board of Health — one three-year position; Planning Board — one for five-year position; Recreation Commission – one five-year position; Sewer Commission – one three-year position; and Water Commission — one three-year position.

The last day to take out nomination papers is Thursday, Feb. 12. In order to hold a position you must be registered voter of the town. In order to hold an elected office, you must be a registered voter of the town. It is important to note that you are not running for office until you take out papers and the Board of Registrars certifies your signatures.

Annual Town Election will be held on Saturday, April 4, 2009.

Snow budget runs into the red

Deficits in the snow budget are typically made up with free cash and/or the Advisory Committee's reserve fund, Griffin said.

It's only the start of January, but old man winter has already brought several bouts of snow and ice to the South Shore. With last week's New Year's Eve storm and Monday's ice storm, Town Manager Bill Griffin said the town would likely exceed its $76,000 appropriation when all those bills come in.

Last winter, the town spent nearly double what was appropriated. During fiscal 2008, there was a $76,000 appropriation and $74,864 above and beyond that was spent for a total of $150,862.

Deficits in the snow budget are typically made up with free cash and/or the Advisory Committee's reserve fund, Griffin said.

For Cohasset Public Schools, there has been no snow days as of yet. This week, there was a two-hour opening delay and in December there was an early dismissal due to a predicted snowstorm.

Briefly

Poles re-located for TOD

After a short public hearing, the Board of Selectmen approved the re-location of two telephone pole on Route 3A (Chief Justice Cushing Highway). The re-location of the poles is to accommodate the driveway for the under construction Old Colony Square shopping plaza, Cohasset's only transit-oriented district development.

A streetlight will also be placed nearby, at the exit from the MBTA commuter rail station. An application for the light is currently before Mass Highway (Route 3A is state highway).

Police Beat

Two taken into protective custody

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

• Police received a call from a concerned resident at 12:57 p.m. on Monday (Dec. 29) that an unknown person had entered the home and removed some checks. He described the subject as wearing a blue sweatshirt and having sunglasses on top of his baldhead.

As it turned out the "unknown person" was a 38-year-old Hull man who was staying with a friend in another unit at the same duplex. Police said the Hull man was inebriated, got confused and entered the wrong unit.

"He was in a state of drunkenness and went into the wrong apartment, stumbled out and walked away," Chief James Hussey said. "He did not take anything."

The victim had not realized that his wife had taken the checks to the bank.

Police located the man and took him into protective custody.

• Police were dispatched at 1:15 a.m. on Sunday (Jan. 4) to an address on North Main Street on a report of a drunk man who had come to the house seeking assistance. Police responded and took the 52-year-old Hull man, who smelled of alcohol, into protective custody.

Summons

An officer conducting traffic enforcement along Route 3A by Beechwood Street saw a red Ford SUV run the red light and pulled the car over. The operator had an expired Massachusetts license and a California license that he did not have in his possession.

Police said the 28-year-old Cohasset man had moved back to Massachusetts from California several months ago. Residents have 30 days to obtain a Massachusetts driver's license, Chief Hussey said.

He is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation and for failure to stop for a red light, police said.

The incident occurred at 5:17 p.m. on Tuesday (Dec. 30).

Metal detector

A Cohasset mother called police at 3:34 a.m. on Thursday (Jan. 1) explaining that her daughter had lost her cell phone in the snow and needed a metal detector to search for it. She was told that police do not have a metal detector. Chief Hussey said the woman and her daughter could fill out a lost property report if they have not located the cell phone.

Vandalism

Police are investigating a report from a condominium complex in town that a former tenant allegedly left the basement doors open on purpose causing the pipes to freeze resulting in water damage at the complex. There have been disputes between the former tenant, current tenants and landlord, police said.

It is also claimed that the heat control device was intentionally removed from the former tenant's unit.

Detectives responded to gather evidence, police said. The incident was reported on Jan. 1 and remains under investigation.

Unsafe ice

A caller reported kids skating on what appeared to be unsafe ice off Oak Street last Friday (Jan. 2). An officer responded and advised the skaters of the danger. However, the skaters – who were older teenagers – said they would stay near the edge and not venture out. Chief Hussey said if the officer felt the situation was dangerous and the skaters were younger, the officer could have ordered them off the ice.

MV accident

A 2001 Dodge, owned and operated by a Cohasset man, was traveling on snow-covered Cedar Street at 7:36 p.m. last Friday (Jan. 2). The Dodge approached a bend and went straight, hitting a tree. There was front-end damage to the car. The operator was checked out by the ambulance but did not have any reported injuries. The car was towed.

Snowball throwing

Chief Hussey warns kids not to throw snowballs at cars. The snowball can distract the driver and cause an accident injuring the occupants and possibly occupants of another car, should a collision occur. Police have been getting calls from motorists complaining about snowballs being thrown at vehicles.

Chief Hussey also asks parents to talk to their kids about not throwing snowballs at cars.

Winter parking

Winter parking regulations are in effect through April 1.

No overnight on-street parking between the hours of 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. is allowed during winter parking regulations.

Violators are subject to a fine of $25.

said Charles. He intends to meet with all relevant parties from the neighbors to the fire chief to the Board of Health before re-filing.

"We want to take everyone's concerns very seriously, re-group as a team and get the questions answered," said Charles.

The decision was made following a discussion with the Board of Selectmen, which raised similar questions that have been heard previously before the board. Addressing the neighbors' continued concerns about the project was foremost in the Selectmen's mind.

"You've got to satisfy the neighbors, that's number one for me," said Selectman Ralph Dormitzer.

Dormitzer also saw three issues that could present difficulty for the project: the septic system, the stormwater bylaw, and parking.

All the Selectmen echoed that the neighbors' concerns had to be addressed to the best of the applicant's ability. Screening, parking, economic feasibility and number of units all were brought up as neighborhood issues.

The multi-family complex is proposed to include seven units in the 7,500 square foot building. Five units will be two-bedroom and two will be one-bedroom.

There was some talk of decreasing the number of units in the proposed project, but attorney Barrett said with the two affordable units, there had to be seven condos in order to make the project feasible economically.

Neil Murphy of Neil Murphy Associates is consulting for the project on the various engineering issues from septic to parking to stormwater. He said as far as a septic system is concerned the soil was "perfect" and a large system could be situated on the lot and an on-site drainage with underground chambers could resolve the stormwater runoff issues.

"We want to take everyone's concerns very seriously, re-group as a team and get the questions answered."
— Will Charles, property owner

"The project makes a lot of sense, it's the politics that make the project difficult," said Murphy.

Because the project is not a local initiative project, commonly called a "friendly 40-B," the Housing Partnership Committee has no formal role in the project. But, Housing Partnership co-chairman Tom Callahan said the committee was willing to work with Charles to address their concerns with the project. Their concerns included the preliminary financials for the project including the price of the affordable units (too high) and the cost of construction (too low).

"This is the right project at the right site but we do have some concerns," said Callahan.

The Board of Selectmen felt it was premature to give their support to the project.

"I don't think we are in a position to make any decisions tonight," said Selectman Karen Quigley.

Charles expressed some frustration in the lack of a resolution from the Board of Selectmen.

"This is not a brand new project...I feel like you have a sense of the what this project is like, it is just a matter of making a decision," said Charles.

The project is being proposed under Chapter 40B, the state's affordable housing law.

Under Chapter 40B, the zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20-25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns that are under the 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards, like Cohasset, are vulnerable to 40-B projects. Cohasset currently has less than three percent of its housing stock deemed affordable by the state.

In November, the project received preliminary approval from the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency ("Mass Housing"), an independent, quasi-public agency charged with providing financing for affordable housing in Massachusetts. The approval allows the project to move forward and apply for a local comprehensive permit.

The proposal to build affordable housing units at 25 Ripley Road has a history. In early 2007, the Housing Partnership had plans to turn the single-family house into several affordable units. When the Partnership was met with significant neighborhood opposition, they abandoned the project in favor of pursuing other projects.

And the survey says...

Open Space Committee and were about 50 pages long.

The survey begins with basic household information, then asks more specifics about conservation, open space and recreational opportunities — how they are used, satisfaction with current programs/facilities and goals for the town.

There are also three open response questions where residents can get specific about town characteristics they treasure, challenges/threats for the town and a completely open space for additional comments.

Already, Carroll said, the surveys have indicated the need for additional bicycle and pedestrian paths and boat moorings.

"The survey is the key to where we go with the Open Space and Recreation plan."
— Ted Carroll, Recreation Director

Many of the goals established in the previous open space plans will likely remain in focus for the next five years, Carroll said. Objectives like controlling inappropriate growth, ensuring a safe and adequate water supply, preserving the scenic beauty and local character, increase resident waterfront access, and improve maintenance of current open space and recreational assets are as relevant in 2009 as they were in 2002.

The survey can be completed in one of two ways. For the first time the survey is available online with links from the town's homepage (www.townofcohasset.com) and the Recreation website (www.cohassetrec.com). A hard copy of the 13-question survey was distributed with the tax bills mailed earlier this week. All surveys must be returned by Feb. 1.

Morrissey property up for sale

"It is a unique opportunity to enhance property that's there already," said Debbie Shadd, who was appointed to the Open Space Committee earlier in the meeting and serves as the president of the Cohasset Conservation Trust.

The Trust for Public Land (TPL) is a national, nonprofit, land conservation organization founded in 1975 that conserves land for people to enjoy as parks, community gardens, historic sites, rural lands, and other natural places, ensuring livable communities for generations to come.

LaPointe said the TPL works with cities and towns to identify potential space for open space and/or recreational purposes, then serves as a partner and facilitator in the purchase of the land. The TPL will help negotiate the land purchase, do environmental assessments and help to identify funding sources at no cost to the municipality.

Preliminary discussion has been ongoing between the TPL and the property's realtor. The owner of the property is Ellen Morrissey of 488 Jerusalem Road. The TPL did not want to continue the process without getting the town on board.

The primary goal of the preliminary meeting was to gauge the Selectmen's interest and support of the land purchase.

The land has been up for sale several times over the past decade and for a time was considered for a three-building senior housing development. If the town purchases the land, it will come off the town's tax rolls.

Knowing a land purchase would need Town Meeting approval, the TPL was not looking for a commitment, rather a vote of support and interest in the effort.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said the board would need a little more specifics before offering their support.

After the short informational presentation, the Board of Selectmen went into executive session with the representatives from the Trust for Public Land and the Open Space Committee for the purposes of considering the purchase, exchange, lease or value of real property.

It is expected the Selectmen will revisit the proposal at their meeting next Monday.

Schools buckle down

Salaries, state aid still unknown

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The School Committee got an in-depth look at each school's budget on Wednesday night. The school principals and the high school athletic director paid a visit to share what they have done to tighten their belts without sacrificing the quality of education.

"This is where the rubber meets the road, this is the detail," said Superintendent of Schools. Denise Walsh. "Each year it is getting tighter and tighter…by the end of the night you're going to see there is no wiggle room."

The bottom line of the budget had not changed since the budget overview presentation was given in December. The preliminary fiscal 2010 budget is $14,833,172, an increase of 3.6 percent, or $516,775, over this year's budget.

There are several major "missing" pieces at this preliminary stage in budget development. The largest piece is contracts with several unions have not been reached. With nearly 75 percent of the budget going toward salaries of teachers and staff, it is a significant unknown. Only step and column increases are included in the budget. State aid numbers have yet to be revealed; the governor's budget is expected by the end of January.

The three building principals and Athletic Director Ron Ford were on hand to present the budget for each school. Despite the small increases in funding over last year (and, in some cases, reductions), all three principals said they were satisfied with the budget would move their school forward.

Osgood School Principal Janet Sheehan started off by saying the curriculum renewal efforts made over the past few years translated to less of a need for new materials (textbooks, instructional tools) for this budget season.

"We have the curriculum materials and assessment tools for next year," said Sheehan.

There were no new staff positions. In fact, one teacher will move up to second grade to accommodate a particularly large class.

Across all schools, there is an increase use of offsets (kindergarten grant, Medicaid reimbursement) in the budget were highlighted. For Osgood, a total of $422,000 in offsets are utilized including an $87,000 Metco grant, $9,000 facilities use, $238,900 full day kindergarten grant, $52,300 kindergarten grant and $43,353 from the Medicaid reimbursement.

In total, the school budget is taking a $133,002 offset from Medicaid reimbursement to pay the health services budget at each school building (school nurses' salaries and supplies). Walsh noted this is a one-time offset the schools have accumulated over a period of time.

The bottom line for Osgood was a decrease 0.5 percent over last year's numbers.

"I do believe we will be adequately equipped as we look forward to next school year," said Sheehan.

At Deer Hill next year, they will be welcoming an increase of 25 students, necessitating an additional third grade classroom. Deer Hill Principal Jennifer deChiara highlighted the increase use of the educational co-operative to buy classroom supplies as a cost saver.

The only "extra" in the Deer Hill budget is the purchase of new fourth and fifth grade social studies text. The current edition does not reflect current curriculum standards.

The bottom line for Deer Hill was an increase of 4.3 percent over last year's budget, mostly due to an additional teacher.

School Committee vice chairman Alfred Slanetz noted there seemed to be a "creeping up" in class size. In grade three there will be an average of 24 kids in a class. Walsh said the incoming third grade class was a "bubble" and the class numbers are lower for the lower grades.

Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini reported there is a relative stable population at the middle and high schools therefore no additional staffing is needed.

"We have pretty flat numbers," said Antolini. The Middle School showed a budget increase of 3.4 percent and the high school, a decrease of 0.9 percent.

The high school athletic budget showed the biggest decrease over the previous year due to an increase use in offsets. Over 50 percent of the total athletic budget is set to come from offsets (student athlete fees, gate receipts). Athletic Director Ron Ford said the increase in participation has "tipped the scale" in the budget, not because of an increase in user fees. The total decrease from last year's budget was 16.3 percent.

Despite the lean budget, School Committee member Steve Fusco encouraged the school principals to keep their "wish list" items on hand in case some funding does become available.

"I'm just concerned what is being left on the table trying to be fiscally responsible," said Fusco. Antolini said the greatest need for all the schools was technology.

"So much of it now, particularly at the high school level, is more and more learning is happening on the spot," said Antolini. Creating the infrastructure to allow real time learning was something that was on the wish list.

"I don't get the sense there is a ton we're leaving on the table in terms of academic achievement," said Chairman Rick Flynn. "Given the type of year we're having, with this as a jumping off point, we're in pretty good shape."

One of the places where funding could become available is the schools are currently budgeting for $70,000 to lease-to-purchase two new school buses and a special education van. Although school buses typically come under capital expenditures, the school administration felt uncomfortable not having a plan in place. The schools will go before the Capital Budget Committee on Feb. 4 to discuss the purchasing of school buses.

The School Committee will meet with the Board of Selectmen and the Advisory Committee next Wednesday, Jan. 14. The final School Committee budget certification will be in early March.

Filing for real estate tax exemptions

The Cohasset Board of Assessors Office is currently accepting applications for Fiscal Year 2009 real estate tax exemptions. The qualification date is July 1, 2008. Applicants who have filed tax exemption forms since July 1, 2008 are not required to file again. The deadline for filing is March 29, 2009. The following exemptions are available:

Persons Over 70 Years Of Age – $2,000 off

Clause 41C – if annual income is less that $18,000 (single person) or $23,000 (married couple), and the value of your assets, excluding your home, is less than $33,000 (single person) or $35,000 (married couple) and must own and occupy for previous 10 years.

Surviving Spouse (no age requirement) – $350 off

Clause 17D – also minors of deceased parents and persons over 70 years of age. There is no limit on income, but the value of your assets, excluding your home, must not exceed $40,000 and must own and occupy for previous five years.

Disabled Veterans – $800 Off

Clause 22 – At least 10 percent disabled as determined by the Veterans Administration. Purple Heart Award recipients qualify, as well as Congressional Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service Cross, Air Force Cross, Navy Cross. Other exemptions are available for more seriously disabled veterans and paraplegic veterans. Veteran must have been a Mass resident six months prior to enlisting OR live in Massachusetts for five consecutive years.

Blind Persons – $875 Off

Clause 37 – Must be registered with Massachusetts Commission for the Blind.

Tax Deferral – All or part of the tax

Clause 41A - Applicant must be 65 years of age as of July 1, 2008 with income less than $40,000 and must have resided in Massachusetts for the preceding 10 years. All or part of the tax may be deferred. (Effective 2007 the interest rate has been reduced to 4 percent)

Exemption forms are available at the Assessors' Office in the Town Hall. For additional information, or if you would like to inquire if you have already filed, please contact the Assessors' Office at 781-383-4114.

BRIEFLY

Two appointed to Open Space Committee

The Board of Selectmen appointed two long-time supporters of the preservation of conservation land in Cohasset to the recently revitalized Open Space Committee.

The current Cohasset Conservation Trust (a local non-profit organization dedicated to the conservation and preservation of the natural environment of Cohasset) president Debbie Shadd was appointed.

Dick Avery, who has served on the Weir River Estuary Committee, the Cohasset Land Foundation, the Cohasset Conservation Trust, and Strait's Pond Committee, was also appointed.

Recreation Director Ted Carroll, Sandy Durant and Karen Quigley (as Board of Selectmen liaison) are also part of the board. The Open Space Committee is still in search of a final member. At the meeting they expressed interest in finding someone with a recreation background.

Wind turbine hearing Monday

The third continued public hearing on the proposed Cohasset Heights wind turbine project will be held this coming Monday, Jan. 12 at 7:30p.m.. The discussion is set to include information and data on the potential noise impacts of the development.

The last public hearing was held on Dec. 1, which included discussion the twin turbines' height and shadow flicker impacts on the surrounding areas and lighting.

This will be the first hearing on the turbines since the weather balloons were floated on the proposed site the weekend of December 13, so the Planning Board will likely discuss their response to the demonstration.

Town applying for federal grants

The Town of Cohasset is actively pursing federal grants for the "ready to shovel" projects. The grants are available as part of a federal stimulus package supported by president-elect Barack Obama is meant to generate jobs and get people working again. Board of Selectmen chairman Ted Carr brought the opportunity to the town's attention.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said there is a quick turnaround for the applications which became last Friday and were due this Thursday. Griffin said many projects could be eligible including the turf field at the high school, Town Hall renovation and restoration, the Parker Ave. culvert, and Jerusalem Road repair.

"The project has to be able to move forward very quickly," said Griffin.

We'll make you smile.

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Day Breakfast Jan. 17

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

ENJOY!

Hello Cohasset and Happy New Year to all for 2009! I hope that everyone had a wonderful holiday season and is ready to kick off this year with a positive outlook. The weather has been interesting to say the least and guess what, Spring is only a few months away! Enjoy the Winter as best as you can and try to take part in some of the activities and events mentioned in this weeks column.

MLK BREAKFAST

Please join the Cohasset Clergy and the Diversity Committee in honoring the memory and achievements of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. at Cohasset's 8th annual Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Breakfast. The breakfast will be held on Saturday, Jan. 17 at the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Parish House from 9 to 11 am. A full breakfast will be served from 9 to 10 am followed by an uplifting program honoring the memory of Dr. King. The event has a cost of $5 per person, $15 per family. The featured speaker will be the Honorable Julian T. Houston, retired Associate Justice of the Superior Court of Massachusetts. Judge Houston was born in Richmond, Virginia in 1944 and was educated in the public schools of that city and at the Hotchkiss School in Lakeville, Connecticut. Judge Houston is the author of a novel, "New Boy," published by Houghton Mifflin in 2005. New Boy is a Cohasset Reads Together book choice in January and February along with Slave No More by David Blight. Childcare will be provided. For more information please call Connie Afshar at 781-383- 6006.

JUNIOR GARDENERS

The Junior Gardeners of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset will meet after school Monday, Jan. 12th, in the Deer Hill cafeteria from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m.. Judy Dickstein, past president of the Community Garden Club, will lead the children in a program entitled Reuse, Recycle, and Renew. Parents are welcome to attend.

CYBSA SIGNUPS

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association will hold its annual registration for the upcoming baseball and softball season through Feb. 10. Visit www.CYBSA.net to register online.

Registrations that are completed after Feb. 10 will be charged a $50 per player late registration fee and late registrants will only be placed on a team if space permits, on a first come-first serve basis.

The 2009 registration fee for Baseball and Softball programs is as follows: Junior League Baseball and Softball (ages 13 to 14) $150; Major League Baseball (ages 10 to 12) and Softball Divisions (ages 10 and 12) is $150; the American League Baseball (ages 9-11) and Softball (ages 9-10) is $125; the National League Baseball (ages 6-8) and Softball (ages 7-8) is $100; and the Farm League Instructional Baseball (ages 5-6) and Instructional Softball (ages 5-6) is $75.

Note: There is a Family Maximum charge of $275 per family. All online registrations will be processed at full-fee. If your total fees exceed $275, you will be issued a check for the difference within 30 days of registration. Please be advised that returning players already assigned to Major League teams are still required to register. Please direct any question regarding registration to info@cybsa.net or call Erik Golz at 617-230-2559.

SCIENCE OF MUSIC

Make music from recycled materials as part of the program The Science of Music, Saturday Jan. 17 from 10am – 12 Noon PM at the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell. Come on a musical journey as you explore different types of sounds. Discover how we hear music both man- made and music found in nature.

Make some instruments of your own to take home. We may end the program with a concert! This indoor family program is offered for children ages 5 and above and the cost is $10 members per child/parent pair with a maximum of $20 per family. Non-members are $13 per child/parent pair with a maximum of $26 per family.

Pre-registration and payment is required. For more information contact the South Shore Natural Science Center at 781-659-2559 or view the website www.ssnsc.org. For your convenience, payment may be taken over the phone with a major credit card.

HELPING ANIMALS

Despite weather challenges, Weir River Farm Education Coordinator Meghan Riley and 4-Her Nicholas Ryan hosted a party for food donations to the Scituate Animal Shelter. Instead of a Jan. 1st birthday party, St. Paul School classmates Ashlee Anderson, Sam and Liza DeCaprio, Sophia Hitt, Christine Resca, Aaron Revoir, Mary Elizabeth Ryan, and Coleman Smith provided 75 pounds of dry food, 24 cans, 13 pounds of biscuits, and over 160 chew sticks to the shelter. A large box to hold the donations was decorated by the group with New Year wishes. There was an expression of, "can hardly wait to do this next year"! The Scituate Animal Shelter, currently being built and relocated to 3A, was appreciative and thankful for the kindness extended by these second-graders upon presentation of a very large box filled with food and a poster made in their honor. This was a wonderful piece to include in the column, thank you so much for sharing.

WINTER FUN

The Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum has released the schedule of classes and events for the Winter Wonderland Session. For more information, go to www.ourworldcgdm.org or call 781-383-3198. You may also send an email to info@ourworldcgdm.org.

Beginning tonight, each Friday night will be a fun-filled evening of supper, art projects, movies and playtime along with a variety of surprises for all.

The evenings will be from 5:30-9:30 for ages 2 and up and can be a minimum of 2 hours and up. This will be a whole lot of fun for everyone involved! A variety of classes are also ready to begin next week for all ages and include art, music, drama, science and more.

That is all for this week. Send in all your news no later than Tuesday by 5:00 pm.

WEDDINGS

COURTESY PHOTO

Mr. and Mrs. Matt DiFonzo.

DiFonzo – Sullivan

Adrienne Michelle Sullivan, daughter of Priscilla and Stephen Sullivan of Cohasset and Avon, Conn., married Matthew Scott DiFonzo, son of Maureen and Alan DiFonzo of Hopedale, on Sept. 13, 2008, at St. Anthony Church in Cohasset. The Rev. John Mulvehill celebrated the Nuptial Mass.

Maid of honor for her sister was Kerry Sullivan of South Boston. Serving as bridesmaids were Mary Kate Keyes of South Boston and Renee Kelly of Ipswich. Junior bridesmaids were Caroline Evans of Cohasset and Lilly Evans of Marblehead.

Jon Taylor of Hopedale served as best man. Groomsmen were brother of the groom, Adam DiFonzo of Hopedale, and brother of the bride, Andrew Sullivan of South Boston.

The bride is a 1998 graduate of Avon High School and a 2002 graduate of Marist College.

The groom is a 1996 graduate of Milford High School and a 2000 graduate of Plymouth State College. He is employed by Diversified Investment Advisors as a senior account manager.

Following a reception at Cohasset Golf Club, the couple honeymooned in California. They reside in Natick.

Kids Chess Club at Lifesaving Museum

Looking for a winter activity for children? Try the Hull Chess Club, recommended for children age 8 and older. The club, which meets at 4 p.m., on Thursdays, is a fun, kid-friendly way for beginners to learn chess, and experienced players to learn the game. Club teacher Irene Kozmin will offer informal instruction and challenge kids to think about each move. An afternoon snack will be provided, and the program is free of charge.

Hull Lifesaving Museum is at 1117 Nantasket Ave., Hull. For more information, call Victoria Stevens at 781-925-5433 or email victoria@hulllifesaving-museum.org.

From the Archives of the Cohasset Historical Society

This reproduction of a famous photograph of President Lincoln was taken while he was writing the Gettysburg Address. It is part of the Cohasset Historical Society's Civil War archives which will be on exhibit at the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St., during the month of February. Please plan to stop by to see our Civil War artifacts, 1860s fashions, and Lincoln family memorabilia.

Currently on exhibit is our collection of Parisian fashions from famous designers such as Paul Poiret, Corbay Wenzel and Albert Gancarz. These beautiful gowns are really worth a visit. The exhibit will be on-going through February.

The Cohasset Historical Society is grateful to those who remember us with donations of Cohasset photographs, textiles and memorabilia. We would like to take this occasion to thank you for your continued generous support.

If you have enjoyed reading our columns and discovering some of what we hold in our archives, please consider supporting the Historical Society. Your tax-deductible donation can be sent to: Cohasset Historical Society, PO Box 627, Cohasset, MA 02025. All donations are gratefully appreciated.

Choral Art Society calling all singers!

It's not too late to join the Choral Art Society for its 50th anniversary season. Singers of all abilities and vocal parts, though tenors and sopranos are particularly welcome.

Under the direction of conductor Danica A. Buckley, the South Shore group will be singing Felix Mendelssohn's St. Paul with the Braintree Choral Society, which is celebrating its 85th anniversary. The choruses are joining with the Braintree Festival Orchestra for this gala performance to celebrate Mendelssohn's 200th birthday.

Four nationally-known soloists will be featured: Robert Honeysucker as Paul, Thomas Gregg as Stephen, Dana Schnitzer, Soprano, and Rebecca Folsom, Mezzo-Soprano in this concert celebrating many anniversaries on May 30, at 7 p.m., at the brand new Thayer Academy Performing Arts Center in Braintree.

For directions and a full rehearsal schedule, visit www.choralartsociety.org or call the conductor at 413-348-9423.

The Choral Art Society will rehearse in its usual space at First Trinitarian Church, 381 Country Way, Scituate, on Monday, Jan. 12, at 7:30 p.m.,

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Thanks for speaking up in 2008

Before 2009 gets too far along, we still have some important 2008 business to attend to.

Some of the following names may be familiar to you, others may not be. But the people attached to these names all have one thing in common: they wrote at least one letter-to-the-editor or penned a commentary to the Cohasset Mariner in 2008.

A few wrote thank you notes to the people of Cohasset or organizations for their help or support; others complained about a decision or lobbied to have their views considered; while still others educated us about programs, problems or activities.

But no matter what the subject, putting pen to paper to share your views with your fellow citizens is important. The First Amendment is close to our hearts here in the newspaper business and at no time do we appreciate it more than when ordinary citizens, like those listed here, take advantage of their Freedom of Speech. And what better vehicle is there than your local paper?

So here at the Mariner, we salute the following citizens:

Howie Altholtz, Imants Ansbergs, Paul Antico, Leslie Armstrong, Franchesa Arnold, Sally Ayers, Ed Baldry (and others for the Jack Hubbard Fun Run Committee), Barbara Baumgarten (and others for the Cohasset Arts Boosters), John Beck, Bill Bell, Mark Bell, Larry Bingaman, Russell Bonetti, Douglas & Leslie Bryan (and others for the Cohasset Wind Advisory Committee), Richard Brooks, Merle Brown, Jack Buckley, Bill Burnett;

Tom Callahan and Clark Brewer, John W. Campbell, R. Woods, William I. Young.

The editorial pages of the Cohasset Mariner belong to you. It's where you can speak out or just say thank you to a citizen or group that went beyond the call of duty.

Sometimes it takes a good dose of courage to let your voice be heard, but we think it's worth it. Often one voice is all the inspiration needed to propel others to action.

Last year, the Cohasset Mariner received 163 letters from 133 different people, groups or organizations.

To those of you that have thought about writing and haven't, please reconsider. To those whom we hear from on a regular basis, keep writing!

There are lots of weeks to go in the New Year — which will be filled with events, decisions, happenings and controversy. Let us hear what you think in 2009.

(Editor's note: Unless they penned a letter, names of the Mariner's regular columnists were not included in this list).

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Heartfelt appreciation

TO THE EDITOR:

We would like to extend a heartfelt thank you to everyone who expressed their condolences and support with the unexpected death of Joseph "Joey" Laugelle Jr. The care and comfort shown by so many to our family, Susan, Anna and Margaret, and family was overwhelming and a true tribute to a young man whose life ended too soon. Joe's memory will live on in the hearts of all who knew and loved him.

We are blessed to be surrounded by such caring family members and friends to help us get through.

Thank you and may God bless you all.

The red-blue paradox

TO THE EDITOR:

An interesting new library book "Red State, Blue State, Rich State, Poor State; Why Americans Vote the Way They Do" provides an exhaustive treatment of America's voting paradox. The paradox is: the poorer the state, the more likely the state will vote Republican, but the poorer the voter, the more likely the voter will vote Democratic. In other words, rich states tend to vote Democratic, rich people tend to vote Republican.

If you enjoy mental exercise, plow through the charted statistics and rationale that dissect the paradox. (The exercise may be mentally beneficial, but it is not a substitute for objective evaluation of the future performance of Congress and Executive.)

POLITICAL NOTES

Democrats to elect delegates to state convention

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will host a caucus at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset, at 10 a.m., on Feb. 7, to elect four delegates and three alternates to the 2009 Massachusetts Democratic Convention. Delegates will be divided equally between men and women.

The convention will take place Saturday, June 6, at the MassMutual Center in Springfield. At that time, Democrats from across the state will gather to adopt a party platform. David Plouffe, campaign manager for Barack Obama's presidential campaign, will be the keynote speaker. According to Party Chairman John Walsh, "David will share the insights he garnered during the campaign and his vision for where we need to go as a party to build on those successes."

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in Cohasset. All ballots will be written and secret.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in Cohasset. All ballots will be written and secret. Those not elected as delegate and/or alternate, who meet the qualifications, may apply to be add-on delegates in the following categories: youth, minority and disabled.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity, sexual orientation or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited. Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed with the Massachusetts Democratic Party, 56 Roland St., Suite 203, Boston, MA 02129 no later than 10 days after the caucus date.

The committee normally meets on the first Saturday of the month at Paul Pratt Public Library. For more information on the caucus, contact Kevin McCarthy at Kemccar68@comcast.net, or call 781-383-0639.

Bradley announces roadside safety legislation

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley has announced the House of Representatives recently approved legislation that will improve roadside safety by requiring drivers to clear the right lane when emergency vehicles displaying flashing lights are parked along highways. The goal of the "Slow Down, Move-Over" legislation is to provide roadside safety professionals, including state troopers and emergency responders, with a safe margin as they assist motorists in trouble.

"Too many times we hear of injuries, or worse, to our state troopers and emergency personnel, who risk their own lives when assisting motorists in need of help," said Bradley. "I am hopeful that this important legislation will become law and will make our roadways a safer place by providing an additional measure of protection to our troopers and first responders as they do their jobs."

Bradley opens district office on Fridays

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, has opened a new district office at the Sons of Italy Hall, 88 Chief Justice Cushing Highway in Hingham.

The office will be staffed most Fridays, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., with the exception of the third Friday each month when the office will be open from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Precinct 3 residents in Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and Scituate are welcome to visit or call the district office at 781-749-3331. An appointment is not necessary.

Additionally, residents are reminded that they may call Bradley's State House office at 617-722-2460 Monday through Friday.

BMPs and storm-water treatment

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Little Harbor Project – Prior to the holidays, a resident wrote a very astute letter to the Mariner regarding the fact that there is a Stormwater facet to the Little Harbor Project. The letter dealt with the fact that the Town is spending a considerable effort to clean up the Little Harbor area with a new sanitary sewer system. Yet, at the same time we are apparently adding stormwater from the roads to Little Harbor, which seems counter productive with regard to creating a cleaner environment. On the surface this would certainly appear to be true.

But, there is really more to this than meets the eye. Today's Environmental Protection Agency requires that any new storm-water systems provide for the clean-up of that stormwater. Just like with the Town's sanitary sewer system that treats the effluent prior to release, the stormwater system is obliged to provide treatment of its effluent. The methods used for treatment are called, BMPs or Best Management Practices. In fact, over the past several years, Cohasset has embarked on a whole multitude of projects to clean-up storm water, utilizing several different BMP types.

One clean-up method is by the use of a bio-retention system or rain garden. A rain garden uses a variety of special soil materials and carefully selected plants through which the stormwater is directed. The rain gardens provide filtering and removal of a substantial quantity of the particulate and chemical pollutants, principally picked up from the roadways, prior to releasing the water to the local aquifer or harbor. Examples of rain gardens are the recent Conservation Commission sponsored rain gardens installed along Cushing Road and Spring Street. The Water Commission has also installed numerous rain gardens around Town. Rain gardens are easily visible when they are first installed, but as they grow and mature, sometimes they don't visibly stand out. Rain gardens do require maintenance in that eventually the build up of pollutants in the soil from the filtering process will cause the plant material to gradually weaken and die. When this happens, the rain gardens need to be refreshed by removing and replacing the old soils and adding new plants. But, just because the plants weaken and die does not mean that rain gardens clog up. They are designed to continue to pass storm water without treatment. This is why it is important for the Town to provide oversight on installed rain gardens to ensure continued function.

A Peek Inside a Centrifugal Separator.

A second way storm water can be cleaned up is by the use of centrifugal separation BMPs. This method uses an underground device that causes the storm water to circulate into a rapid spiral, similar to what you see when water goes down a drain. The centrifugal action of the spinning water causes the floatable, oils and particulate matter to separate into separate chambers where they are captured and stored. The storm water is then allowed to flow to an outfall on its way to either the aquifer or a body of water, substantially cleaner than when it entered. The Town shortly will have between 20 and 30 of these devices installed. But, these are not visible, since they are all below ground. The only thing visible is a cast iron round manhole that looks like any other regular manhole. Like the rain gardens, these BMPs also require maintenance. The trapped materials need to be removed from the centrifugal devices. If they are not cleaned, they just will not provide filtering any longer. But, they are also designed so they will not clog up. When full, the storm water just bypasses the clean-up function and goes on its way.

Remember, the storm water will ultimately find its way to our streams and harbors, with or without treatment. So, as you can see, any new stormwater systems installed in the Town as a part of the Little Harbor Project have BMPs and do clean-up the stormwater prior to its release to an aquifer or a body of water. And, other projects such as the Greenbush Project and the Forest Avenue paving project have introduced BMPs for storm water clean-up, as well. This should all have a very positive impact on the quality of our water in Cohasset's streams and harbor.

Little Harbor Project Paving and Weather – As we write this on Wednesday, it is raining cats and dogs, before that everything was solid ice, and who knows what's next. All of this good old New England winter weather makes the construction activities very messy. Patches on roads disappear as quickly as they are placed. Needless to say, the project is doing the best it can to keep the roads passable, but often it just doesn't work too well. Both the contractor and the Town DPW are working in concert to keep the roads as passable as possible.

COURTESY PHOTOS

Side View of Centrifugal Separator.

Most construction activity is presently confined to smaller roads so that the main roads are disrupted as little as possible. But, when we have any combination of rain and snow it makes placing new paving impossible. We are shooting to pave some of the smaller roads when the construction is completed and the weather looks to be more favorable. Hopefully, we'll get a break in the next several weeks. We'll just have to see how that works out. One thing we do know is that any paving done this time of year is only temporary. But, it seems to be the best alternative when compared with leaving the back filled trenches for the weather to mess up further. In Little Harbor Project areas still under construction, the contractor, LM Holdings is responsible for plowing. When the roads are paved, that responsibility usually reverts back to the Town DPW.

'Dogthology' and proper disposal

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Well, there's a health emergency over at Buttonwood Lane. Apparently, someone is collecting doggy litter, putting it in plastic bags and dropping them into the storm drain. It's then difficult for Barry Butman who operates the DPW clamshell to clean out catch basins. When cleaned out, the result is a combination of organics and plastic; very expensive to segregate and recycle. Moreover, disposing of dog droppings or any trash in a public place is a violation of a Board of Health regulations given below:

General:

1. Any person who owns, possess, cares for or controls a dog shall take every precaution to not permit his or her dog to defecate on any sidewalk, street, parking lot or any other public place. Further, the above pertains to private property not owned by the above person.

2. It is the responsibility of any person cited above to promptly remove any fecal matter deposited on a public place or on private property not owned by that person and properly disposed of.

Actually you saw this regulation previously in this column, which covered the therapeutic benefits of having pets, specifically cats and dogs. The column printed a poem by Arthur Guiterman, written in 1871 and slightly modified to describe a kitty rather than a bunny.

Since that time, I've received poems about dogs; to which I responded, sometimes in return poems. I'm now awash in dog poems, so here's the Anthology of Dog Poems:

The Antiseptic Baby and the Prophylactic Pup

The antiseptic baby and the prophylactic pup
Were playing in the garden when the kitten gamboled up
They looked upon this creature with loathing undisguised
He wasn't disinfected and he wasn't sterilized

They said he was a microbe and a hotbed of disease
They steamed him in a vapor of a thousand odd degrees
They froze him in a freezer as cold as banished hope
And washed him in permanganate with carbolated soap

Into sulphurated hydrogen they steeped his tiny ears
And trimmed his frisky whiskers with a pair of hardboiled shears
Then they donned their rubber mittens and took him by the hand
And elected him a member of the fumigated band

There's not a micrococcus in the garden where they play
And they bathe in pure iodoform a dozen times a day
And each imbibes his rations from a hygienic cup
The kitten and the baby and the prophylactic pup.

Arthur Guiterman 1871

Then, Murray Campbell sent the following:

Ode to Notes

Re the kid, the kit, the pup so clean
A message we should surely glean:

Bobo and the Board of Health
Like being well, more than wealth.
Good advice they freely give
So we all can longer live.
And if advice doth add some verse
Let it be funny, also terse.
R. Murray Campbell 2007

The Board responded as follows:

Mother Doesn't Want a Dog

Mother doesn't want a dog.
Mother says they smell,
And never sit when you say sit,
Or even when you yell.
And when you come home late at night
And there is ice and snow,
You have to go back out because
The dumb dog has to go.

Mother doesn't want a dog.
Mother says they shed,
And always let the strangers in
And bark at friends instead,
And do disgraceful things on rugs,
And track mud on the floor,
And flop upon your bed at night
And snort their doggy snore.

Mother doesn't want a dog.
She's making a mistake.
Because, more than a dog, I think
She will not want this snake.
Judith Viorst

To which I respond

Healthafore

The body most salubrious is our ambitious calling.
Protecting all the populace from illnesses appalling.
We stamp out beriberi, mumps and ills from ticks and skeeters
With urologists proctologists and other famous treaters

We love it when you use our many unguents and our lotions.
But just in case you disagree with our advice and notions,
Don't denigrate our calling lest one day you just may need us
And we won't be there to come to you no matter how you plead us.
S.N. Bobo

Then Ozzie Ingram sent:

Every Dog Has His Day

Canines, canines man's delight.
All agree the bond is tight.
One feels warm when dog is nigh
Most will often testify.

But ownership requires a fee
Some responsibility
Grooming, caring, oversight;
Keeping walkways clean and bright.

A dog's one end is made to pet;
The other's mostly for the vet.
But don't consider it a bleak end.
Think of it as your pup's weak end.

Words we can live without

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

If your plans for 2009 call for you to protect the environment, for Pete's sake don't tell anybody that you are "going green," as the committed tree huggers are wont to say. Somebody from Lake Superior State University may be listening.

The word "green" and any derivative thereof is the word or phrase that drew the most nominations in the school's 34th annual List of Words to Be Banished from the Queen's English for Misuse, Overuse and General Uselessness.

Or at least from casual conversation or print.

"The ubiquitous 'green' and all its variables drew the most attention from those who sent in nominations," said the news release, quoting Danielle Brunin of Lawrence, Kan. "This phrase makes me go green every time I hear it."

The environmental movement produced another nomination — "carbon footprint or carbon offsetting," words courtesy of Al Gore as he toured the nation in his private jet, passing out inconvenient truths to the rest of us.

"It is now considered fashionable for everyone, tree hugger or lumberjack alike, to pay money to questionable companies to 'offset' their own 'carbon footprint.' What a scam!" said Ginger Hunt of London, England.

But there is nothing like a presidential election year to turn on the language abuse faucet and 2008 was no exception.

Take "maverick," for instance, another word on the Lake Superior list. For a time there, it seemed like there were no Republicans or Democrats on the ballot, only mavericks.

Paul Ruschmann of Canton, Mich., nominated "first dude," the nickname Sarah Palin pinned on her husband. "Skateboard English is not an appropriate way to refer to the spouse of a high-ranking public official," said Paul. I dunno. I rather like it.

The tanking of the economy late in the year brought in the word "bailout," as in an emergency loan from the government to a failing company so it can fulfill its obligations to the suits for their golden parachutes.

"When your cousin calls you from jail in the middle of the night, he wants a bailout," said Ben Green of State College, Pa.

"Don't we love how Capitol Hill will bail out Wall Street, but not Main Street," said Derrick Cumberland of Midland, Mich., himself using one of the year's most overused expressions, coupling Wall Street and Main Street.

"Let's find another way to talk about everyone or the middle class, or even, heaven forbid, 'Joe the Plumber,'" said a man from Knoxville, Tenn.

The recession and the high prices of gasoline coined a new word that made the Lake Superior list — "staycation," which is defined as a vacation in which you put away the old gas guzzler and vacate, or "stay," at home. Get it?

Me? The word I'd like to see retired is "gate," as in Watergate or troopergate or whatever gate happened to strike a headline writer's fancy. It's been 36 years since Watergate. Let's close it and move on.

MamaSteph – Music will be performed for young children at 10:30 a.m., on Mondays, Jan. 12 and 26 and Feb. 2, 9 and 23. All ages and communities welcome. Sponsored by The Friends of the Cohasset Library.

close promptly at 10:35 a.m. Funded by Friends of the Cohasset Library. All ages and communities are welcome.

Drop In Story Time – In the Story Room at 10:30 a.m., on Tuesdays, Jan. 13, 20 and 27 and Feb. 3, 10, 17 and 24. Join other for big book adventures. All ages and communities welcome.

FOR ADULTS

Cohasset Reads Together 2009 – Meet author Julian Houston at 10 a.m., on Saturday, Jan. 17, at First Parish Unitarian Church on Cohasset Common. Houston's book, "New Boy," has been selected as one of the tow-wide reading selections for Cohasset Reads Together. Sponsored by Cohasset Diversity Committee and Cohasset Clergy. Free. Call the library for more information.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film "Ben X" at 6 p.m., on Thursday, Jan. 15. Free admission and refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Artist Reception – South Shore Art Center will feature an exhibit by Sara Holbrook at Paul Pratt Library through Feb. 28. An opening reception will take place from 4 to 6 p.m., on Jan. 11. Holbrook has painted in watercolor for almost 30 years. A graduate of Colby College, majoring in English and minoring in art history, she has studied with Virginia Avery, Charles Mahoney, Marshall Joyce and Murray Wentworth. She is a gallery artist at South Shore Art Center where she has had many solo shows and has exhibited in numerous group shows. "Close Encounters represents two years of work focusing on a close observation of animals, flowers, people and objects. I have tried to elicit in my work either an emotion or a sensation from all these subjects. The intimate nature of close study has been a rewarding and fascinating endeavor; it has allowed for self examination, as well, by expressing through color, line and texture, my own attachment to each of these subjects," said Holbrook. All are welcome. Free. Gallery hours are Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Wednesday and Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sunday, 2 to 5 p.m.

Cohasset Banker appointed to American Bankers Assoc. Post

The American Bankers Association has selected Francis E. Campbell, President & CEO, Pilgrim Bank, to serve on the ABA America's Community Bankers Council.

Composed of approximately 100 bankers from all 50 states, the Council meets twice a year to advise the Association on issues affecting the nation's community banks and their customers. The first meeting of the 2008-2009 Council was held December 3–5, 2008, at the historic Mayflower Hotel in Washington, D.C.

Council members discussed how recent legislation and regulatory proposals have impacted their local communities, including Treasury's capital purchase program, and fair value and mark-to-market accounting issues. They also weighed in on current economic concerns such as mortgage lending and issues surrounding the government conservatorship of Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac. In addition, the Council heard reports on the recent Presidential and Congressional election and its impact on banking.

While in Washington, Campbell met with the FDIC to share the industry's views on current banking policies.

"This is an opportunity to let our voice be heard on national issues that also affect us locally," Campbell said. "While we may come from many different communities, we share many common challenges."

Members of the Council are from financial institutions generally under $1 billion in assets and are appointed by the ABA chairman.

Pilgrim Bank is a $150 million mutual cooperative bank founded in 1916 and headquartered in Cohasset, MA, with branches in Cohasset and Marion. Francis E. Campbell has been in banking for more than 30 years and has been President & CEO of Pilgrim Bank since 2002.

Building a housing trust

Housing Partnership to be absorbed into new committee

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In a matter of months, the Housing Partnership Committee could become a thing of the past. The partnership, which has spent the better part of the last four years seeking out affordable housing opportunities and developing zoning bylaws, will be absorbed by the Affordable Housing Trust Committee.

In a vote on Monday night, the Board of Selectmen approved the concept of populating the housing trust with the members of the housing partnership members and one Selectman (Karen Quigley). Official appointments will be made at a later time.

"It's for simplicity and continuity," said current co-chair of the Housing Partnership Tom Callahan, who plans to step down from the partnership and not continue with the trust's effort. "There is a good mix of the community already there."

The Affordable Housing Trust was established in a majority vote at the 2008 Annual Town Meeting and will assume many of the same duties (plus some new ones) performed by the housing partnership over the last few years.

The housing trust model was developed in a response to the state's affordable housing law Chapter 40-B in order to work and be proactive in the housing market. The trust is designed to have funding at their disposal so they can actively seek projects and not be rigidly tied to the Town Meeting cycle.

The Affordable Housing Trust is modeled after one that was established in Hingham in 2007.

According to the bylaw, the funds in the trust will be derived from developers, gifts, grants, donations contributions or other cash payment to the trust for the purpose of providing low- to moderate-income housing. The town treasurer will be the custodian of the trust's funds.

In Hingham, their Community Preservation funding that is dedicated to community housing projects is transferred to the Housing Trust account. The Cohasset Housing Partnership pursued this angle, but it was not supported by the community preservation committee and did not make it to the floor of Town Meeting.

Callahan said the committee intends to go before the Community Preservation Committee this spring in the hopes of getting some funding. A revised inclusionary zoning bylaw will also be brought forth to Town Meeting.

According to the new Housing Trust bylaw, the Board of Trustees should include seven members appointed by the Board of Selectmen, including one member of the Board of Selectmen itself. As many of six members of the partnership could assume positions on the trust.

The Housing Partnership Committee recommended the two committees exist simultaneously for a few months, but the groups will eventually merge into one.

Housing Partnership co-chairs Clark Brewer and Tom Callahan will stay on to ease the transition, but will not serve on the Housing Trust.

Hingham Community Center Cabaret on stage

It's not too early to think about getting tickets for the 47th Hingham Cabaret, which will run from Thursday, Jan. 29, 7 p.m., through Friday and Saturday, Jan. 30 and 31, at 8 p.m., at Hingham Armory, Central Street.

Cabaret benefits the Hingham Community Center, which last year celebrated its 50th year.

This year's extravaganza, dubbed "I've Got Rhythm," will highlight great classics and some new musical favorites. Featured artists will include Billy Joel and Tina Turner, along with hits from "South Pacific" and "Gypsy."

For years, the show has provided South Shore residents a fun night out, with cabaret-style seating at tables for eight or 10. Folks bring baskets of food to eat and coolers of adult beverages to drink, plus there will be a bar offering beer and wine.

Tickets prices are the same as last year: $15 for general admission, and $12 for senior citizens on Thursday night; $23 on Friday and Saturday nights. A shuttle bus sponsored by Linden Ponds will make pickups at Hingham Town Hall, Central Street, and Hingham Institution for Savings, Main Street parking lots.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' and senators' votes on two roll calls from prior legislative sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

$100,000 FOR COLLEGE READY NEW ENGLAND INITIATIVE (H 5000)

House 137-21, Senate 33-5, overrode Governor Deval Patrick's veto of the entire $100,000 in funding for the College Ready New England initiative (CRNE). The group is made up of leaders in education, business and government from the six New England states. Its website says that it is "focused on helping the six states develop strategies to increase the economic competitiveness and well-being of the region and its citizens through expanded college participation and success." Supporters of keeping the $100,000 said that the group's goal is to ensure that all the region's students leave high school well-prepared for success and to improve the number of students, particularly low income and minority students, who attend and complete college. In his veto message, Patrick said that he reduced the funding to an amount consistent with his original budget recommendation. (A "Yes" vote is for overriding Patrick's veto and for keeping the $100,000. A "No" vote is against overriding Patrick's veto and against keeping the $100,000).

$206,045 FOR COMMUNITY CORRECTIONS (H 5000)

House 129-20, Senate 31-4, overrode Gov. Patrick's $206,045 reduction (from $19,316,186 to $19,110,141) in funding for intensive supervision and community corrections programs. The funding would be used for prisoner and probation programs including community service, educational assistance, drug and alcohol testing and treatment, curfew enforcement and home confinement. Override supporters said the $206,045 is necessary to adequately fund these important programs while continuing to ensure the safety of the public. In his veto message, Patrick said that he reduced the funding to an amount consistent with his original budget recommendation. (A "Yes" vote is for overriding Patrick's veto and for keeping the $206,045. A "No" vote is against overriding Patrick's veto and against keeping the $206,045).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL.

ALLOW PHARMACISTS TO MANAGE PRESCRIPTIONS (H 5188) - The House approved a bill that would allow pharmacists to engage in Collaborative Drug Therapy Management (CDTM) practice under the supervision and direction of a doctor.

The CDTM includes giving the pharmacist authority to implement, modify and monitor a patient's drugs; order and perform laboratory and other related tests and provide counseling and education to patients about their medications. Supporters said that 43 other states allow this practice that would increase patient safety and health and reduce medication errors and health care costs. They noted that many patients enrolled in CDTM programs have improved health and require fewer emergency room visits than those who are not enrolled. The Senate has approved a different version of the measure. The House version now goes to the Senate for consideration.

ALLOW POLICE AUCTIONS ON THE INTERNET (H 1981) - The House and Senate approved and sent to Gov. Patrick a measure allowing police departments to auction off unclaimed items on eBay and other Internet auction sites. Traditional auctions in a physical setting would still be allowed as they are under current law. Supporters said that police auctions should join the Internet revolution and auction items in an easier, streamlined and more cost effective manner. They noted that currently many cities and towns spend more money to implement and conduct the auction than they receive in revenue from it.

REGULATE LOW SPEED VEHICLES (H 4377) - The Senate approved a bill regulating the use of increasing popular "low speed vehicles" with a maximum speed capacity of 25 miles per hour. The best known of these vehicles is the electric-powered Chrysler Neighborhood Electric Vehicle (NEV). The legislation bans NEVs from traveling on roads with speed limits over 30 miles per hour and requires these vehicles and their drivers to follow the same registration and licensing requirements that currently apply to regular cars. Another provision requires all dealers who sell or lease these vehicles to provide customers with a list of the new state regulations that they are required to follow. Supporters said that current law essentially bans these environmentally friendly, energy efficient, cost effective vehicles from all roads. They argued that the proposal would allow their use while strictly regulating them in order to ensure safety. The House has approved a different version of the measure. The Senate version now goes to the House for consideration.

RETIREMENT BENEFITS (H 2682) - The House approved a Senate-approved bill that would allow Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) employees who were laid off in 2003 and rehired in 2005 to count the missing two years toward their pensions. These employees would be required to pay into the retirement fund for those two years in order to qualify. Only final approval is needed in both branches prior to the measure going to the governor.

USA Fitness shapes up

Under new ownership, center gets a facelift

"The key to this business, just like any other business, is the people who work here."
— Brian Clifford, USA Fitness

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When the ball dropped in Times Square and 2009 began, many woke up the next morning ready to tackle their New Year's resolutions. Topping the list for many is a vow to get healthy, lose weight, eat better, go to the gym, or any combination, variation of such.

To accomplish a fitness or exercise goal, many turn to local fitness centers to get motivated and moving toward their goal(s).

On such fitness center, USA Fitness on Route 3A is, like many of its clients, undergoing a transformation.

Owner Brian Clifford purchased the business last April and began renovating it almost immediately. The fitness center stayed open through it all — new paint, new rugs, new exercise machines.

Although new to Cohasset, Clifford is not new to the fitness business — he is an 18-year veteran and has previously owned eight fitness clubs. Clifford realized early in life he liked to work out and be around healthy people. He took a summer job doing menial task at a fitness club and his interest grew from there. He became the owner of a fitness center in Wellesley shortly after college.

Self-described as a perfectionist, Clifford takes a lot of pride in his clubs and places emphasis on customer service and cleanliness.

"The key to this business, just like any other business, is the people who work here," said Clifford.

The club inherited some members from the former owner and has gained some as well. Clifford designed the renovations to create a clean, relaxing, friendly place for his clients to get their workout in. As one of the reasons to prove his success, he said when the woman-only gym, Curves, closed across the street many of those members joined USA Fitness.

Ginny Bracken of North Scituate was one of them. Although she hasn't been to a traditional fitness center like USA Fitness in close to 14 years, she has found herself at home at her new gym.

"Don't be intimidated. Everybody just goes at their own pace. It's all very comfortable," said Bracken, post-workout.

Clifford said New Year's resolutions have brought in some new clients, but many have signed up after a simple realizations.

"Many of our clients are just realizing they want to get healthy, they want to stay healthy," said Clifford. "The way last year was, people know when they work out they feel a lot better."

Clifford notices a marked difference in attitude from when he greets his members to when they are leaving.

"They are definitely in better moods when they leave. You've accomplished something," he said.

The renovations are about 50 percent complete as of this week, but the main fitness room where they treadmills and exercise bikes are situated is substantially renovated.

The walls are painted with a baby blue faux finish and there are several murals (one of people running) to warm up the room and keep clients motivated. Several motivational phrases like "is it in you?" and "a goal without a plan is just a dream" are painted on the walls.

"They are pleasing to the eye and they serve as reminders and inspiration," Clifford said. Clifford is doing a little bit each day to build up a gym both he and his clientele are proud to call their own.

There is a space for free weights, a room devoted to spinning bikes, a children's room (with babysitting), a large room for fitness classes and locker rooms.

"In this business, it's all about small, little changes and then at the end of the month, the end of the year, it translates to a big change," said Clifford, referring both to his renovation and clients' fitness goals.

Right now, USA Fitness offers about 22 fitness classes, but he hopes to double that in time (40 classes). Staples like yoga, pilates, cardio pump share a schedule with spinning, tai-chi and zumba.

About 20 percent of members work with a personal trainer on an on-going basis. Each new membership includes two sessions with a personal trainer to get him/her familiar with the equipment and started on a regimen.

Membership prices vary, but all include a $199 enrollment fee and a monthly membership fee ($59-plus).

USA Fitness is located at 135 King St. or call 781-383-9983 for more information.

Digital Photography Workshops at the New FOCUS Gallery

Those taking workshops are also eligible to participate in an upcoming student show at the FOCUS Gallery this spring.

Registration has begun for the winter session of photography workshops at the FOCUS Gallery in Cohasset. The FOCUS Gallery, which relocated in November to the new Depot Court Building in Cohasset Village, specializes in fine art photographic prints by award-winning photographers from across New England.

Workshops are offered for all skill levels and types of digital cameras. According to Cindy Vallino, one of the primary workshop instructors and FOCUS Gallery owner, "Most people attending our workshops already have some experience with photography, and are looking to take their skills to the next level. We've also had a number of students who are now working as photographers. Almost everyone does some form of photography at this point. Those who take our workshops are often looking for the chance to show their best photos, see what others are doing and get constructive tips on how to go beyond just taking snapshots."

Winter workshop topics include: Digital Photography Basics; Introduction to Digital SLR Cameras; Photographic Composition: The Art of "Making" Great Photographs; Introduction to Photo Editing in Photoshop; Advanced Digital Workflow and Editing; and Portrait Retouching in Photoshop. A new course available for high school students – "Introduction to Digital Photography – High School" will be led by professional commercial and music photographer, Courtney Duncan. Steve Dunwell, one of Boston's best known cityscape photographers, will lead a day-long workshop in the city photographing Boston's urban landscapes. For those interested in using their photography talents as a source of income, an evening workshop on "Going Public: Marketing and Showing Your Photography" is being offered by gallery owner, Cindy Vallino (who is herself an award-winning fine art and commercial photographer.)

Those taking workshops are also eligible to participate in an upcoming student show at the FOCUS Gallery this spring.

More details and registration for workshops can be done online through the FOCUS Gallery website: www.thefocusgallery.com or by calling the gallery at 781.383.0663. Workshops are typically limited to 8-10 participants, so early registration is strongly encouraged.

Winter art classes offered at Art Center

Winter is the perfect time to explore some of the 50 course offerings at South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road. The Art Center offers day and evening classes, as well as weekend workshops.

New this winter is a six-week class in Art History, taught by Duxbury resident Anthony Pilla, on Thursday afternoons. Other new classes include Still Life with Pastry, an oil painting class offered on Saturdays with Boston artist Claudine Metrick, the ABCs of Digital Photography with professional photographer Lindsey Buchleitner of Hull, Self Publishing Art Books taught by Andrew Maydoney, and Adobe Lightroom with South Shore photographer Lance Keimig. New workshops include Mold Making and Plaster Casting with Maine artist Kim Bernard, and Technology for Artists with Regina Gardner Milan.

Children's classes will include Learning from the Masters, Winter Wonderland, Hands in Clay, All About Animals and more. Courses are available for students age 4-1/2 and older, including specialized courses for teens. Most materials are supplied for children's classes and prices range from $120 to $210.

Classes begin Jan. 20. For a full description, a brochure and to register, visit the Web site at ssac.org or call 781-383-2787. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and noon to 4 p.m., on Sunday.

Drama Kids

Drama Kids will offer winter after school classes at Old Ship Parish House in Hingham. Classes will meet Tuesday afternoons throughout the school year. Drama Kids programs are for children ages 3 through 12, and focus on developing children's verbal abilities through drama and theater arts.

To register, visit the Web site at dramkids.com/ma2 or call 781-749-4911 for more information.

Skippers shock Clippers in OT

Cohasset rallies to form extra frame

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Just when it looked like it was over, either magic, or disaster struck, depending on which side you were on in the Cohasset boys basketball team's unlikely 67-58 overtime win at Norwell in the back end of a girls/boys doubleheader.

In a see-saw battle, the Skippers scored the last five points in regulation, all in the final minute to force the overtime.

After that it was all Cohasset.

The visitors quickly grabbed control in the extra period, scoring seven straight points for the win.

This was one of those games that could have gone either way.

Norwell had recent history and home advantage on its side, winning the past few battles between the teams, but Cohasset had that bit of magic, and an inside presence that turned the tide.

The Skippers (6-1) led 31-25 at the half, erasing a 16-15 deficit early, then upped the lead to 42-30 with 3:06 left in the third quarter on a free throw by John Maher, who finished with 15 points, including the tying bucket on a hard drive inside with 10 seconds left.

Maher added five points in the overtime.

While Cohasset led early, Norwell (1-4) battled back, whittling the lead to 46-40 at the end of the third.

The Clippers then made a run, scoring the next nine points for a 49-46 lead, keyed by a three-pointer by Dominic Wooten, who had a game-high 23 points, including a bomb that gave Norwell a 55-50 lead with 1:10 left.

After taking the 49-46 lead,

Skippers feeling good after busy week

It might have been Winter Break for most people, but it was anything but for the Cohasset Boys Basketball team. With 4 games in 8 days, the Skippers played disciplined, aggressive basketball against Sacred Heart, Dedham, Harwich and Norwell.

The action began Monday December 29 in the Cohasset Holiday Tournament. In the opening round, Cohasset faced Sacred Heart. The Skippers jumped out to an early first quarter lead, 24-12 and never looked back. All five starters registered double digit points and the entire Cohasset lineup contributed to the 77-55 victory. Senior Danny Martin led with 18 points and 12 boards, Marcus Charles contributed 14 points, John Sturino added 13 points, Jr. Johnny Maher scored 12 points and had 8 rebounds and point guard Robert Jones registered 10 points, 6 steals and 7 assists in the team effort.

Coming off the bench, senior playmaker Owen Landon (4 points, 4 assists) provided energy and quickness and freshman Robbie Mahoney grabbed four boards. Kevin O'Connell, Jack Carrier, Sam Richardson (with a crowd pleasing 3 point bucket) and Kyrell Jaundoo all played well and contributed to the win.

Co-captain John Sturino commented "It's been a great start so far and the team is working really well together. But we still have to meet our goal which is to make the Division 4 tournament".

Next up was the championship game in the Holiday Tournament.

The Skippers were looking to retain the title having won it for the first time in 2007. They faced a tough, scrappy, quick Dedham team that handily defeated the Hull Pirates in the first round of the tourney. It was a quick first quarter, with Dedham on top 15-13. Fast break points came from Sturino (9 points) and Martin (8 points, 10 rebounds, 3 blocks) in the paint.

Dedham capitalized on crashing the boards picking up two second chance buckets in the first quarter alone. Dedham extended their lead to 6 as the second quarter came to a close. Their relentless attack on the offensive glass was the difference in the point spread. For Cohasset, the second quarter belonged to Jones (15 points, 3

Cohasset wrestlers battle in Marshfield

By Emily Toomey
CHS CORRESPONDENT

On December 29 and 30, the varsity wrestling team headed to Marshfield for the annual Marshfield Tournament. Day one had both victories and losses, resulting in four Cohasset wrestlers - Matt Dooley, David Toomey, Mike Froio, and Thomas Flibotte- making it to the quarter finals.

Andrew Littauer and Gus Helbock wrestled in the consolation matches the first day and six members of the team were in the consolation matches the next day.

Jack Murphy was the only Cohasset wrestler to be undefeated on day one, placing him in the semifinals.

"Based on this first day, tomorrow morning will have tough rounds because all the kids are good and there are no easy matches," Coach Torin Sweeney said.

His predictions were proven true, with each wrestler undergoing losses on Tuesday. However, Murphy's experience and skill enabled him to place fourth for his weight class.

"The hardest part about coaching at the Marshfield Tournament, is getting the new kids to understand how difficult the competition will be."

Coach Sweeney

"The hardest part about coaching at the Marshfield Tournament," Sweeney said, "is getting the new kids to understand how difficult the competition will be."

According to Sweeney, wrestlers must endure a great deal of mental preparation for tournaments since it is difficult to stay focused throughout the long day- they usually weigh-in around 8 o'clock, but begin wrestling at 11. He explained how they each must maintain constant focus and energy in order to succeed in their sporadically timed matches. All of the kids had to face good competition, Sweeney said, such as Froio wrestling the first seed and Flibotte wrestling the second, but most were able to pull through strongly and become accomplished competitors themselves.

Note: The JV was also scheduled to wrestle in the Marshfield Tournament on Wednesday, but it was cancelled due to weather complications.

Skipper girls roll to victory

Cohasset experience too much for Norwell

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

After finding themselves trailing 23-8 midway through the second quarter, it would have been easy for the Norwell girls basketball team to throw in the towel, sing praises for Cohasset and wait to play another day.

Not this Norwell squad.

The Clippers weren't able to make a comeback or in reality, mount any real threat to the defending Division 4 state champion Skippers, but it didn't seem to matter in a 56-29 loss at home Monday night.

Down by 22 points in the closing minutes, Norwell was still diving for balls, working to make plays and in general, showing the grit and scrappiness of a young, upcoming team.

"They're a good team all around," Norwell senior guard Erin Vierra said. "I think we could have done more, but we gave a good effort, especially in the second half."

The two differences in the game were size and experience, both Cohasset advantages.

With Tori Lehr and Sammi Lehr up front, Norwell, one of the smaller teams in the league, faced a big size deficit.

That showed up in the box score.

"We did not quit," he said. "That was impressive."

Norwell coach Matt Marani

Tori Lehr dropped a game-high 17 points from the center spot, while Sammi chipped in 11 at forward. Guard Meredith Kelly added 13 for Cohasset.

At the same time, Cohasset focused on slowing Vierra, holding her to nine points. Elisabeth Murphy notched six for the Clippers, who dropped to 3-3 with the loss.

"This was the best defensive game we've had so far this year," Kelly said. "It was the best we've worked as a team. They (Norwell) were tough. They didn't give up. It's tough to play with a lead like that sometimes. There's always room for a team to come back, and they're pretty scrappy. The're the first to dive on the ground."

Norwell coach Matt Marani echoed the sentiment.

"We did not quit," he said. "That was impressive. To get down as early as we did and continue to battle was a very good attribute. We've played from behind a lot this year. We've learned to battle.We have really good kids. They never quit."

While Marani felt there were things that could have gone better, he gave credit to both sides.

"Cohasset is one of the best teams in the state," he said of the 6-0 Skippers. "They won the state title last year and didn't graduate anybody. They're a talented group of kids. I'd like to see our girls get to that level. Cohasset is the model in the league (South Shore League). If we can become like them, we'll have a chance to win a state title."

Holiday party for Cohasset girls

By Susan Franklin

The high school was packed to the rafters with basketball fans as the Cohasset Skippers hosted the 13th annual Cohasset Holiday Tournament. In the 2007 tournament Cohasset was eliminated from the championship round and Sacred Heart took home the trophy. This year the tables were turned. Hull beat Sacred Heart 56-44 in first round play and Cohasset won over Nantucket 64-41.

Coach John LeVangie stated after first round play, "I was extremely pleased with the effort and performance after the two week layoff. The bench picked us up and everyone played well. Meredith Kelly played outstanding."

The next day, Cohasset's basketball enthusiasts filled the stands. Nantucket took the win over Sacred Heart 57-47 in the consolation round.

In the championship round, long time rivals Cohasset and Hull gave the fans an exciting game of basketball.

Hull took control of the tap and began to work the Cohasset 1-2-2 defense. Meredith Kelly made a block at the top of the key and the Skippers were off and running, but not until two minutes had ticked off the clock did a point hit the scoreboard. A fast-paced game with virtually no set offenses, Cohasset was able to get off shots but they were not falling through the hoop. Kayla Farren and Meredith Kelly both visited the charity stripe, and baskets from Sammi Lehr and Lindsay Davis kept the score even. With 34 seconds left in the quarter, Hull penetrated Cohasset's 1-2-2 with a well executed pick play ending the quarter with Hull in the lead 11-8.

Hull continued its momentum in the second quarter drilling a 3-point shot from the top of the key. With the score 15-8, Cohasset appeared fatigued. Then a power play on the inside by Sammi Lehr off a Carly Salerno assist seemed to spark Cohasset's energy.

A series of plays netted Cohasset points including a free throw by Meredith Kelly and a long ball by Sammantha Crough. With the score now 15-13, Sammi Lehr silenced Hull's offense with a shot block sending the ball down court. A strong rebound by Meredith Kelly resulted in a hoop and a trip to the line. With just under two minutes to play in the half, Hull answered with a baseline drive and took back the lead 17-16.

Cohasset continued to get points off offensive rebounds. With a deuce by Meredith Kelly and another by Carly Haggerty, Cohasset regained the lead 20-17. With one more chance before time ran out, Hull sank a 3-point shot from the wing off a well-timed assist from down low tying the score at the half 20-20.

Hull controlled the tempo of the first half, forcing Cohasset to play their style of basketball. In the second half, Cohasset gained control of the tempo and settled into their game. Kayla Farren recorded the first point of the second half from the foul line. In their set offense, the Lehr sisters sparked Cohasset's inside game, putting up shots under the boards and drawing fouls. By the end of the quarter, Cohasset had pulled out to a 32-21 lead.

The final quarter was exciting. Each team continued to play aggressive full court defenses. Hull immediately broke Cohasset's press cutting the lead to 9 points. Although Hull's tenacious defense presented obstacles, strong rebounding by

CNC SUPER TEAM

•••Field Hockey•••

NAME: Kristina Katsikis
SCHOOL: Hanover
GRADE: Senior (Capt.)
POSITION: Forward
STATS: No question here. Katsikis was a scoring machine for the Patriot League champion (10-0-2) Lady Indians. Led the squad in scoring with 32 points on 22 goals, 10 assists and that was with opposing defenses keying on her. Saved Hanover's unbeaten streak in the PL with a game-tying goal in the final second of play against rival Duxbury. The PL All-star made the Best of 60 Mass. team. She also plays softball at HHS and plans to continue her field hockey career at St. Anselm.

NAME: Ali Mandile
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Forward
STATS: Another top performer for the Lady Rams, Mandile ranked third among Atlantic Coast League goal scorers with 13 on the season. The ACL All-star was a shifty player on the front line and created several great opportunities for herself and others. One of her best came against Duxbury, when she scored the game winner with just 11 seconds left in a 1-0 victory. Mandile plans to continue her field hockey career at Quinnipiac College.

NAME: Mimi Smith
SCHOOL: Duxbury
GRADE: Junior
POSITION: Forward
STATS: A standout on the Duxbury squad this season, Smith led the team in scoring with 15 goals. The Patriot League All-star had a knack for tallying multiple goals in games this season, including a four-goal effort against Middleboro. Led the Lady Dragons to second in the PL behind (8-1-2) only unbeaten Hanover. Notched a goal and an assist in the PL All-star Game. Also plays lacrosse at DHS and hopes to continue playing both sports in college.

NAME: Tracy Clough
SCHOOL: Duxbury
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Forward
STATS: This Patriot League All-star was second on the Duxbury team in scoring, notching 18 points on 12 goals, six assists. Her consistent play up top was a big factor in the Lady Dragons going 8-1-2 in the challenging PL this season to finish second behind Hanover. Clough also runs indoor and outdoor track at DHS and plants to attend college.

NAME: Emily Waterfield
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Midfield
STATS: A three-time Patriot League All-star, Waterfield closed out her Pembroke career in style being selected to the Best of 60 Mass. team. Was an essential part of a team that took strides in the Patriot League and in the postseason, taking a strong E. Bridgewater team to two overtimes in a 2-1 setback. Tallied six points for the Lady Titans on five goals, one assist. Hopes to continue playing field hockey in college.

NAME: Lyndsay Caulfield
SCHOOL: Hanover
GRADE: Senior (Capt.)
POSITION: Midfield
STATS: This Patriot League All-star had a knack for setting up her teammates, notching 14 assists this season. Caulfield also scored five goals of her own for the Patriot League champs (10-0-2). Capped her senior season in style making the Best of 60 Mass. team. Helped her team reach the Div. 2 South quarterfinals after knocking off Mashpee (1-0).

NAME: Sam Fallon
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Sophomore
POSITION: Midfield
STATS: Just a sophomore, Fallon led the up-and-coming Pembroke squad in scoring this season with 22 points on 13 goals, nine assists. This talented player had a flare for the dramatic, using her fine skills to make some stellar plays this season, including a diving shot to notch a win over Scituate. Helped her team top Hingham twice. Also a hockey player with the joint Whitman/Hanson squad, the Patriot League All-star would like to continue her career on the ice in college.

NAME: Jenn Dowd
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Forward
STATS: In what was a breakout season for Marshfield, Dowd was one of the team's brightest stars. Tallied 14 points on three goals, 11 assists. Led her team to an 8-2-2 record to finish a strong second in the Atlantic Coast League. A two-time ACL All-star, Dowd helped guide the Lady Rams to the quarterfinals of the Div. 1 South tourney, topping Falmouth before falling to Somerset.

NAME: Bailey Millerd
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Midfield
STATS: In what was an up and down season for Hingham, Millerd's play was one of the constants. The standout midfielder and PL All-star was a big contributor on both sides of the ball and was a key part in the Harbowomen's surge down the stretch, in which the team went 5-2-3, including a hard-earned 1-1 tie with champs Hanover. Also a top defensewoman on the girls hockey team at HHS, Millerd hopes to continue her career on the ice in college.

NAME: Mackenzie Curran
SCHOOL: Hanover
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Goalie
STATS: In her first season starting in the net, Curran couldn't have been better for the Patriot League champions. The PL All-star was the backbone of a Lady Indians defense that didn't allow a goal in its first six games. In all, Curran recorded 10 shutouts on the season, including blankings against Duxbury, Needham, Hingham, and Pembroke. Allowed only 14 goals in 18 regular season games and blanked Mashpee 1-0 in the Div. 2 South tourney.

Cohasset answered with the next four points to retake the lead, 50-49, but Wooten's three and a three by Dan Regan set up the Skipper comeback.

"We wanted to execute on offense and D it up," Wooten said about the plans for the final minutes. "We didn't get it done. We weren't boxing out. If we box out it's completely different. We fell short on defense in the last two minutes."

Cohasset senior center Dan Martin felt lucky to get the extra chance.

"I got a little worried when they made some big shots," said Martin, who led Cohasset with 19 points, 16 boards and five blocks. "But we felt we were never out of it and played hard to the last seconds. We were lucky to get into that overtime."

Martin was thrilled to get the win.

"For me, this was the biggest win of my career," he said. "It was one of the most intense games. We haven't beaten them here since 2000. It was a huge win."

Martin was one of the big factors in the game, helping force Norwell to the outside.

"We were keeping them out of the paint," he said. "They had size. We didn't want them getting inside. They got some open shots on screens, but I'd rather give them three-pointers than pound it inside."

In the overtime, Cohasset took over quickly.

"We came out strong right away," Martin said about overtime. "We had a little more intensity. We really tried to get rebounds and control the pace. We went back to a zone. That worked well for us."

Wooten enjoyed playing, but not the outcome.

"It was a fun game," he said. "We just fell short. It was a tough game to lose. This was a must-win for us. We just missed."

Norwell hosts East Bridgewater Friday, while Cohasset hosts Mashpee.

Local players show meteoric sportsmanship

POPPIN' OFF

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

Earlier in the week I knew I was going to write some sort of column for this space, but to be honest, I didn't know what to write about.

My first thought was to go all Roswell and ask questions about a big blazing blue ball shooting through the sky minutes after a game last week during the Cohasset Holiday Classic.

After watching reruns of Smallville the past few weeks I was ready to become a meteor freak. Maybe it was from Krypton. Keep an eye out for a kid with superpowers pretending he's just another average player in one of our towns around here.

Seriously though, I know it was probably a shooting star, and I know at least 20 others in the parking lot saw it too. Still, it was a pretty cool sight.

Getting back to the point, however, I figured out what to write about Monday night after watching the Cohasset boys edge a feisty Norwell squad on Monday in Norwell (with no strange lights in the parking lot).

The answer was sportsmanship.

I saw it in abundance and have to admit, it was nice to see.

After playing a nerve-wracking, up-and-down game, which was for me, one of the finest high school games I've seen in years, Norwell center Dominic Wooten made the time to come up from the locker room to congratulate Cohasset center Dan Martin for a good game.

This was long after the obligatory good-game handshake.

There was no pouting with this team.

There shouldn't have been.

Both teams played well, and in this case, the team that executed just a bit better in the stretch run got the win.

This was a game that had just about everything, especially in the final two minutes.

In that last minute, Norwell had a chance to make it really tough, but a missed free throw kept the game at two points.

There was a three-pointer by Norwell's Dan Regan that gave Norwell a lead after trailing by one.

There was another three by Wooten that looked to ice the game when the Clippers went up 55-50.

Then there was Cohasset's comeback, kicked off by guess what – a three-pointer by Marcus Charles. Gotta love the shootouts.

Of course, with Cohasset taking the advantage inside, it wasn't a shock that John Maher's tying bucket came from right under the hoop.

That wasn't all the excitement though.

With less than 10 seconds left, Cohasset got the ball back and after dribbling it down couldn't get to the line on what fans I was watching with agreed was a great non-call by officials when Charles played actor to try to get a call way outside. Then there was Cohasset guard Robert Jones' at-the-buzzer heave that had everyone holding their breath.

All-in-all a great game.

It was also a chance to watch Martin and Wooten, who were both on their games.

A few weeks back I wrote about Pembroke's Matt Devine being a fun player to watch.

Add Martin to that list. He's got size, speed and a shot. We'll be seeing him at the next level. Impressive.

Congratulations to the Pembroke girls basketball team for their three-game winning streak, which I am told is the longest in the school's history.

Senior guard Nicky Moran had a hand in that, scoring 15 in a game against Middleboro and 26 against Randolph, Tuesday night.

Moran had the hot hand in that one, draining six three-pointers. Nicole Wetherbee hit a pair too.

Congratulations to me too. I went a full week without making a wrong turn, unless you can call trying to find a shortcut through Rockland Center and missing the road back to 139 a wrong turn. In my defense, Sarah, the GPS I've been borrowing from family wasn't with me that day.

I think my kids named her, or maybe my mom, but a word of advice to drivers with those things. Listen to them when they tell you to turn. Not so much for the directions, but because I really think those machines get ticked off when you don't listen. They yell at me.

Girls roll to victory

Kelly thought her Skippers did what they wanted to.

"The last game against Harwich we had trouble closing out," she said. "We weren't boxing out and they had a ton of three-pointers. They had zero tonight. We came out controlled and were doing those things. We were boxing out and contesting shots. We held our ground."

Despite the score, Vierra was upbeat about their next meeting and pleased about her team's first win in the Lapels Holiday Classic over Hanover last week in Norwell.

"I think we can hang with them," she said. "There are things we can improve on. We can play better."

Marani agreed.

"With their big girls (Tori and Sammi Lehr) you have to go right at them and try to get them in foul trouble," he said. "We didn't do that. They're so long that we went side to side. You can't play afraid. In the first half we were."

the seasoned Cohasset squad generated follow up scoring. Hull answered many of Cohasset's baskets with scores of their own, many of which were generated on the press break. But when the buzzer went off, Cohasset had tallied 15 points to Hull's 13, coming away with the tournament win 47-34. Sammi Lehr and Meredith Kelly were acknowledged for their tournament performance with Lehr being named player of the game for the Championship Game and Kelly being named player of the tournament.

With the season now truly underway, the undefeated Skippers beat Harwich and Norwell, then head to Hingham and Mashpee before returning to Cohasset for a home stand.

steals, 3 assists) who nailed two 3 pointers, fed Sturino for 2, and converted a steal to a bucket.

Cohasset had the ball to start the second half and Martin scored first off a nice feed from Charles (11 points, 6 rebounds, 4 steals). But then it was all Dedham as they tallied several 3 point buckets to go up by 10. Timeout was called. Disciplined basketball took over and the Skippers battled back to within 3 during the second half. On a nice feed from Landon (4 points), Maher (6 rebounds) scored the tying bucket with 2 minutes left in the game. Dedham answered with a three and it stayed at 3 up until less than a minute left. With fouls to give, Cohasset fouled Dedham to stop the clock, but eventually Dedham ended up at the charity stripe and hit 5 shots in the waning seconds of the game to win 52-60. The Cohasset Skippers would not repeat as tourney champs, but played a solid game against a tough opponent.

Charles had this to say.

"Having the new coach is much better for the team in general. He is shaping us into the team we have wanted to become for a while. He doesn't put up with anything and that's a good thing. I feel with his experience as a coach he will help us meet our goal of 11 wins and getting into the tournament this year."

Friday, the first game of 2009, Harwich made the long trip from the Cape to take on the Skippers. Harwich always presented a tough challenge for Cohasset, would tonight be different? Maybe, maybe not. Cohasset started out flat and through the first 4 minutes was up by 1. Turnovers and missed shots characterized the opening 240 seconds. But Cohasset then went on a 10-4 run, sparked by baskets from Martin (17 points, 12 rebounds, 5 blocks) and Maher (15 points, 4 rebounds) and the defense held Harwich. In the final seconds of the quarter, Landon (5 points, 3 assists) hit a bucket, was fouled and converted the 'and one'. Cohasset led 17-10 after the first frame.

The score entering the third quarter was Cohasset 34, Harwich 28. It seemed like it was going to be tight game, but the Skippers poured it on and outscored Harwich 23 to 7 in this frame. Tremendous defense by Martin and the hot hand of Maher and Sturino (13 points, 6 rebounds) propelled the Skippers to the commanding lead. The tempo of the game stayed in Cohasset's favor. Jones was the high scorer with 20 points, nailing 3 buckets from beyond the arc and going 7 for 10 from the stripe. Coming off the bench, O'Connell (with a great coast to coast bucket), Mahoney with 2 points, Carrier with 4 points, Richardson with 2 points (2 for 2 from the free throw line) and 2 steals and Jaundoo with a bucket all contributed to the 82-59 victory over league opponent Harwich.

"We've really come together as a team and everyone is working hard together. It's a new system and everyone has bought into it and it is a good focus. We hope to continue our success throughout the season," Martin said.

Coach Ruggiero commented "It's been a great week with balanced scoring and 4 to 5 guys scoring in double digits every game. We've been getting great rebounding from Martin and Maher and freshman Robbie Mahoney off the bench. Our full court press is becoming a real factor as the kids learn the nuances of it and how to apply it. The running game has been terrific with Sturino, Charles and Landon flying in the wings and Robert Jones delivering the ball for simple, quick scores. Martin has been running hard on both ends of the floor and cashing in on putting buckets in off fast breaks. The kids are playing and acting like a team and are finding ways to win games. A "no quit" attitude is being developed and hopefully as we get into the more competitive part of the schedule against top tier teams like Abington, Hull, Carver and Mashpee it will continue and we will continue to win."

Cohasset finished the stretch with an overtime win over Norwell.

Tonight the Skippers face Mashpee at CMHS gym at 6:30.

Need some extra space? Want to help a good cause? The Rec. Department is looking for donations.

If you're like the many people who have taken advantage of end of year savings on game room and entertainment items you are probably trying to figure out what to do with all the old equipment. Whether it's time to update your old equipment or turn that lonely game room into a more functional space, you can help the community by making a donation to the Cohasset Recreation Department. We are sprucing up the Recreation Center and we're looking for folding tables and chairs, pool tables, ping pong tables, foosball tables, air hockey tables, arcade games, video game systems including Wii games, video projectors, and televisions. Maybe that flat screen TV you bought a few years ago doesn't seem quite as big as it used to, it would still look great in the Recreation Center. Cash donations are always welcome. All donations are eligible for tax deduction. With your help the Recreation Center will be a safe and enjoyable after school destination and the best spot in town to host a party.

Help Plan our future. Take a minute to answer a few questions about things you enjoy in Cohasset, and things you would like to see improved. Our Open Space & Recreation survey is available online at our website www.cohassetrec.com

Cohasset Integrated Pre-school applications

Applications for Cohasset Integrated Pre-school will be available Jan. 12 at both Osgood School and the Student Services Office. Children must be 3 by Sept. 1, 2009, to participate in the morning class, and 4 by Sept. 1, 2009, to participate in the afternoon class.

Applications should be returned to the Student Services Office, 143 Pond St., no later than Friday, Feb. 6. The lottery will take place Wednesday, Feb. 11, and families will be notified by mail that week.

A deposit of $150 by March 3 is required to hold the space. Tuition is currently $2,000 for the years; four days of 2.5-hour sessions each school week.

An open house for parent will take place at the Osgood School Pre-School classroom from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m., on Friday, Jan. 30. Parents will have an opportunity to meet staff and view the classroom facilities.

SSCC Nursery School registration

The South Shore Community Center Nursery School, 3 N. Main St., applications for the 2009-2010 school year are available at the Nursery School and the Community Center offices.

The registration process is based on a lottery system. All applications are due back to the Nursery School Office by Jan. 23, at 3 p.m. Included in the envelope should be a copy of the child's birth certificate and a $100 registration fee. Application envelopes should be clearly marked "Nursery School Registration." The lottery will be drawn the week of Feb. 2, and acceptance letters will be sent via mail the following week. Any child who does not get a placement in the program will have their registration fee returned.

The school offers three levels of programs to meet the needs of children age's three to five. The morning programs run from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and the afternoon programs are from 12:30 to 3 p.m. There are many extended day options for children enrolled in our school including lunch bunch, dance, computer and sports. Our youngest program, The Nursery Program, is for children who will be three years old by Nov. 1. The Pre-Kindergarten Program is for children who will be four by Nov. 1. They also offer a very special Enrichment Program for those children who have already had two years of school. This program is designed for older fours and fives whom are looking for a challenging year before they enter Kindergarten.

Our Nursery School has observation mirrors in each classroom so please feel free to stop in any time to see all of the wonderful things that occur in our program. If you have any questions or would like to set up an appointment to meet the director, call Ann Madden at 781-383-0036. The director can also be reached by e-mail at amadden@southshorecommunitycenter.com

Mark you calendars for CHS Cabaret!

LIFE AT CHS

LAUREN MACK

Hello everybody, and welcome back! I hope everyone had a wonderful winter break and made it safely back to school on Monday, since, contrary to popular belief, we did indeed have school. Wednesday, however, we really did had a two-hour delay, due to the inclement weather, but rumor has it that some students missed the memo and showed up to school promptly at 7:30.

In other news, the chorus sang the National Anthem at the Providence Bruins game today, and as an added bonus, they also got to enjoy the game after singing. On the topic of chorus, I should also mention that the annual Cohasset High School Cabaret is coming up soon! In preparation for this, the art club will be crafting things next week to sell that night and all profits will go directly to the CHS art boosters. So make sure you mark your calendars for Thursday, January 22nd, because it's going to be a great show full of lots of CHS talent.

In preparation for this, the art club will be crafting things next week to sell that night and all profits will go directly to the CHS art boosters.

My Teacher Quote of the Week this week comes from a woman who spends just as much time thinking about field hockey as she does thinking about math. Her name is Ms. Laura Giuliano and she teaches math courses that range from Algebra to Pre-calc. But when she's not doing really difficult math problems, Ms Giuliano, or "G", as some students call her, loves to play field hockey (she was the JV coach this past undefeated season), go on long walks on the beach, and play variations of table tennis. On Monday, I had the privilege to talk to "G" and ask her how her vacation was, she replied: "Well it was great until I had to come back here and you came in". And with that I leave you all to a wonderful weekend! Auf wiedersehen!

Seraphim Singers coming to St. Stephen's

Celebrating its 17th year, St. Stephen's Concert Series in Cohasset will be presenting the Seraphim Singers, directed by Jennifer Lester, in a concert on Sunday, Jan. 18, 2009, at 4 p.m., instead of the usual 3 p.m. time for St. Stephen's concerts.

Since its debut performance in 1997, The Seraphim Singers has created a special niche among Boston's performing elite with sensitive and probing performances of sacred choral music. Founded and directed by Jennifer Lester, the ensemble consists mostly of organists, composers, and other professional musicians whose vast knowledge and experience nourishes a passion for arresting and demanding repertoire. In residence at the Basilica of Our Lady of Perpetual Help (known fondly among Bostonians as "Mission Church"), The Seraphim Singers has honed refined interpretations of Roman Catholic masterworks, from Monteverdi and Byrd in the Renaissance to Poulenc and Durufle in the twentieth-century.

The church is located at 16 Highland Avenue in Cohasset, is handicap accessible, and plenty of parking is available at the village car park. Admission is free, but donations will be accepted. For information call 781-383-1083.

Cutting energy costs at Green Communities forum

The public is invited to learn how the Green Communities Act is being implemented on the South Shore at a free forum hosted by the South Shore Coalition, on Thursday, Jan. 15, in Hingham Town Hall, 210 Central St. Networking begins at 6:30 p.m. and the forum at 7 p.m.

Featured speakers will include Paul Hibbard, chairman of the Department of Public Utilities, who will discuss energy generation and ways cities and towns can cut energy costs; and Courtney Karp and Meg Lusardi of the DOER Green Communities Division, who will outline the Green Communities Program and the ways in which municipalities can get technical assistance. There will also be time for discussion. Coffee and light refreshments will be provided.

To register or for more information, call Tim Reardon at MAPC at 617-451-2770, ext. 2011, or email treardon@mapc.org. For more information, visit the Web site at mapc.org.

The Green Communities Program supports municipalities that want to become more efficient, develop renewable sources and begin innovative conservation projects. The forum will offer information on the latest ways cities and towns can implement the Green Communities Act, and will outline the technical assistance available to municipalities wanting to collaborate on green programs.

FOCUS ON HIGHER EDUCATION

A career helping others

By Peter H. Okun
DAILY NEWS CORRESPONDENT

Why do doctors' offices seem to be busier than ever? It may be that there are patients to see or consult with on the telephone, medical records and insurance records to update, tests to run, appointments to schedule, billing and bookkeeping responsibilities to handle, and many other day-to-day responsibilities that inundate nurses and physicians.

This is where medical assistants get involved. Medical assistants assist nurses and physicians with a variety of administrative and medical tasks, which allow the nurses and physicians to focus on providing the best care possible. According to the U.S. Department of Labor, employment of medical assistants is expected to grow 35 percent from 2006 to 2016, much faster than the average for all occupations.

Lincoln Technical Institute offers programs in many fields, including the medical assistant profession.

The medical assistant profession involves a lot of interaction and communication, both with the patients and with other members of the medical staff. Not only will they handle insurance billing and coding, but they'll also take vital signs, interpret lab results and perform basic urgent care procedures. Medical assistants are an essential part of the health care team.

Lincoln Educational Services Corporation, through its subsidiaries, operates Lincoln Technical Institute, Lincoln College of Technology, Southwestern College, Nashville Auto-Diesel College and Euphoria Institute of Beauty Arts and Sciences. Lincoln also operates divisions within some of these institutions under the names of Florida Culinary Institute and the Center for Culinary Arts. With a broad geographic reach of campuses in 17 states, Lincoln is poised to achieve its goal of becoming one of the largest providers of post-secondary education in the United States.

For more information, call Lincoln Technical Institute at 1-800-677-1924 to begin training as a medical assistant. Other programs in health care include the school's Medical Administration and Medical Coding & Billing courses. Programs vary by campus. Massachusetts campuses are located in Brockton, Lowell and Somerville. There is no waiting list. Visit www.lincolnedu.com.

"When I was raising my children, I always reminded them - getting a good job means getting a good education. Well, they're grown and gone now, so I decided to follow my own advice. I took the next step by enrolling at Massasoit Community College, and I'm working toward a Human Services degree. It's affordable,it's close to home, and it's going to get me a better job than I have now. See, a parent can never stop setting an example."

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
JAN. 5, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) It's a good time to take a much-needed break from your recent hectic schedule and spend some time in quieter surroundings. Important news could arrive early next week.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The Taurean traits of reliability and thoroughness could be well-tested when decision-makers consider your proposals and/or requests. Be prepared to answer some probing questions.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A sudden attack of boredom leaves you with some tasks undone. It's OK to take a short respite. But get back to work by week's end so that you have time for other projects.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Avoid prejudging a situation just because it looks bad. Facts could emerge that would make your position uncomfortable, to say the least. A relative has interesting news to share with you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is a good time to begin reassessing some of your recent decisions about your long-range goals to see if they still have merit. Spend more time with loved ones this weekend.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) An unsettled situation at home or on the job early in the week could drain your energy levels, making it difficult to get your work done on schedule. But things improve by midweek.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A temporary setback could give you time to go over your plans to find weaknesses you might have overlooked before. A romantic getaway with that special person is favored this weekend.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Professional and personal situations benefit once you set a positive tone in getting things off to a good start. Honest dialogue smoothes over any occasional display of balkiness.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A problem with workplace colleagues or family members seems to defy even your sage counsel. But be patient. Your words will eventually lead to a resolution.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't just wait out that unexpected and unexplained delay in your career move. You could gain added respect if you ask why it happened and what you can do to move things along.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Although your workplace strategies usually are accepted, you could be challenged by someone who isn't so favorably impressed. Be prepared to defend your positions.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your friendship circle expands, with new people coming into your life at this time. Welcome them warmly. But don't neglect those cherished long-time personal relationships.

BORN THIS WEEK: You love to search for knowledge and share it with others. You would make an especially fine teacher.

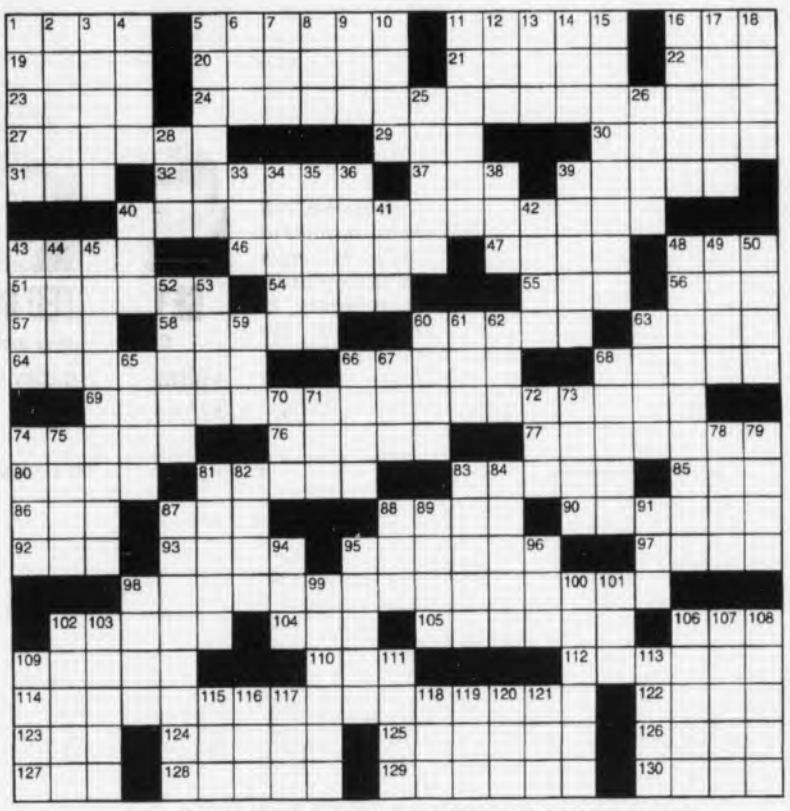
Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!



Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Atomic punk cover car and East Coast Championship Wrestling added to World of Wheels line-up

The Atomic Punk bubble-top hot rod from the cover of Rod & Custom magazine and East Coast Championship Wrestling demonstrations and autograph sessions have been added to the features surrounding the hundreds of stunning custom and classic vehicles from hot rods to collectibles at the thirty-fifth annual Town Fair Tire World of Wheels in Boston's Bayside Expo Center Jan. 9 to 11.

Johnny Fabulous, WWE world heavyweight champion John Cena's father, will sign autographs during wrestling demonstrations in the show's action arena. Matches will feature, among others, current ECCW tag team champions Viewers' Choice, heavyweight champion Brian Milonas and triple threat champion Brian Fury. ECCW demonstrations will take place at the show Friday, Jan. 9, 8 p.m.; Saturday, Jan. 10, Noon, 4 and 7 p.m.; and Sunday, Jan. 11, noon and 3 p.m.

The Atomic Punk bubble-top hot rod harkens back to the '60s when domed futuristic cars were common features at indoor hot rod shows, influenced by the military fighter jets of that day and the public's fascination with the then new space program. Atomic Punk, created by Aaron Grote, is a twist on this popular, traditional rod. Grote started with a 1959 4-door Plymouth Savoy and "cut all of the ugly off of it," he says. The car boasts hand-crafted grille and exhaust manifolds, all custom body work, chrome-capped fins, five-spoke wheels and white interior. Grote also picked up a '58 392 Hemi from a friend, showing Atomic Punk was built for go and not just show. "After all," Grote says, "who hasn't wanted to hop into a Roth (Ed "Big Daddy" Roth) bubbletop and do a big smoky burnout?"

Dazzling custom vehicles of all types highlight the Town Fair Tire World of Wheels show.

Although the hundreds of custom vehicles are the core of the Town Fair Tire World of Wheels, attractions include several celebrities who will be signing free autographs.

The watercolors of the Young Woo Art Group will be presented at the Clemens Gallery at the Hingham Library, 66 Leavitt St. Hingham, from Jan. 10 through Feb. 5. The group consists of seven South Shore artists who worked under the leadership of Woo Dang, a renowned Korean artist. Over the course of a year and a half the group produced over 20 Korean style paintings included in the exhibit. The paintings were done on rice paper with brushes and watercolor paints. The exhibit may be viewed during library hours. The public is invited to attend an artist reception Saturday, Jan. 10 from noon to 2 p.m. View the art, speak with the artists and enjoy light refreshments.

Quick Flix

Walt (Clint Eastwood) isn't too thrilled with the changes he sees in his neighborhood in "Gran Torino."

AUSTRALIA (PG-13) A romantic wartime epic driven by the charisma of Nicole Kidman and Hugh Jackman and the scenic beauty of the outback. (B)

BEDTIME STORIES (PG) Adam Sandler in a regressive state as a baby-sitting uncle who makes up outrageous stories for the kids that just happen to come true. (D)

BOLT (PG) Canine TV star Bolt mistakenly believes he has superpowers while trying to find his way home after he accidentally gets shipped across the country. (C)

THE BOY IN THE STRIPED PAJAMAS (PG-13) The friendship between the son of a Nazi officer and a Jewish boy in a death camp is undeniably sweet, but its ending is inevitable. (C)

BURN AFTER READING (R) George Clooney, Tilda Swinton, Frances McDormand and Brad Pitt star in a Coen brothers spy comedy of errors with a hilarious payoff. (B)

CADILLAC RECORDS (R) Adrien Brody stars as record producer Leonard Chess, who launched the careers of Etta James (Beyonce Knowles) and Chuck Berry (Mos Def). (C)

A CHRISTMAS TALE (Not rated) Family members put aside their petty grievances to gather at their dying mother's home for Christmas. Heartbreaking and sad as well as funny and knowing. (B)

THE CURIOUS CASE OF BENJAMIN BUTTON (R) Based on an F. Scott Fitzgerald story, The movie follows a man (Brad Pitt) through the 20th century as he ages backward. Despite flaws, mainly Pitt's wooden performance, it works. (B-)

THE DAY THE EARTH STOOD STILL (PG-13) A needless remake of the 1951 classic with Keanu Reeves as an alien who comes to Earth to warn us that we're destroying our planet. Don't bother. (F)

DOUBT (PG-13) A nun (Meryl Streep) suspects the new parish priest (Philip Seymour Hoffman) might be getting too close to one of his altar boys. (B)

FOUR CHRISTMASES (PG-13) Hackneyed holiday gags and little chemistry between Vince Vaughn and Reese Witherspoon leave viewers with little to celebrate. (D+)

FROST/NIXON (R) Ron Howard's entertaining behind-the-scenes look at David Frost's (Michael Sheen) televised six-hour sit-down with President Nixon (Frank Langella). (A)

GRAN TORINO (R) Walt (Clint Eastwood) is a cantankerous, racist war hero whose once-affluent neighborhood becomes home to Asian immigrants. His epiphany is as moving as it is hilarious. (A-)

MADAGASCAR: ESCAPE 2 AFRICA (PG) Bizarre amalgamation of "The Lion King," "Flight of the Phoenix" and "Joe vs. the Volcano" is not funny or entertaining. Voiced by Ben Stiller, Chris Rock. (D)

MARLEY & ME (R) John Grogan's 2005 best-selling memoir about a couple (Jennifer Aniston, Owen Wilson) and their pet Lab, "the world's worst dog." Mostly, you appreciate the fact that the dog behaves like a dog and not Hollywood's sentimental vision of a dog. But the ending delves into "Old Yeller" territory. Not for kids. (B)

MILK (R) Riveting story of the life of assassinated gay public official Harvey Milk finely performed by Sean Penn. (A)

NOTHING LIKE THE HOLIDAYS (PG-13) Christmas-themed drama about a household of bickering family members will get you in the spirit. Freddy Rodriguez, Debra Messing, John Leguizamo star. (B)

QUANTUM OF SOLACE (PG-13) Daniel Craig as the revenge-minded James Bond in hot pursuit of the people responsible for the death of his beloved Vesper in "Casino Royale." (A-)

RACHEL GETTING MARRIED (R) Anne Hathaway gives a brilliant performance as a recovering drug addict stirring up bitter memories at her sister's wedding. (C)

THE READER (R) The tale of a heated romance between Kate Winslet and a boy half her age (David Kross) who has no idea she's a German war criminal. (B)

SEVEN POUNDS (PG-13) Will Smith plays an IRS agent making amends for past wrongs by dramatically changing the lives of seven strangers. Rosario Dawson and Woody Harrelson co-star. (B)

SLUMDOG MILLIONAIRE (R) A young man from the slums of Mumbai recounts his life in flashbacks as he climbs the ladder on the Hindi version of "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire." (A)

THE SPIRIT (PG-13) Frank Miller ("Sin City") brings his graphic novel to life with Scarlet Johansson and Samuel L. Jackson topping the bill. (Not Reviewed)

SYNECDOCHE, NEW YORK (R) Charlie Kaufman's first-rate pitch-black comedy stars Philip Seymour Hoffman as an obsessed theater director. (A)

THE TALE OF DESPERAUX (G) A food-laden fairy tale about a rodent (voiced by Matthew Broderick) who must overcome his underdog status to save the day. (D)

TWILIGHT (PG-13) Based on Stephenie Meyer's teen-vampire romance novel, teenage girl Bella Swan risks everything when she falls for vampire Edward Cullen. (B+)

VALKYRIE (PG-13) Tom Cruise is completely unbelievable as a Nazi colonel who leads a band of conspirators trying to blow up Hitler. Co-stars Tom Wilkinson, Kenneth Branagh and Bill Nighy don't help. (C)

W. (PG-13) Oliver Stone's wickedly funny and evenhanded biopic of President George W. Bush lacks depth and complexity, but has a strong cast. (B)

THE WRESTLER (R) After a heart attack, a washed up wrestler (Mickey Rourke) tries to rebuild his life through his effort to reconnect with his estranged daughter and a growing, tentative romance. (A)

YES MAN (PG-13) Jim Carrey is back in silly mode, playing a loser who decides to change his life by saying "yes" to everything. There are some fun comic bits that seem likely to satisfy all his fans from the "Ace Ventura" and "Mask" days. (B+)

Coastal South Carolina: A trip to homemade culinary heaven

Erin Smith
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

GEORGETOWN, S.C. — At historic Hopsewee Plantation in Georgetown, S.C., afternoon tea is much more than a tea bag dunked into a pot of boiling water. Raejean Beattie serves her delicate scones on doilies with a homemade preserve made from fresh figs picked from the tree in her yard.

"Well gosh, I wouldn't know how to do it any other way," says Beattie in her reassuring drawl.

Beattie, who lives at the 18th century plantation with her family, prepares the dishes for her tea luncheon from scratch. And I joined three church ladies in enjoying her sugary hummingbird cake, dainty cucumber sandwiches, flaky tomato tarts and quiches.

Dining in Coastal South Carolina goes beyond Southern hospitality; every day can be like eating at your grandmother's house during the holidays.

Myrtle Beach is the epicenter of the Grand Strand, a region that includes more than 60 miles of continuous coastline and beaches from southern North Carolina to Georgetown, S.C. The resort town is most famous for golf and beach fun. But if food were an Olympic sport, the Myrtle Beach area would win a medal, especially for its seafood scene.

Sample the local shrimp and you begin to understand the "Friends don't let friends eat imported shrimp" bumper stickers the local fishermen dole out. Unlike briny shrimp imported from the Gulf of Mexico, South Carolina shrimp is culinary crack - sweet and meaty.

Local fishermen unload their fresh grouper and tuna daily on the picturesque docks about 15 miles south of Myrtle Beach in Murrells Inlet. Local chefs let me in on a little secret: Much of the seafood caught in Murrells Inlet is exported more than 350 miles away to Atlanta, where distributors process and package the fish and ship it back to the massive number of buffets in the beach resort town. (There are about 1,800 full-service restaurants in the Myrtle Beach area and buffets are highly popular.)

Innovative local chefs, including James Clark of Waterscapes restaurant, negotiate directly with local fishermen to ensure the grouper on your plate was swimming in the ocean the previous day.

PHOTOS BY MYRTLE BEACH AREA CONVENTION AND VISITORS BUREAU

View of Murrells Inlet, South Carolina.

Clark, who is as conscientious about carbon footprints as taste, mixes local fresh shrimp and fish and simple seasonings with dishes inspired by his grandmother's traditional Southern cooking fare, such as collared greens and "chow chow," a relish of pickled garden vegetables.

"I don't like it to be over-complicated," said the modest Clark.

If you prefer your seafood even fresher, Murrells Inlet is only about a 20-minute car ride from Myrtle Beach.

Seafood lovers can stroll on the docks at the Crazy Sisters Marina and stop in to eat at any of more than a half dozen seafood restaurants along the beautiful marsh shoreline.

At Captain Dave's Dockside Restaurant, chef Richard Meyers - a New York City transplant - prepares his popular seared tuna sandwich and thick-cut steaks with little fanfare. Like many of the top chefs in the area, Meyers takes a simplistic approach to cooking, relying on minimal spices to enhance the food's fresh flavors.

A pack of frozen crab cakes from The Crab Cake Lady shop nearby tops the souvenir list for the avid foodie. An Mathis Springs carefully guards her secret recipe. The Vietnamese native has been selling her crab cakes out of her house since 1973 but shot to national stardom after her sons convinced her to open a small shop on the highway — recently profiled on the Travel Channel. If you want to bring home Springs' famous crab cakes, it's worth buying an ice cooler.

For a more metropolitan culinary experience, head to The Market Common — a new, pedestrian-friendly shopping district on a former Air Force base in Myrtle Beach — and take a break from shopping to dine at Roy & Sids, which is owned by a local restaurant group. The restaurant is known for its crispy portobello mushroom fries and fried green tomato appetizer.

You could very well find your stomach bulging from all the hefty, deep-fried Southern portions.

Walk off the gastronomic bliss with a stroll under the giant oak trees draped in Spanish moss at nearby Brookgreen Gardens, the site of four former rice plantations. The expansive grounds of the National Historic Landmark include a zoo, picturesque fountains and an impressive collection of sculptures.

No trip to the Myrtle Beach area would be complete without eating the local delicacy of shrimp and grits. Each restaurant puts its own individual twist on the traditional dish — adding country ham, bourbon cream sauce or even a fluffy country biscuit at the bottom of the bowl — making it hard to pick a favorite recipe and the perfect dish for a get-to-know-you introduction to the South. Ask any local about their favorite style and you'll likely be captivated by friendly stories of home-cooked food and the laid-back charm of the people of the region.

Speaking of shrimp, once you sink your teeth into the jumbo pan-seared shrimp at local favorite restaurant Franks in Pawleys Island, you just may slap one of those "Friends don't let friends eat imported shrimp" bumper stickers on your own car.

Brookgreen Gardens is a lovely spot for a stroll.

IF YOU go...

EATING THERE: Try the shrimp at Franks (Pawleys Island; 843-237-3030; www.franksandoutback.com). Waterscapes at Marina Inn in Myrtle Beach (843-913-2845; www.marinain-natgrandedunes.com/dining/din_waterscapes.aspx) is a good spot to try shrimp and grits, with a gourmet twist. Order the crab cakes eggs Benedict at local hangout the Sea Captain's House in Myrtle Beach (843-448-8082; www.seacaptains.com), an old turn-of-the-century beach house converted into a restaurant.

In Murrells Inlet, the seared tuna sandwich is the popular lunch order at Captain Dave's in Murrells Inlet (843-651-5850; www.captdavesdockside.com) or try a pot of steamed oysters at Nance's Creek Front Restaurant (843-651-2696; www.nancescreekfrontrestaurant.com). Take home frozen crab cakes from The Crab Cake Lady (843-651-0708; www.thecrabcakelady.com).

For a cheap and filling Southern breakfast of grits, pecan pancakes and gravy-soaked biscuits, eat at Spring House Family Restaurant in Myrtle Beach (843-626-5941; www.springhouserestaurants.com). The local family chain also offers weekday lunch specials that include a comfort-food entree, such as meatloaf, for under $6.

EXPLORING THERE: Brookgreen Gardens, (Murrells Inlet; 843-235-6000; www.brookgreen.org) has a zoo, picturesque fountains and an impressive collection of sculptures. Day passes for adults are $12.

Afternoon tea at Hopsewee Plantation in Georgetown (843-546-7891; www.hopsewee.com; $30 per person) is no small affair, and includes an hourlong tour.

STAYING THERE: The Marina Inn at Grande Dunes in Myrtle Beach (866-437-4113; www.marinainngradedunes.com) provides amenities including free bike rental, an indoor and outdoor pool and a fitness room. Special winter rates from $109 per night.

Dismal news at budget summit

Cuts on table this year, more next

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

By this time on most years, Town Manager Bill Griffin and Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh have a pretty good idea of where they stand with the next fiscal year's budget. This year, they don't even have a clear picture where they stand with the current year's budget.

This week, the state legislature gave Governor Deval Patrick the authority to cut what could end up being $500 million statewide — including local aid to towns — from the current fiscal year.

That means the budget that was set last spring could be facing cuts over the next few weeks. It also means the projected state aid cuts for fiscal 2010 would be built off the lower state aid numbers of fiscal 2009, making for even deeper cuts in state aid.

When state Rep. Garrett Bradley came before the School Committee in December, he told them to expect an eight to 10 percent cut in state aid. Now, according to Denise Walsh, Bradley told her state aid cuts for some communities, especially affluent communities like Cohasset, could be more than 10 percent in fiscal 2010.

Accordingly, Griffin is bracing the budget for a 15 percent cut in state aid in fiscal 2010 and each of his department heads have submitted budgets with a 5 percent reduction over this year's budget.

"I don't really want to go further until I know more," said Griffin. If the town is forced to take additional budget cuts, employees and positions will be affected, he said.

The Board of Selectmen, the School Committee and the Advisory Committee met Wednesday night to discuss the budget, but the overwhelming feeling was of uncertainty.

Griffin said at this point due to the lack of a clear picture from the state, the budget development is three weeks behind schedule. He suggested the town consider postponing a vote on the budget until later in April. Cohasset's Annual Town Meeting scheduled for Saturday, March 28 and it is one of the earliest in the state. With so much uncertainty, the building of the budget is in a compressed timeline.

If the town took that route a Special

Cohasset students take part in SSAC program

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"I want them to know how approachable art is. It really doesn't take anything at all, just a desire to do it."
— Lilly Cleveland, Artist in Residence

When Lilly Cleveland looks out at a group of elementary schoolchildren each Wednesday morning, she knows there is possibility. She knows that in 45-minutes, she might change the way each child thinks about art — and his or her ability to create it.

Each week, a group of elementary students from as far away as Bridgewater or as close as Deer Hill School, make their way to the South Shore Art Center for the Artist in Residence program, now in its fifth year. Cleveland, a watercolorist from Duxbury, is this year's Artist in Residence.

"I want them to know how approachable art is," Cleveland said. "It really doesn't take anything at all, just a desire to do it."

A fifth-grade group from the Deer Hill School took in this week's Artist in Residence program Wednesday morning; the program is targeted toward third-, fourth- and fifth-grade students. It's a hands-on experience where students learn about a specific technique or art process from an Art Center gallery artist, then are offered the chance to create their own masterpiece.

Because watercolor is Cleveland's "mother tongue," as she puts it, the program this year focuses on that medium. In past years the Artist in Residence has taught photography, pastel painting, collage and printmaking.

The students learn about Cleveland's artistic process and development as an artist. She brings along with her six paintings that represent how her artistry has changed over the years. Where she used to do a painting in one sitting, now she allows herself to let the painting evolve over weeks or even months.

"You can always build your visual language," says Cleveland, who didn't become serious about art until about 15 years ago. Growing up, she had an interest in creating art, but never fully pursued it until later in life. Yet, she always has had a keen eye for colors and shapes. "You learn how to incorporate that in to art later on."

The students learn how to mix colors and Cleveland even demonstrates how easy it is to paint. She uses photographs she takes as the muse for her paintings — something the young artist can do as well.

"Most of the painting is done in a few minutes," said Cleveland.

Cleveland was honored when asked to be this year's Artist in Residence. Despite the time commitment, Cleveland jumped at the opportunity. She does

MLK Day talk Saturday

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

This coming Tuesday morning, the first African-American president Barack Obama will be sworn into office —the day after the nation remembers Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and the civil rights movement.

On Saturday, Cohasset will welcome the Honorable Judge Julian Houston to speak about an emancipated slave who once lived on North Main Street and now rests in Woodside Cemetery and his own novel, "New Boy," about a boy coming of age during the civil rights movement.

The timely speaker is a part of the eigth annual Martin Luther King Jr. breakfast sponsored by the Diversity Committee and the Cohasset Clergy.

Turbines under scrutiny

Noise, balloon demonstration top discussion

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It was clear, almost from the outset, the latest public hearing on the proposed Cohasset Heights Wind Turbine project was neither going to be smooth nor brief.

The blustery meeting, so to speak, had many voices of opposition as the Planning Board gathered information on the project application.

The meeting atmosphere got tense at various points during the evening. On separate occasions, the Planning Board nearly stopped the meeting altogether when emotions ran high in both the audience and in members of the board. One of the Planning Board members called for a short recess within the first 30 minutes of the meeting after a resident began heatedly questioning a member of the Alternative Energy Committee (the recess was not taken). Then, twice later, when outbursts of applause made it difficult to hear, Planning Board chairman Al Moore said he would stop the meeting and continue to another day.

In between the high emotion of the crowded, standing room only meeting, there was discussion of the balloon demonstration done in December and the noise impacts study. The next public hearing will be held on Monday, Feb. 2.

With few exceptions, the speakers at the public hearing were largely opposed to the project. The proposed two 1.65-megawatt wind turbines will have noise, shadow flicker and visual impacts, particularly in the area immediately surrounding the development, including residences. The to-be-built Avalon apartments, the Sunrise Assisted Living facility, the Rose Hill Development are in the area that will feel the most effect.

A few speakers accused the planning board of having a predisposition toward the project. The Planning Board denied the accusation and explained they were in the information-gathering phase. Any deliberation or decision would be made after several more public hearings.

"I think you are mistaken. We are not predispositioned toward the applicant," said Moore, adding the forum was not the arena for discussion on the merits of the wind bylaw. "We have a certain duty to hear the applicant. We're not trying to be adversarial to the applicant as much as we aren't trying to be adversarial to the townspeople."

Planning Board vice chairman Stuart Ivimey expressed frustration at some comments that seemed to suggest the Planning Board was ready to make a decision — and the decision would be to approve.

The Mariner caught up with Tony Lanier this week at this home on South Main Street.

Name: Anthony W. "Tony" Lanier.

Occupation: Artist.

Best day of your life: Today.

Best vacation: Barcelona, Spain and Paris, France

Favorite season: Summer.

Favorite holiday: Fourth of July.

Favorite food: Croissant.

Best magazine: Art in America.

Best movies: "Chariots of Fire," "Ten Commandments" and "Stripes."

Best TV show: "History Detectives."

Best music: Doo Wop and Ragtime.

Pet peeve: Chaos.

Dumbest thing I've ever done: On a visit to the San Francisco area, I was so anxious to walk across the Golden Gate Bridge, that I left the rental car engine running.

Goal: As an artist, to combine history, collecting and archiving as the new medium for me to create.

Person you'd most like to meet: The person that calls me Anthony.

Biggest worry: Focus on the future.

Best part of Cohasset: The rocky shoreline, the town common and the Memorial Day celebration.

Veterans luncheons are scheduled

A Veterans Camaraderie Luncheon was initiated in September 2008, at Hearth 'n Kettle, 151 Main St., Weymouth, at the Main Street intersection. By popular demand, the luncheons will continue beginning at noon, on the third Wednesday of each month. Luncheons are scheduled for Jan. 21, Feb. 18, March 17, April 15 and May 20.

The luncheons allow the sharing of war anecdotes and help veterans avoid isolation, depression and collateral medical conditions that are often serious side effects of their experiences. Cost is $16 for a great meal. No reservations or prepayment are required. All veterans are welcome.

For information, call coordinators Paul Salvas at 781-337-0533 or Joe McElroy at 781-383-0505.

Town Census for 2009

The Town Census for 2009 will be mailed to each household within the next several weeks. Information obtained from the census is ultimately used to prepare the street list, annual registry of voters, school list, dog owner list and jury list. It also establishes eligibility for resident's tuition at state colleges, for veteran reimbursement, for senior citizen programs and other benefits. The census provides information to various departments throughout the town.

Dog forms are on a tear-off portion of the census forms. The licenses are valid through Dec. 31, 2009. Dog forms need to be returned as soon as possible with a current rabies certificate although residents may have recently renewed a 2008 license.

If a census was not received, call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100.

Full house on the Open Space Committee

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Over the years, O'Connell has been involved in various youth recreation organizations including the Cohasset Little League and the basketball boosters.

The Board of Selectmen appointed the final member of the Open Space Committee on Monday night. Liam O'Connell of Linden Drive expressed interest in being a part of the committee, which has recently been revitalized as the town updates its open space and recreation five-year plan.

O'Connell is the father of four and has been a Cohasset resident since 1992. Over the years, he has been involved in various youth recreation organizations including the Cohasset Little League and the basketball boosters.

"I am interested in recreational opportunities for the youth of Cohasset, the conservation protection issues that are important to the town, and open space issues that are related to both concerns," O'Connell wrote in his letter of interest.

At the meeting, O'Connell spoke about the challenges facing recreation in town. His number one concern was field availability.

Federal Census takers sought

Multiple opportunities and positions are available for taking the 2010 census. To apply, call toll free 866-861-2010 to sign up for a written multiple-choice test or additional information and practice test available at the Web site at www.2010censusjobs.gov.

By working the 2010 federal census, people will help the federal government to apportion the seats in the House of Representatives, draw state legislative districts and distribute more the $300 billion annually in federal, state, local and tribal funds.

Census positions are temporary and pay competitive wages. A wide variety of jobs are available with the greatest need for census takers. Census takers work in their own communities updating address lists and interviewing household members. People may qualify if:

- They are a U.S. citizen.
- They are not a U.S. citizen, and only if no U.S. citizens are available, especially in areas where bilingual ability is a necessary qualification.
- At least 18 years old.
- Have a valid Social Security number.
- Take a written test of basic skills.
- Pass a background check.
- Have a valid driver's license – for field jobs only.
- Commit to 3 1/2 days of paid training.

Rotary speaker

Dr. Charles Morin will be coming to speak to the Rotary Club on Jan. 26 at 6:30 p.m at the Lightkeeper's Residence on Government Island. He will be talking about memory, memory loss, dementia and Alzheimer's, caring for a love one with the disease, and how the sandwich generation is coping?

Dr. Morin is a Cohasset resident that has a practice in Weymouth.

Please contact Jean Roche 781-589-0461 if you can attend. Dinner will be served.

Bradley district office hours

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, has a district office at the Sons of Italy Hall, 88 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Hingham.

The office will be staffed most Fridays, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., with the exception of the third Friday of every month when the office will be open from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Hingham, Hull and Cohasset residents are welcome to visit or call the district office at 781-749-3331. An appointment is not necessary.

Residents may also call Bradley's State House office Monday through Friday at 617-722-2460.

POLICE BEAT

Weather-related accidents add up

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Icy and snow-covered roads were the cause of most of the accidents over the past week, police said.

Monday (Jan. 5)

- 6:32 a.m., at Cedar and Hull streets, a single car accident occurred when a 1998 GMC pickup truck driven by a 38-year-old Weymouth man, hit a pole. There were no injuries, no tow and no damage to the pole, police said.
- 7:40 a.m., a single car accident on Border Street by Atlantica occurred when a 1997 Jeep Wrangler driven by a 25-year-old Cohasset woman hit a pole. There were no reported injuries and no tow.
- 7:42 a.m., a single car accident took place on Border Street by the Olde Salt House: a 2008 Chevrolet pickup, operated by a 41-year-old Scituate woman, slid into a pole; no reported injuries and no tow, police said.
- 7:50 a.m., another single-car accident on Border Street involving a 2002 Chevrolet van, operated by a 41-year-old Fall River man, that hit a pole. No injuries but the driver, who is Brazilian and did not have a Massachusetts driver's license, is being summonsed to court for being unlicensed. The owner of the pickup, a 48-year-old Westborough man, is also being summonsed for allowing an improper operator to drive his truck. It is incumbent on vehicle owners to ensure those who drive their cars have valid licenses, police said.

Tuesday (Jan. 6)

- 12:31 p.m., two-car crash on King Street by Dunkin Donuts. A 1999 Ford Taurus, driven by a 65-year-old Hull man, rear-ended at 2005 Toyota Corolla, operated by a 44-year-old Weymouth woman. Both cars were headed south and the Corolla was waiting to take a left into Dunkin Donuts when the accident occurred. There were no tows and no reported injuries, police said. The driver of the Taurus was cited for following too close.
- 4:34 p.m., a two car crash involving a 2000 Volvo S70 sedan, operated by a 17-year-old Scituate girl, that rear-ended a 1997 Mercury, driven by a 46-year-old Scituate man. Both were headed south on Route 3A. The operator of the Volvo was not paying attention and rear-ended the Mercury that was slowing down to make a left into Tedeschi Plaza. The Volvo was towed; there were no reported injuries and the 17-year-old teen was cited for following too close.

Wednesday (Jan. 7)

- 12:49 p.m., single-car crash in the parking lot at CVS off Route 3A occurred when a 60-year-old Brockton woman in a rental car driving through the lot did not notice the light pole and hit it. There were no reported injuries, the car was not towed and no citation was issued as the accident occurred on private property.
- 4:28 p.m., single car accident near Hull and Cedar streets occurred when a 2005 Honda Accord, operated by a 17-year-old Cohasset girl, slid off the road into some trees due to the icy road. The driver was not cited; she was not injured but the car was towed.

Thursday (Jan 8)

- 8:13 a.m., three-car, chain-reaction accident at 3A & Pond Street. A 2001 VW GIT rear-ended a 2007 Ford Focus that then rear-ended a 1999 Ford van. All were headed south toward Sdituate. The 25-year-old Abington man operating the VW was Brazilian and did not have a Massachusetts license. He is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle, police said. The VW had to be towed. The Ford Focus and Ford van were drivable. There were no reported injuries. A 29-year-old Quincy woman was operating the Focus and a 51-year-old Hull man was driving the van, police said.

Saturday (Jan. 10)

- 12:02 a.m., a single car accident occurred when a 2002 Toyota pickup, operated by a 53-year-old Hull man, traveling north on Jerusalem Road hit a stonewall at a curve. The vehicle was totaled. The operator was transported to South Shore Hospital with facial lacerations. He was issued a citation for failure to stay within marked lanes, police said.
- 12:34 a.m., single car crash involving a Jeep driven by a 17-year-old, went down the hill on Norfolk Road, slid on the snow and ice, grazed a pole and got stuck on a wall. The Jeep had to be towed off the wall, police said.

Sunday, Jan. 11

- 12:38 p.m., single car accident involving a 1999 Ford pickup, operated by a 42-year-old Scituate woman. The truck slid down the hill on Margin Street and tapped a wall at the end of the street. There was minor damage to the pickup, no damage to the wall, no tow and no injuries, police said.
- 3:58 p.m., single-car accident occurred when a 1999 Toyota Camry, operated by a 36-year-old Marshfield man, swerved to miss another car that had stopped to take a left. The operator lost control and hit a tree. No reported injuries but the vehicle was towed.

Parked MV

A report last week of a suspicious 2007 Ford Fusion parked for two weeks at Cohasset Plaza turned out to belong to a corporation in New Jersey. The person who had been using the company car had been laid off and left it in the lot to be picked up, police said.

B& E reported

The window to an expensive car parked in the garage of a vacant house off Atlantic Avenue was broken and the car was rifled through. Nothing appears to have been taken and police are investigating the incident that was reported on Tuesday (Jan. 5).

Chinese food

Police responded to a call last Tuesday (Jan. 6) about a car full of kids parked across the street from the caller who said the car was being turned on and off, and the lights were going on and off. As it turned out, the vehicle owner had had an argument with his mother. He and a friend were eating some Chinese food before going back into the house.

Lost car

Police assisted a woman in a parking lot that thought her car had been stolen last week. The officer took the woman around the parking lot until she recognized a car. She had apparently forgotten which car she had driven to the store.

Noise, balloon demonstration top windmill discussion

"We are in the information-gathering phase. I suspect the vast majority here want the conclusion…my frustration is we are trying to find out the facts here," said Ivimey. "There is a sense of panic that we're going to snap our fingers and approve this project…take a deep breath, relax and let's focus on the data."

Balloons

What was eventually termed a "failure" by Planning Board chairman Al Moore, the balloon demonstration was never able to get fully off the ground. The three-day, Saturday to Monday (Dec. 13, 14, 15), endeavor was never able to get the weather balloons higher than 300-feet off the ground — about 150-feet short of the actual height of the proposed turbines (from ground to blade tip).

"The demonstration proved there was good wind on the site," said project applicant and CCI-Energy president, Jim Sweeney. To supplement the failed balloon test, the applicant will be providing photo simulations of the wind turbines from various locations around town will be brought forth at the next meeting.

During this discussion, Sweeney said there is serious consideration being given to moving the turbine that would be situated closer to Route 3A.

"To a certain extent, people got some feeling of the height," said John Modzelewski, the town's consulting civil engineer.

The balloons, even not at the proposed height of the turbines, could be seen around town as far as Sandy Beach.

Moore expressed concern at not being able to fully grasp the visual impact of the project on the town.

"I'm concerned there are many impacts on this project, but the visual impact will affect the most people. I don't want to short shrift it…it's important to get a handle on the visual, I don't want to give up just because the wind was blowing," said Moore. "There is a sense with all of use that we need to get a handle (on the size and visual impact)."

Several residents spoke out about some of the problems that occurred during the balloon demonstration.

• Maureen McCarthy, Pleasant Street, said the balloons which were approximately four feet in diameter were not an accurate representation of the turbine hub, which is approximately 16-feet at its widest berth. "It's such a trick to the public…one can't truly grasp the size of this beast."

• Jim Huse, Cedar Acres Lane, asked what the planning board saw as a detrimental visual impact. "It seems to me this is going to have a huge visual impact on the town, it might not be appropriate for the town, site."

"We're not trying to be adversarial to the applicant as much as we aren't trying to be adversarial to the townspeople."

— Al Moore, Planning Board

• Elizabeth Durant, North Main Street, was one of the few voices that spoke in favor of the turbines. "It would be such a privilege for Cohasset to have windmills."

• Jeff Patterson of Sanctuary Pond and Planning Board member Stuart Ivimey had a brief argument when Patterson pointed out the bylaw calls for the turbines visual effects to be minimized. Ivimey challenged Patterson in asking him if the limit was 75-meters, would he be happy? Patterson did not get the chance to fully answer before Moore recognized another citizen.

• Sean Mullaney, Jerusalem Road, requested clarification about how the planning board is evaluating the project and if they had the tools under the law to deny the project.

• Paul Ognibene, 44 Beach St., asked the planning board to consider another test to better judge the height of the turbines. He offered hovering a helicopter at the proposed height as one idea. The developer, Jim Sweeney, said the photo renderings would do a "much better job" in representing what the turbines will look like.

• Melissa Schorr, Cedar Street, said she was unsatisfied with the professionalism of the balloon demonstration. "It was done in a shoddy way," providing examples as the small sign placed on 3A to notify the public of the demonstration and the fact the balloon never got to the actual proposed height.

The Planning Board will review the photo simulations and decide where to go from there as far as the visual impacts at the next public hearing.

Noise

The meeting has gone on for nearly two hours before the main event — a presentation on the noise impacts —came before the board.

One of the stipulations of the wind energy bylaw, and state regulations, is any new source of noise will not increase ambient noise levels by 10 decibels or more. In addition, the source cannot produce a pure tone, like fire engine sirens or the whistling of a steam from a vent.

The town hired a noise specialist to look at the applicant's study: Jim Barnes of Acentech based in Cambridge.

At the end of the meeting, it still wasn't clear whether the project is meeting the state noise guidelines. Sweeney said they were seeking waivers from several surrounding properties including Hingham Lumber, Avalon and Sunrise Assisted Living. The Planning Board told Sweeney, the president of CCI-Energy, there is no provision for waivers in the bylaw or state regulations and would not be accepted.

"We want to make sure they are happy," said Sweeney.

There needs to be some clarification of the bylaw as to whether it applies to inhabited residences, a residential district or a property line. Both Sunrise Assisted Living and Avalon properties are zoned for industrial use.

The town's noise consultant, Jim Barnes noted the latest wind turbine models are significantly quieter than turbines erected 10 years ago.

"The new style has a broad-based swoosh sound," said Barnes.

The Planning Board requested the applicant provide a sound analysis for the same five points they specifically looked at for the shadow flicker study, which included Sanctuary Pond Road and Forest Avenue.

"Make the study relate to those specific neighborhoods, that's where the rubber meets the road," said Ivimey.

Planning Board member Charles Samuelson said if the project is approved and the turbines erected, the developer is taking the risk the sound will be greater than 10dB.

"If (the noise) is outside the bounds, the town is not going to allow the turbines to be turned on," Samuelson said.

As the meeting wrapped up, Paul Barry, the owner of the property where the turbines are proposed, said he was more than disappointed in the tone of the meeting.

"We're going to beat this to death when we all know its needed in this country," said Barry. "I think this is the right thing to do. I'm disgusted at the way it is being approached. If I had my way I'd stop the project."

The Planning Board is continuing the public hearing on the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project on Monday, February, 2 at 7:30p.m.

Turbine project in brief

The application is a landmark project as it is the first for the town and the first application under the Wind Energy Conversion Facility bylaw passed at the 2008 Annual Town Meeting.

The project application, put forth by a private developer, CCI-Energy, is proposing the installation of two AAER 1.65-megawatt sized wind turbines sited off Route 3A on the hill behind Graham Waste Services and Hingham Lumber. The project is being called the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project.

Jim Sweeney, president of CCI-Energy, is the primary name on the applications.

The turbines will be 100-meters (328-feet) tall from the ground to the hub, or nacelle, where the blades originate. The three blades will extend 41-meters off of that hub making the tip of the structure 462-feet (141-meters) above ground.

Items on the docket for future meetings

• Discussion on the re-location of the turbine closest to Route 3A. The developers said moving the siting of the turbines could minimize some of the turbine's impact. The turbine's base is proposed to be moved about 350 feet.

• Due to the movement of the turbines, the flicker and noise studies will have to be repeated.

• Presentation of photo simulations of the proposed turbines. The simulations will compare the size of the proposed turbines to the size of Hull Wind II.

• Additional noise studies for specific locations/neighborhoods around the proposed siting.

• Possible mitigation measures to minimize possibility for ice throw.

• Discussion on how emergency personnel could access the tower in the case of fire or medical situation during routine maintenance.

'Anonymous' documents

Before the applicant began his presentation for the evening, Planning Board Chairman Al Moore noted the Planning Board office has received an impressive submission fairly large in size from what looked to be a citizens' group.

"We welcome input but we've talked to counsel and if input is submitted anonymously it will not be considered," said Moore. "Somebody has to take responsibility for it."

Planning Board member Michael Westcott took Moore's comment one step further by adding he believed the use of a committee name, sounding like a town committee was "deceptive" for those in the community.

"There has been lots of information widely distributed that is one-sided and bias," said Planning Board vice chairman Charles Samuelson. "The Board and the citizens of Cohasset need to understand the pros and cons of the issue and come to their own decision."

Later in the meeting, Conrad Langenhagen of Sanctuary Pond Road took partial responsibility for the packet of information supplied to the Planning Board. Langenhagen said the packet was from the Cohasset Wind Advisory Committee, a citizen group.

"All the information was accurate, it might have been biased, but it was accurate," said Langenhagen. "I apologize for the lack of protocol."

Langenhagen said he would supply other names of the people in the group this week.

"If we get something anonymous, there is really no way to verify the content," Moore explained.

In an e-mail to the Mariner on Tuesday, Langenhagen said he forwarded the e-mail with the 52-page document to each of the Planning Board members directly from his personal e-mail account and signed it with his name and phone number. The document was also hand delivered to the Planning Board office by another member of the Cohasset Wind Advisory Committee.

"To say it was submitted anonymously is disingenuous at best," said Langenhagen.

Town Meeting or a continuation of Town Meeting would have to be considered.

There was a sense across all the boards that whatever measures had be taken in the budget would have to be clearly communicated to the public. Would teachers, police officers, firefighters have to be laid off? Which programs or services would be affected? Would fees have to be raised? Is the town looking at an override?

School Committee chairman Rick Flynn said on the school side budget cuts might have to come from personnel. Salaries make up nearly three-quarters of the school's budget. But, programs like the sixth grade foreign language, support services, athletics would also be looked at.

"We're all in this together, probably more than any other year."

School Committee chairman Rick Flynn

Advisory Committee chairman Sam Wakeman said the town could be looking at an override at Town Meeting and if so, it needs to be clearly defined what a non-override situation looks like in each department.

"If there is going to be an override, it is not just going to be for the schools," said Advisory Committee member Tucker Glavin as all town departments are struggling.

As the discussion progressed, School Committee member Steve Fusco said it was a "dangerous discussion" talking about specifics and budget cuts when not all the information was available.

Selectman Karen Quigley took it one step further, "our world is upside down right now, things are not the way they used to be…people are being very restrictive in their own personal situations, I think we have to be realistic and cautious moving forward here."

She said many residents have lost their jobs in the economic crisis and discussion about an override when people are already struggling with paying their tax bills was troubling.

"We're all in this together and it's tough times and tough decisions…It maybe we don't have everything we want, but I don't like throwing override out in the first couple of hours we're talking about budget," Quigley said.

Pat Waters of the Advisory Committee said if there ever was a good environment for diminished services, this was the year.

All seemed to agree as the budget season progresses there needed to be a continued and specific dialogue about what's facing the town as far as cuts in personnel and services.

"We're all in this together, probably more than any other year," said Flynn.

Davis appointed President and COO of GateHouse Media

GateHouse Media, Inc. announced last Friday (Jan. 9) the appointment of Kirk A. Davis as President and Chief Operating Officer. Davis previously served as President and Chief Executive Officer of GateHouse Media New England. In his new role, Davis will be responsible for setting the strategic direction and overseeing all operations of GateHouse's 92 daily publications, more than 285 weekly publications and 260 locally focused Web sites, which includes the Cohasset Mariner and Wicked Local Cohasset.

Kirk A. Davis, President and Chief Operating Officer for GateHouse Media, Inc.

Rick Daniels, President and CEO of GateHouse Media New England.

GateHouse Media currently serves local audiences of more than 10 million per week across 21 states through hundreds of community publications and local websites.

Michael E. Reed, GateHouse Media's Chief Executive Officer, said, "Kirk Davis has a proven track record of successfully operating local media companies in his more than 20 years experience in the industry. Kirk's experience in the industry, knowledge of local newspaper operations, leadership qualities and his current experience with GateHouse make him the logical choice for this position. We are excited to have Kirk assume this role and look forward to the significant contributions he will make to GateHouse."

Davis joined GateHouse Media in June 2006 when GateHouse acquired Enterprise NewsMedia at which time he was appointed CEO of GateHouse Media New England. He has more than 20 years of experience in the newspaper industry covering all aspects of the business. Prior to joining GateHouse, Davis held a variety of positions at Thomson Newspapers, Ingersoll Publications and Community Newspaper Company. Davis is also the past Chairman of the Board for the Suburban Newspapers of America (SNA) and currently serves on the board of the SNA Foundation. He also serves on the Board of Governors of the New England Newspaper Association (NENA) and last year was elected to the board of the Audit Bureau of Circulation (ABC).

"I am excited about my new role at GateHouse and I look forward to working with our management team across the organization to strengthen our operations," said Davis.

Rick Daniels, a South Shore resident, will be promoted to replace Davis as President and CEO of GateHouse Media New England. Daniels, who lives in Cohasset and is a former Hingham resident, was previously the Chief Operating Officer for GateHouse Media New England. Prior to joining GateHouse Media New England in July 2007, Daniels held various positions at The Boston Globe and its affiliated companies, including President from 2001 through 2006.

GateHouse Media, Inc., headquartered in Fairport, New York, is one of the largest publishers of locally based print and online media in the United States as measured by its 92 daily publications. GateHouse Media currently serves local audiences of more than 10 million per week across 21 states through hundreds of community publications and local websites. GateHouse Media is traded on the over-the-counter market under the symbol "GHSE".

Selectmen take next step on land purchase off Beach St.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Board of Selectmen voted to take the next step toward purchasing 12 acres of land located off Beach Street and behind the Town Hall.

In a letter sent this week, the Selectmen officially requested the technical advice and assistance from the Trust for Public Lands, a national non-profit land conservation firm. As part of their services, which are provided at no cost to the town, the Trust for Public Lands will help the town develop strategies around land protection, acquisition and funding.

The letter indicates the Selectmen are interested in pursuing the purchase of the land.

The property, known as the Morrissey property, abuts or is in proximity to several of the Cohasset Conservation Trust properties (Great Brewster Woods, Deans Meadow, Sumner Smith Overlook, Blake property) as well as some undeveloped town parcels.

The Trust for Public Lands has already begun preliminary discussions with the property's realtor. The property is owned by Ellen Morrissey of 488 Jerusalem Road. The 12-acre property includes two access points: one from the Town Hall parking lot and the other from Beach Street.

According to Trust for Public Land project manager, Chris LaPointe, who came before the Selectmen last week, the TPL works with cities and towns to identify potential space for open space and/or recreational purposes, then serves as a partner and facilitator in the purchase of the land. The TPL will help negotiate the land purchase, do environmental assessments and help to identify funding sources at no cost to the municipality.

The land has been up for sale several times over the past decade and for a time was considered for a three building senior housing development. If the town purchases the land, it will come off the town's tax rolls.

Any land purchase would have to be approved by Town Meeting. The issue will certainly be on the Selectmen's agenda in the near future.

BRIEFLY

No citizen's petitions filed

Although Town Meeting is still over two months away, the deadline for citizen's petitions has passed. No citizen's petitions were submitted to the town by the deadline. A citizen's petition, which for Annual Town Meeting must be signed by 10 certified, register voters of the town in order to be placed on the warrant. A citizen's petition is the only guaranteed way to get an article on the warrant. The Board of Selectmen are able to place other articles on the warrant as it gets closer to Town Meeting.

Nomination papers

As the Mariner went to press, just three candidates have stopped in at the Town Clerk's office to request nomination papers to seek election. Ted Carr of the Board of Selectmen, John McNabb of the Water Commission and Nancy Barrett of the Housing Authority have signaled their intent to run for re-election to their respective positions.

Positions available for the 2009 town election include: Selectmen — one three-year position; School Committee – two three-year positions; Trustees Paul Pratt Memorial Library – three three-year positions; Assessor—one three-year position; Board of Health — one three-year position; Planning Board - one for five-year position; Recreation Commission – one five-year position; Housing Authority – one five-year position; Sewer Commission - one three-year position; and Water Com-mission - one three-year position.

The last day to take out nomination papers is Thursday, Feb. 12. In order to hold a position you must be registered voter of the town. In order to hold an elected office, you must be a registered voter of the town. It is important to note that you are not running for office until you take out papers and the Board of Registrars certifies your signatures.

Annual Town Election will be held on Saturday, April 4.

teach art classes but mostly for adult students and has found the children's perspective to be both inspirational and refreshing.

"They are so open, so apt to go home and try this. They are willing to make a mistake and you don't always see that with adults," said Cleveland.

Judging from some of the notes sent to the Art Center in thanks, the Artist in Residence program is creating budding artists.

"I can't wait to go to CVS and get my watercolor paints and crayons," said one student.

Another said, "it was exciting and interesting seeing the limits of water colors and pastels."

"Your paintings have inspired me to try to make water color masterpieces of my own," another student wrote.

"Hopefully we're helping them on the way to being young artists," said Cleveland.

Sam Greenip uses several color palettes to produce his work of art.

Deer Hill fifth-grader, Bebe Davis, places her finished watercolor on a table with the others

Jake Bennett works on a mountain scene that he is painting using watercolors.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

STAY WARM

Hello Cohasset, are you staying warm in this bitterly cold weather? Please make sure to protect your pipes in your homes, children and animals and if you can, any elderly people who may need some help in this tricky weather time. If it is any help, I did just read that the first day of Spring is in March!

Sorry, it is all I can throw out there to help us look ahead, WAY AHEAD!! Stay Warm Cohasset and now, on with our news for the week.

NDA STARS

Here is some fun news from Notre Dame Academy in Hingham. The NDA Players will be performing Thoroughly Modern Millie Friday, Jan. 16 at 7 p.m., and Sunday, Jan. 18 at 2 p.m. at Notre Dame Academy. Local students, Kelly Volk, Rebecca Dickinson, and Kathryn Hillman will be performing in this musical. Tickets are $7 for students and seniors and $10 for general admission and available at the door. This will be so fun for all to go and see. ENJOY!

THINK LAWNS

The January meeting of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset will take place at Bancroft Hall on Tuesday Jan. 27th at 9:30 a.m. This change in location for the general meeting only applies to the January meeting. The speaker is Debbie Cook, the manager of the Greenscapes Program. Her topic is Greenscapes: Strategies for Creating Beautiful and Healthy Lawns.

Debbie will discuss simple changes that can take a lawn from chemical and water dependence to a thriving, healthy mini eco-system that retains water.

FOR CHARITY

The Sea Chest Consignment Shop is part of the newly formed non-profit, Seawinds Charity, Inc. The mission of Seawinds and Sea Chest is to raise and donate funds to worthy local help-providing groups, including the Cohasset Food Pantry that has been helping local families in need for more than 20 years.

CYBSA SIGNUPS

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association will hold its annual registration for the upcoming baseball and softball season beginning January 1, 2009 through February 10, 2009. Visit www.CYBSA.net to register online. See this week's sports section for all the details!

MASSASOIT

Massasoit Community College has named the following Cohasset students to the 2008 fall dean's list: Marissa Baldwin, Myles Collins-Wooley, Rhonda Hinman and Derek Thayer.

Congratulations!

OUR WORLD

The Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum has openings in several classes and workshops beginning next week for ages 2 and up. Also, Creative Nites in Our World run every Friday night from 5:30-9:30 with a new theme each week.

Last, but certainly not least is the registration period for the "Creative Kids in Our World" February Vacation Camp. Each day from Tuesday through Friday will be a different theme for ages 2-10 from 11-3 each day. Late afternoon sessions will also be offered for those who need or would like some time from 3-5. For more information on this week of super time fun and/or information on the parties, classes and workshops offered, please send an email to info@ourworldcgdm.org or go to the website at www.ourworldcgdm.org.

That is all for this cold and chilly week. Send in all of your news, photos and announcements to me no later than next Tuesday by 5:00 pm for inclusion in next Friday's copy.

Story of emancipated slave to be shared

rare manuscript: an autobiographical account of John Washington's journey from Virginia slave to free man. Washington spent the last five years of his life in Cohasset, living with his son, James, in a North Main Street home. The manuscript contains details about his life as a slave, his personal involvement in the Civil War, his escape to freedom and his feelings literally at the moment of emancipation.

"It is a great responsibility (to have the manuscript). I try to weigh each decision that will affect the manuscript very carefully," said Houston.

Recently, Washington's manuscript along with another ex-slave's account of emancipation, appear in David Blight's "A Slave No More."

Both Houston's "New Boy" and Blight's "A Slave No More" are this year's companion books for the Cohasset Reads Together program sponsored by the library.

Houston inherited John Washington's original manuscript from his mother, Alice Jackson Stuart, and he will speak on how the 134-page handwritten autobiography "Memorys of the Past" came to published at the breakfast.

"It must have been an interesting transition from slavery to an all black community in Washington D.C. to virtually an all white community in Cohasset," said Houston.

Readers may draw parallels to Houston's "New Boy," which accounts the fictional story of 15-year-old Rob Garrett as the first black student at a Connecticut prep school in the late 1950s duringthe civil rights movement.

Judge Houston came to the art of writing later in life. He is a retired Associate Justice of the Superior Court of Massachusetts. He, like his protagonist, attended a predominantly white boarding school in Connecticut in the 1950s. Houston framed the story based on his own life experiences, but most of his protagonist's experiences are fictional.

If you go...

- What: The eighth Annual Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Breakfast sponsored by the Diversity Committee and Cohasset Clergy.
- When: Saturday, Jan. 17; breakfast from 9 to 10a.m., keynote speaker at 10a.m.
- Where: First Parish Unitarian Universalist Parish House, 23 North Main St.
- Cost: $5 per person, $15 per family.]

The inspiration for "New Boy" came out of a short story. When his writing teacher simply asked him to "write me a story, any story" Houston wrote as short story based on a situation he recalled from his days at boarding school when a Italian-American friend (named "Vinnie" in the book) is mercilessly hazed by his classmates.

The story, he says, came out easily and fluidly.

"I just didn't think about it, I just started to write," he says. "(The situation) stayed with me for 40 years, it really bothered me the way he had been treated."

He described the writing experience as "cathartic."

When he found an agent, she encouraged him to develop the short story into a young adult novel. "New Boy" was published in 2005.

One of the things he would like readers to take away from "New Boy" is the openness in which people expressed their prejudices during the late 1950s, whether it was because of class or ethnic background. He also hopes readers gain a great understanding of what it was like in the late 1950s and early 1960s, specifically for a minorities at a boarding school.

Houston is still writing and has completed a sequel to "New Boy." He is currently in search of a publisher for the novel.

Lawmakers: take a hike

Recently elected state senators and representatives were sworn in at a State House ceremony on Wednesday morning (Jan. 7). By that night, probably before the newbies had time to settle into their new digs at the State House, they were being notified of a $3,203.02 raise. Not a bad start to the New Year!

Nothing personal against any of the legislators, particularly those just taking office, but something about the timing of the pay raise doesn't seem right.

With Gov. Deval Patrick sharpening his ax and heading back to the chopping block to slash another $1 billion from the state budget, doling out 5.5 percent raises hardly seems like the right thing to do, even if it is covered and authorized thanks to a constitutional amendment approved by voters in 1998.

That doesn't mean legislators have to accept the increase in pay. In fact, many have come out and said they flat-out refuse to take the money, while others, said they would donate the raise to a worthy cause.

Democratic state Rep. Garrett Bradley of Hingham, has said he will forego the raise.

According to Republican state Sen. Robert Hedlund's chief of staff, Ted Langell, Hedlund will either reject the raise or donate it to charity.

Accepting the raises would seem to go against everything our illustrious leaders have been spouting recently as they've addressed the dire economic situation. Massachusetts is losing jobs, losing population and losing retail sales tax revenue. And if you get beyond our economic crisis in the Bay State and look at the big picture, things are even worse nationally with the bailouts of Wall Street, the auto industry and a general feeling of despair.

Out here in the real world, most companies have resorted to cost-saving measures that include salary freezes and no raises. For those who still have jobs, many have been forced to take pay cuts or to take unpaid time off.

This announcement comes at probably the worst time in recent history as far as voter confidence in our elected leaders, coming off a year that saw state Sens. Dianne Wilkerson and James Marzelli facing legal troubles resulting in the two being arrested, Wilkerson on charges of corruption and extortion following an 18-month investigation by the FBI. Marzelli was arrested on charges of lewd conduct with a woman in a park. In the House, Speaker Sal DiMasi, who has publicly stated he will take his raise, has been under scrutiny by ethics investigations and a close associate has been indicted and arraigned on 10 different counts related to alleged violations of the lobbying laws.

DiMasi was reelected last week by an overwhelming margin to a third full term as the leader of the House, taking 85 percent of the vote, and of course taking the 5.5 percent raise in pay.

All of that adds up to a publicity nightmare and a waning lack of confidence in our elected officials, not a 5.5 percent raise.

The legislators themselves can wash their hands of the raise thanks to the constitutional amendment. The governor is obligated to increase or decrease legislative salaries biennially at the same rate as increases or decreases in the median household income for the commonwealth for the preceding two-year period. In a letter to State Treasurer Timothy Cahill announcing the raise, Patrick said based on the federal census American Community Survey and reports of average weekly wages that the median household income for the Commonwealth for the preceding two-year period increased by 5.5 percent.

What does that mean in terms of dollars and cents?

With local aid on the chopping block and the state facing its toughest economic times in recent memory, the 5.5 percent increase represents a $3,203.02 raise for each of the state's 40 senators and 160 representatives. The base salary increases from $58,236.74 to $61.439.76 and over the course of the two-year session will cost taxpayers $1.28 million. House and Senate leaders and committee chairmen also get bumps in their base salaries. DiMasi and Senate President Terry Murray receive a $35,000 stipend for their leadership positions and committee chairs can make anywhere between $7,500 and $15,000 in additional pay.

Apparently for some in power positions, it does pay to be a politician. Congratulations on the raise, now get back to the business at hand.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Firefighters appreciate community support

TO THE EDITOR:

To all the residents and business owners of the Town of Cohasset:

On the behalf of the all the firefighters proud to serve your community, we would like to thank all of you for your kindness and generosity this past holiday season. Your cards and baked goods were enjoyed by all and your thoughtfulness made our days at work that much brighter.

To all of you a healthy and happy 2009!

Rob Forde
For Cohasset Firefighters Local 2804

A heartfelt Thank You!

TO THE EDITOR:

We would like to thank all the families from St. Stephen's Church, the Joseph Osggod and Deer Hill schools who so generously contributed to the Cradles to Crayon's Drive this year. With your help we surpassed our expectations and exceeded last year's collection. C2C has already notified us that the goods collected and dropped off last Friday have already begun to make their way to needy families throughout Eastern Massachusetts. We would like to extend special thanks to Roger Hill, Bill Kannaly, Ted Holland and Tu for their extra support in helping load and deliver these essential donations.

There are a lot more people who are a little bit warmer this winter due to Cohasset's generosity.

Thank you!

Wrestling Boosters thanks sponsors

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset High School Wrestling Team recently hosted its 18th Annual Wrestling Tournament on Jan. 10. This year a total of 10 teams from across the region participated in the all-day event.

The Cohasset Wrestling Booster Club provides concessions and T-shirts for the team participants and fans at the tournament. The proceeds from these sales all go to the Booster Club to provide uniforms and equipment, as well as senior scholarships for the wrestling team. The Booster Club is generously supported by numerous community businesses. We would like to acknowledge and thank our many sponsors who have so generously supported us throughout the years.

Our thanks go to Atlantic Bagel, Dunkin Donuts at Fiori's Exxon, Pizza Box, Route 3A Pizza and Grill, Cohasset Pizza House, Starbucks and any and all individuals who have devoted their time, and energy to help our Cohasset Wrestlers.

HEALTH NOTES

Some windmill talk is hot air

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

This week has seen lots of discussion of the windmill issue. Some time ago, the Board of Health concluded that under circumstances in which windmills are now being proposed for Cohasset, they represent little risk to the health of the average Cohasset citizen.

The Board had studied the report of the Alternative Energy Committee, a group of highly qualified citizens appointed by the Troika (Chairman of Selectmen, Chairman of the Advisory Board and the Town Moderator) which listed the benefits and drawbacks of a proposed plan for wind turbine development as well as any other material we could find. Recognizing that the proposal of the developer was sure to be considered and would raise not a little controversy, a BoH memorandum was submitted to the Planning Board which in part said: "A careful review of the current material on windmill health reveals reports of discomfort from excessive noise, a relatively benign condition and of little concern to health officials".

...it seems to be disingenuous to complain of the swoosh of a windmill or two.

In a Town where heavy construction noise is endured almost non-stop, several highways, the train, leaf blowers and other noisy machines are a way of existence, it seems to be disingenuous to complain of the swoosh of a windmill or two.

Population growth and national political issues have contributed to a situation in Town, which is sure to cause all of us considerable discomfort if not major readjustment of our lifestyle. As the Town's affluence has grown we have seen the construction of ever-grander houses in increasing numbers and the continued breakup of the larger landholdings within the Town. Fortunately, several groups in Cohasset have seen to the preservation of large tracts of open space that continues to attract new citizens to the Town. The three organizations most responsible for management of the Town's affairs are The Planning Board, The Zoning Board of Appeals, and the Town Meeting.

At a Planning Board meeting to consider wind turbines last Monday, a number of citizens saw fit to present an unruly demonstration of their lack of understanding of the workings of Town Government and an embarrassing ignorance of the due

Jerusalem Road one-day closing

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Important News – Impending Closure of Jerusalem Road – Anyone who uses Jerusalem Road to travel from North Main Street to Nichols Road and beyond knows that this road is under temporary traffic light control due to one-way travel between Steep Rocks and Bow Street. To refresh your memory, the reason is that during the sewer construction the edge of the road toward the marsh became unstable and was not deemed safe for two-way traffic. By reducing the traffic to one lane it could be kept away from the outside edge of the road and confined to the portion of Jerusalem Road that was deemed to be safe. To handle this traffic arrangement alternate one-way traffic under the control of a pair of temporary traffic lights has been employed since late last summer.

At the Special Town Meeting this past fall, the residents voted $270,000 for a project to stabilize the Jerusalem Road wall. As of this writing it appears that a contract for the repair of the wall is about to be let. (We'll tell you more about this as it unfolds.) But, to cut to the chase, the first order of business will be to remove several trees alongside the road so construction can proceed. Tree cutting is planned to take no more than one day and is currently planned to take place during the week of Jan. 19th. This will necessitate the total closure of this section of Jerusalem Road while the trees are being removed. The DPW hopes to have the Town's illuminated signboards placed at either end of the work area by the end of this week to alert all drivers in advance of any closure. It is expected that removing the trees will take one day. So, this initial closure of Jerusalem Road is expected be for one day, at most. However, we suspect that when work starts in earnest shoring up the wall, Jerusalem Road will be closed for substantially more time. On Monday of this past week, we notified the School Department so they could determine the impact on school bus routes and begin to plan alternate routes. The temporary detour required for school Bus #2 will be posted on the school web site. Please check with this site concerning changes that may impact your children.

Little Harbor Project – With the very cold weather, and especially with the snow, the plans for paving have gone out the window. As an aside, paving in the winter is always tough and not very desirable. First, the asphalt plants generally close down in the winter due to the high cost of the energy that it takes to make the asphalt in cold weather. There are a few plants that do stay open in the winter, but they are few and far between. As of now, there is only one plant open and available to us and it is on the north shore. This means that the plants can and do charge a premium for asphalt in the winter. Today, this premium is in the 25 percent to 30 percent range. Plus with fewer plants, delivery trucks must travel further causing delays in the paving operation while trucks return to the plant for subsequent loads. And since the trucks travel further in cold weather, the asphalt can cool down making it less desirable for paving. To solve this problem, special trucks are used that can keep the asphalt warm by using either separate heaters or by using heat from the engine. Either way, I think you can get the picture. It is just a big deal to pave in the winter. However, with all of these obstacles, we feel that it is still worthwhile and important for the project to get a base coat of asphalt on some of the rather messy roads. But, unless the sub surface is reasonably dry paving just can't be done, period. That's where we are now, waiting for some dry weather.

As far as the balance of the Little Harbor Project, the project is trying to concentrate most of their work away from the main roads. The following will be active work areas this month:

During January sewer will be installed for 40/86 Atlantic Avenue, 95/101 Atlantic Avenue and for 111/123 Atlantic Avenue, as well as Lothrop Lane, Hobart Lane and Sheldon Lane.

Around the end of January it is possible that sewer services to homes may begin installation on Beach Street.

The drainage on Joy Place is awaiting the centrifugal separator for the new storm water drain. When it arrives it will be promptly worked into the work schedule.

Sewer service and a grinder pump will be installed at the Little League Field on North Main St. (Note: There will be a little bit work involved on North Main Street itself to connect from the ball field across the road to the new sewer line in the street. But most of the work will be off of the roadway.)

A sewer line tie-in will be placed on Jerusalem Road near Rust Way.

Small water line will be added to Tower Lane at North Main Street.

Gravity sewer line services will be constructed to the homes on Highland Avenue.

The exact sequence of these work areas may change based on weather, equipment and personnel availability.

The DPW may be reclaiming a few smaller driveways/roads this month. We are still working with the project to determine where this will take place. In addition, we really want to do the necessary work to put Sandy Cove Lane back into better condition for the residents, but with the current weather conditions we are temporarily stymied.

A little Bit of Greenbush — As you may remember, the Greenbush train opened for service on October 31, 2007. Since then, the MBTA and CBB, the contractor, have been working to clean up some of the small things throughout the Town that need to be fixed or otherwise tended to. One of the items on our "Open Items List" was the directional sign at the corner of Depot Court and Main Street. This sign is intended to direct people driving on Depot Court to the Greenbush station. For the first 14 months of Greenbush operation the sign was covered with a black plastic bag. (We jokingly said that perhaps the sign was shy.) Well, your intrepid reporter is pleased to say that the MBTA has finally pulled the cover off, so that the sign can sit proudly on the corner as a bright shining beacon for all to see.

Cold Snap

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

I'm so excited this morning because I woke up feeling completely normal. I don't mean normal in the sense that I can function in society as an adult like everyone else. That isn't going to happen. What I mean is that I went to bed last night with a hint of a sore throat, sure that I was getting a cold, but apparently it was just the extra yelling I did at the children yesterday. When I woke up and found I could still yell in top shape I was tickled pink.

Two of my daughters were getting sick, you see, but we didn't know it at the time. This is Item #374 on the list of things they should teach you in parenting school but don't: the first sign that your child has a cold is that for 24 hours you're convinced you have utterly failed as a parent. They don't sneeze or cough or anything. They just leave for school as themselves and return as Veruca Salt.

"Hello, Doctor? Something is up with my daughter today. She hates me and all that is right and just."

"She's probably teething."

"She's eleven."

"Oh, she's got a cold coming on then. We meant to warn you about those symptoms earlier. Two teaspoons of vomit-flavored Motrin should do the trick."

"What if you're wrong, Doctor? What if I have utterly failed as a parent? I've spoiled her. I've spared the rod. And I let her go to that sleepover last Saturday."

"Well, it's also possible your child was born with evil genes and you're not remotely to blame. We do see these cases sometimes with Hungarians. My advice is to pray that the Nebraska legislature hasn't fixed their Child Abandonment Law yet."

"You've given me hope, Doctor. Thank you so much."

"Not at all."

Doctors may say there's no cure for the common cold, but I've found that telling a sick child she can stay home from school usually brings on an instant recovery. Apply this tonic and even the most lethargic, miserable patient will be bouncing off the walls again in no time. It certainly worked for me as a kid. Given a can of ginger ale and four hours of The Price is Right, Let's Make A Deal, and $10,000 Pyramid, I could have had an appendectomy without anesthetic. I learned a lot of useful lessons in economics too. How else would I know that an Amana Radarange actually costs more than a super-8 projector and a Dymo Label Maker combined?

Of course to children the only thing better than a sick day is a snow day. It's the reason God invented the Nor'easter — the best of all possible worlds. It's like saying, "No liver tonight, kids. We've got too many of these darned Devil Dogs to eat up." In the annals of great snow days there is one that stands out as the greatest of them all. And incredibly, I was there.

You wouldn't think six inches of snow would be a boon for skating, but one night it snowed, then briefly rained, then got very cold. The next morning my friend Davy and I found ourselves alone on an outdoor rink roughly the size of Massachusetts. We skated all around his yard. We skated across our whole neighborhood, down deserted streets, up hills, through the woods, slalomed around trees, passed a hockey puck back and forth in the living room of a house that was under construction. You've never seen two happier, freer people. Would it have been just as much fun on a Saturday? Maybe. But between Bugs Bunny in the morning and Creature Double Feature in the afternoon I'm not sure we would have had the time.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset. He's pretty sure colds are much harder on him than they are on his kids. Either that or he's become a total wimp, but that doesn't seem likely, so we're back to the first theory.

LIBRARY CORNER

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348.

Cohasset Reads Together 2009 – Meet author Julian Houston at 10 a.m., on Saturday, Jan. 17, at First Parish Unitarian Church on Cohasset Common. Houston will be this year's guest speaker at the Pancake Breakfast. Houston's book, "New Boy," has been selected as one of the town-wide reading selections for Cohasset Reads Together. Sponsored by Cohasset Diversity Committee and Cohasset Clergy. Cost is $5 per person, $15 per family. All are welcome. Call the library for more information.

Holiday Closing – The library will be closed Monday, Jan. 19, in observance of Martin Luther King Jr. Day. Use the 24-hour book drop to return library materials.

Memoir Writing Workshop – Sign up to attend a memoir writing workshop, which will take place at 2 p.m., on Fridays, Jan. 23, and Feb. 13. In this fun and interactive workshop, participants will learn proven techniques for unlocking and mining memories to create personal stories. Life stories will appeal to writers at all levels from novice to beginner, for those who want to leave something behind for their family or write for a wider audience. Call the library to register for this free workshop. Sponsored by the Friends of the Library for Cohasset Reads Together.

Library Book Group – The January book selection is Geraldine Brook's book "People of the Book." All are welcome for coffee at 10 a.m., on Wednesday, Jan. 28. Call the library to reserve a copy of the book.

Cohasset Reads Together Book Discussion – Join others for coffee and dessert to discuss Julian Houston's book, "New Boy," at 7 p.m., on Thursday, Jan. 29. The book has been selected at one of the town-wide reading titles. The meeting is free and all are welcome.

New ReadyRead Title for Book Groups – The library now has Geraldine Brook's book "People of the Book" available as a book group kit. Local book groups can reserve this paperback edition for their book group discussion by calling reference librarian Gayle Walsh at 383-1348.

FOR CHILDREN

Story & Craft – Sign up online for either the morning or afternoon Story & Craft, which will take place in the Story Room on Thursdays, Jan. 22 and 29, and Feb. 5 and 12. Register for either the 10:30 to 11:15 a.m. session or the 1 to 1:45 p.m. Story & Craft is for Cohasset residents ages 3 through 6 and is a four-week commitment.

MamaSteph – Music will be performed for young children at 10:30 a.m., on Mondays, Jan. 26, Feb. 2, 9 and 23. All ages and communities welcome. Sponsored by The Friends of the Cohasset Library.

close promptly at 10:35 a.m. Funded by Friends of the Cohasset Library. All ages and communities are welcome.

Drop In Story Time – In the Story Room at 10:30 a.m., on Tuesdays, Jan. 20 and 27 and Feb. 3, 10, 17 and 24. Join other for big book adventures. All ages and communities welcome.

A thousand great places

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

A few years ago I found myself entertaining friends from a place in the Middle West where history doesn't go back much farther than Custer's unfortunate rendezvous with the Indians.

Surrounded by points of historical interest and being the perfect host, I asked them what they wanted to see first. Was it the birthplaces of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams? Or was it Plymouth Rock, where the Pilgrims landed?

To a man and — a woman — they opted for the place where Sacco and Vanzetti shot the paymaster.

I think Eric Turkington, the state rep from Falmouth, had something like that in mind the other day when he proposed a 15-member Great Places in Massachusetts Commission to identify 1,000 great places for tourists to visit in our state.

Only a thousand? Why, I can think of a thousand places right here on the South Shore, from the Adams National Historical Park on the north to Plimoth Plantation and Mayflower II on the south.

I would show my visitors not only the Sacco-Vanzetti site, but the home of Gen. Sylvanus Thayer, the savior of West Point, and French's Common, where Al Hollis' friends formed the first twilight baseball league, both in Braintree.

I'd take them to Abigail Adams' birthplace in Weymouth and the Old Ship Church in Hingham, said to be the oldest practicing church in the country, with its lookout for ships in the steeple.

We'd ride on the Carousel Under the Clock in Hull, its 66 wooden horses and Wurlitzer band organ the sole remaining reminder of storied Paragon Park once the giant roller coaster departed for a new home in Maryland.

We'd go for a drive down Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue in Cohasset, particularly when a northeast storm crashed the waves over Minot Light, where a long-ago gale once destroyed the lighthouse and killed its keepers.

I would show them The Old Oaken Bucket mill, made famous by Samuel Woodworth's poem, in Scituate, and the law office and grave of Daniel Webster, the political giant who never became president, in Marshfield.

I wouldn't confine myself to historical sites, either.

We'd visit Duxbury Beach, five miles of clean white sand without the distraction of commerce, and the Plymouth Colony Winery in Plymouth, where they could sample any of 14 different wines, including cranberry wine.

We'd look in on the Houghs Neck spring flounder fishery in Quincy, which attracts fishermen from as far away as New Jersey, and the herring run in Weymouth to watch kids try to catch the slippery fish by hand as they run up the ladder.

I'd take them to World's End in Hingham to walk the seven miles of paths through marshes, hills and rocky necks, and to Mount Blue Spring in Wompatuck State Park, where they can fill bottles with cool clear water and take them home, one of the few freebies left to us.

And, if there was any time left, I'd take them to the spot where Sacco and Vanzetti shot the paymaster — only there's a shopping mall there now.

Going once, going twice...

Cohasset treasures up for auction

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Like a scene from "Antiques Roadshow," the majority of the First Parish Church had little idea there were American treasures of great worth underneath the Parish House staircase — and beneath their bottoms.

Next week, Sotheby's New York will auction off pieces of Cohasset history in the form of six silver beakers and a carved and figured maple armchair. Four of the beakers, which come in pairs, are estimated to be worth between $70,000 and $100,000. The chair, which members of the church admit to have been sitting in up until recently, could fetch between $50,000 to $100,000.

The Sotheby's auction will take place in New York City next weekend on Friday, Jan. 23 and Sat. Jan. 24. Those who can't make it to the auction can bid online at sothebys.com

The First Parish Church, located on Cohasset Common, is Cohasset's first church and it was incorporated in 1721. Today, the Unitarian Universalist Church has about 150 members.

As the custodians of two historic and prominent buildings on and across from the Town Common, the small congregation is struggling to keep up with the maintenance of the meetinghouse and the parish house, located on North Main.

Galt Grant, a member of the financial planning committee for the church, says the church is under pressure to keep the aging (and prominent) buildings looking presentable. Case in point, the complete restoration of the steeple 10 years ago cost $85,000 and then the replacement of the roof cost another $30,000.

"There are a lot of expenses to keep the meetinghouse and parish house looking nice and it is being borne by a small group of people," said Rod Hobson, a long-time member of the church.

"We started looking at ways to increase revenue," said Grant.

Unbeknownst to many in the congregation was the church's possession of six pairs of silver beakers that date back to the 18th and 19th centuries when the church was still a fledging religious community.

In 2005, a few members of the church approached Marley Rabstenek, a Cohasset native, the daughter of two members of the church who is involved in the Asian art business in New York, for her input on whether the silver beakers were worth something. They were. Rabstenek helped establish connections to the various auction houses.

When one of the auction houses came to the Cohasset to appraise the silver, beakers, they looked over at one of the chairs. The comment was "that looks like it might be worth a lot," according to Grant.

When the furniture appraiser specialist from Sotheby's came, he dated the chair back to 1720 and estimated its worth between $50,000 and $100,000.

"We've been sitting on it for years," said Grant with a laugh.

The "Important William and Mary carved and figured maple armchair" was given to the First Parish Church nearly 300 years ago. According to Sotheby's, this important armchair relates directly to the largest group of caned seating furniture made in America. Related chairs are exhibited at the Metropolitan Museum of Art and another in a private collection.

The armchair is the first item of the day to be auctioned off on Saturday, Jan. 24 at 2p.m.

A chair First Parish Church parishioners have been sitting in for decades turned out to be worth as much as $100,000. The Important William and Mary carved and figured maple armchair dates back to 1720.

The lowest valued set of beakers ($6000 to $9000) were donated to the church by Deacon Uriah Lincoln and created by Nathan Hobbs in 1821

Engraved on the beakers is "The gift of Deacon John Jacobs to the Church of Christ in Cohasset." The estimated value is $20,000 to $40,000.

The silver beakers

The six pairs of silver beakers will be the last auction item during the first session on Jan. 23 of Sotheby's "Important Americana." Each one of the silver beakers has a unique story behind it. The two most valuable pairs have an appraised value of $70,000 to $100,000.

According to Sotheby's, the earliest colonial silver is highly valued by both scholars and collectors, yet exemplary pieces have rarely appeared at auction. Those pieces that do survive are typically preserved in the churches to which they were given. Custodianship by a church insures that the silver has been treated with respect and has stayed in far better condition than that in domestic use.

The six lots of beakers to be offered have remained out of use, tucked away in a vault, for over 50 years.

When the appraisers came to Cohasset, they were surprised (and delighted) to find the pieces in such pristine condition. "They told us they rarely find many pieces in as good condition," said Grant.

Both Hobson and Grant, long time members of the church, attest the cups have been used only two or three times in the last 50 years.

"The average member of First Parish didn't even know they existed," said Hobson.

The fact many members knew of the valuable items has tempered their loss to the parish. With few exceptions, the parish has been supportive of the decision to auction off the beakers and chair.

"Most understand the necessity," said Grant.

"If (the beakers) had been a part of every Sunday service then it would be different," said Hobson. "In many ways it was shameless, these things were locked up in a safe underneath a set of stairs, unknown, unseen and unenjoyed."

Where ever the silver and chair find their next home —whether it is a private collector or museum — First Parish is hoping it is a good home.

"We hope they will be enjoyed," said Hobson. But, they are still holding out for a miracle — or an angel.

"The best ending to this story would be to find someone local to buy the silver. They truly are a marvelous piece of Cohasset history," said Grant.

Grant, his wife, Susan, and two friends will head to New York to sit in on the auctions.

Nathan Hobbs of Boston created the Susanna Lewis beakers in 1824. The "gold medal from the King of Denmark" which paid for these beakers was in recognition of Cohasset's help in one of the most noted shipwrecks off the Cohasset coast.

The Deacon John Jacobs Silver Beakers by Jacob Hurd were made in Boston in 1728. The pairs belong to the very earliest group of dated pieces from the maker's workshop and could fetch between $70,000 and $100,000.

Deacon John Jacobs beakers (1795)

Another pair of silver beakers was donated to the "Church of Christ" in accordance with the will of Deacon John Jacobs. Engraved on the beakers is "The gift of Deacon John Jacobs to the Church of Christ in Cohasset." The beakers have the name "Revere" scratched tantalizingly underneath each one (estimated value $20,000 to $40,000).

Susanna Lewis beakers (1824)

The Susanna Lewis beakers were created by Nathan Hobbs in Boston in 1824. This pair bears the inscription "To the Church of Christ in Cohasset – This Cup is the Gift of Suzanna Lewis, it being the proceeds of a Gold Medal, from the King of Denmark to her late husband Capt. John Lewis."

The "gold medal from the King of Denmark" which paid for these beakers was in recognition of Cohasset's help in one of the most noted shipwrecks off the Cohasset coast.

On Feb. 12, 1793, the Giertrude Maria, underway from Copenhagen to Boston, was wrecked off of the coast of the Cohasset shore, spewing cargo and men into the sea. Cohasseters in small boats rescued both men and cargo and even provided a vessel for the sailors to continue to Boston. In appreciation, the King of Denmark awarded four gold medals and ten silver ones.

Much of what Sotheby's pieced together for the history of the silver cups was gleaned from Bigelow's "Narrative History of Cohasset."

The Deacon John Jacobs beakers (1728)

The Deacon John Jacobs Silver Beakers by Jacob Hurd were made in Boston in 1728. The pairs belong to the very earliest group of dated pieces from the maker's workshop — a workshop that has been credited with the creating of more than half of the surviving Boston silver from that time.

These are the two most valuable pairs of beakers, each valued between $70,000 and $100,000.

Deacon John Jacobs was the grandson of Nicholas Jacobs, one of Hingham's earliest settlers, and the son of John Jacobs Sr., one of the leaders of Hingham's dispute with Scituate over the area that would become the new community of Cohasset.

These four beakers (which are being offered in two separate lots) were exhibited at the Museum of Fine Arts in 1911 as part of the "American Church Silver of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries."

Deacon Uriah Lincoln beakers (1821)

The lowest valued set of beakers0 ($6000 to $9000) were donated to the church by Deacon Uriah Lincoln and created by Nathan Hobbs in 1821. According to "Genealogies of the Families of Cohasset, Mass.," Lincoln was a deacon of the church and a man of prominence in town affairs. He served as Town Clerk, town moderator and Selectman during the 1790s and early 1800s.

Rebecca Tower beakers (1843)

Valued at $8,000 to $12,000, the Rebecca Tower beakers were donated to the church in 1843. Rebecca Tower was the wife of prominent Cohasset man, Captain Levi Tower. She is also the younger sister of Susanna Lewis who also donated beakers.

Senior center gains ground

Legal, financial and design issues to consider

Over the next few months, legal, financial, and design decisions for the proposed senior center will have to be considered.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It's a work in progress, but the town is making strides toward establishing a clear location and direction for a new senior center.

The Council on Elder Affairs as well as other involved parties from the town and private entities are hammering through the multiple issues surrounding the proposed siting on land currently owned by the Swim Center Board of Trustees.

Over the next few months, legal, financial, and design decisions for the proposed senior center will have to be considered. For now, the parties involved are enjoying a collaborative and supportive atmosphere in an effort to bring the project to fruition.

On Monday morning, representatives from the Cohasset Swim Center Board of Trustees met with the Council on Elder Affairs to express their interest in either a land swap or a donation of the land best suited for the building. The proposed site is to the left of the Swim Center parking lot.

This was good news, but opens the door to many questions for the town and the trustees to consider.

Should the building be the town's or owned by a private entity? Should the Swim Center donate the land or enter into a land swap? How will the town and swim center deal with access to the parking lot and liability?

Many of the questions raised need legal answers, which both parties will consult with over the next few weeks. The Swim Center Board of Trustees plan to meet with the Council on Elder Affairs on Tuesday, Feb. 3.

"The situation is ideal," because of the proximity to the schools, the summer recreation program, the pool and said Diane Karcher, a Swim Center trustee. "There is plenty of interaction, pleasant interaction, that can happen (between the generations)."

Elder Affairs is currently based in the front rooms of the South Shore Community Center located at the corner of Depot Court and North Main Street. There is a dining room, a small office space, and a shared kitchen. Both the senior center and the community center have grown considerably over the years and both organizations need more space. The town currently pays $14,000 a year for the use of the space.

One of the major considerations in building a new senior center is providing a large room where residents can gather. Right now, Elder Affairs has to search out space to accommodate large groups for special events.

With almost 22 percent of the town's population over 60 (about 1650 residents) and 300 residents over 80, the need for services and larger home base is great, and growing.

In the struggling economic times the town and community are in, how to finance the senior center is an essential consideration.

"The vibe early on is there no town money…there wasn't a climate for someone going to Town Meeting for a million dollars," said Joe Nedrow, chairman of the Council on Elder Affairs.

Outside help and fundraising will be necessary for the estimated cost of $2.2 million for the 14,000 square foot building.

The Social Service League of Cohasset has stepped forward to offer funds from the Willcutt Fund, a trust the organization administers. The exact amount of money available has not been disclosed and the funds cannot be released until a firm location for the senior center has been established.

"We need to know we have a site to put a building on," said Sandra Halverson, vice president of the Social Service League. Because of the donation from the Social Service League, it was floated that the new senior center could be named "The Willcutt Center." As a side benefit, referring to the facility as the Willcutt Center as opposed to the Senior Center may lessen the stigma attached and may encourage a broader base of older residents to utilize the space and its services.

Preliminary plans were to construct a two-story building with the first floor would be devoted to the senior center and six senior affordable apartments on the second floor. The housing component was desirable not only because affordable housing for seniors is needed in town, but also it could open the project up for grants and/or community preservation funding.

But, the housing component does present challenges, which led a motion to be brought up to abandon the housing component. However, Town Manager Bill Griffin said this could preclude the project from seeking community preservation funding. Instead, a informal opinion was taken of the group which revealed the majority would like to see Elder Affairs focus on the senior center, not on affordable housing.

"We're not shy about having anybody's ideas, we welcome them," said Nedrow.

A follow-up meeting to discuss more specifics on the legal issues surrounding the proposed senior center site will be held on Tuesday, Feb. 3.

Dormitzer suggests collaborative effort

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer has his own suggestion for the senior center that may work to bring in a broader spectrum of participants.

"We want all folks over 55 to use the senior center and that's certainly not the current situation, but it could be," said Dormitzer. If the swim center decided to have a more comprehensive facility and the senior center would like to see a more complete center. Combining the two efforts could drum up additional usage and appeal to a broad group of residents.

Dormitzer, who said the idea was the brainchild of his wife, Jackie, felt having the ability to swim as part of the senior center would be very attractive to older citizens as a low-impact way to exercise.

"Seniors could swim in the winter to keep fit…we need some direction to bring in this other population that's not necessarily involved today," said Dormitzer.

Bradley to forego pay raise, per diem

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D-Hingham, announced recently that he will forego the constitutionally mandated pay raise that was recently announced for all legislators.

"As we are all painfully aware we are in very difficult times. To date, we have seen $1 billion cut out of the budget and, in all likelihood, we will be cutting another $1 billion before the end of this fiscal year," said Bradley. "The next fiscal year looks to be the worst on record since the Great Depression."

Under Article 118 of the amendments to the state Constitution, approved by voters in a 1998 referendum, lawmakers who accept the raise would see their base pay increase from $58,237 to $61,440. The pay raise is provided for in the Constitution and is tied to an increase in the median household income. The change is made every two years. This increase amounted to 5.5 percent. In addition to this, Bradley announced that he will not be accepting his $18 per day per diem allotment also mandated in the Constitution.

Bradley said, "I do not think it is an appropriate time for me to accept a pay raise. It is imperative that I have the confidence of my constituents as we move forward in this difficult session. I cannot ask the taxpayers to make sacrifices while at the same time collecting a pay raise. While the decision I have made to not accept the pay raise or any per diem allotment will not solve our budget crisis, it is my hope that my constituents will see that I understand the difficult choices facing the residents of the Commonwealth and our nation as a whole. However, the decision to do this remains an individual decision for each and every legislator."

Political forum

The Cohasset Political Forum will hold its next program on Wednesday, Jan. 28 at 7 pm at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road.

Democrats to caucus

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will host a caucus at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, at 10 a.m., on Feb. 7, to elect four delegates and three alternates to the 2009 Massachusetts Democratic Convention. Delegates will be divided equally between men and women.

The convention will take place Saturday, June 6, at the MassMutual Center in Springfield. At that time, Democrats from across the state will gather to adopt a party platform. David Plouffe, campaign manager for Barack Obama's presidential campaign, will be the keynote speaker.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in Cohasset. All ballots will be written and secret. Those not elected as delegate and/or alternate, who meet the qualifications, may apply to be add-on delegates in the following categories: youth, minority and disabled.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity, sexual orientation or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited. Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed with the Massachusetts Democratic Party, 56 Roland St., Suite 203, Boston, MA 02129 no later than 10 days after the caucus date.

The committee normally meets on the first Saturday of the month at Paul Pratt Public Library. For more information on the caucus, contact Kevin McCarthy at Kemccar68@comcast.net, or call 781-383-0639.

Foghorn donated to historical society

The Cohasset Historical Society has been given a 19th century rotary foghorn. Tim and Lucy Marsac, formerly of Cohasset, donated it. According to the Maine Maritime Museum, which also has a similar foghorn in its collection, it is a Norwegian Pattern Rotary foghorn commonly used on sailing ships in the late 19th century. In dense fog, a ship could determine what tack an approaching ship was sailing by the number of blasts from the horn and take the appropriate course correction to avoid a collision.

The donated horn is in good condition except for repair work required to fix the internal bellows. The Marsacs hope that the bellows can be repaired so that the horn can be displayed in working order at the Bates Marine Museum.

The museum is one of the three Cohasset Historical Society properties. Originally, an 18th century ship chandlery supplying the town's fishing fleet, the building was located on Border Street across from Bates Wharf. It was donated to the Historical Society in 1957 and moved to Elm Street next the Society's Captain John Wilson House.

HEALTH NOTES

Some windmill talk is hot air

diligence practiced by those participating in gathering data from which the Town can make an informed decision about the pros and cons of employing wind energy. The Board of Health saw nothing said, nor seen in any of the anonymous postings by individuals about wind turbines, which was not covered by the summary data published by the Alternative Energy Committee.

Cohasset has a history of using windmills. Several were cited on Pond Street and Reservoir Road. Beach Island was once called Windmill Point because of the presence of at least seven windmills nearby.

One information gap does exist. Discussions so far have lacked citations of experience with well established wind farms and the considerations of matters like service life and what to do with wind turbines when they must be removed or replaced. Discussions with those who have been in areas where wind farms have existed for some time indicate that often when turbines have exceeded their useful life, they are not removed, but newer more modern turbines are built alongside of the older unused units. Accordingly, it is suggested that any bylaws or other regulations related to wind turbines contain guidance about maximum service life as well as removal and replacement of equipment and infrastructure.

In addition, one further safeguard should be considered. For any given distance, two turbines generate twice as much sound at a point as one single unit. Accordingly, any analysis should consider a maximum number of turbines for any given site location.

There is nothing new about the process, which we are now observing. The way town governance is established is by having individuals become exercised about something going on and making a fuss. Surely, someone will then say 'You don't like it? Why don't you run for office so you can help fix it.' It happened to me. We get some of our best people in Town government like that.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Lady Skippers down Hingham and Mashpee

Victories keep hoopsters perfect record intact

By Susan Franklin

Like the inches of snowfall we keep receiving, Cohasset's Lady Skippers keep piling up the wins. Let's just say it snowed again this week with a 56-34 win over Hingham and a 67-27 rout of Mashpee.

Against Hingham High, Cohasset controlled the game in the manner that has made them so successful.

Patient on offense, Cohasset worked the ball inside where Hingham's center could not match up with either of the Lehr sisters.

Tori Lehr let her know she was no slouch on defense early in the contest with two blocks under the net, and she recorded Cohassest's first points on a short-range jumper midway up the key. A steal by Kayla Farren put the score at 4-0 Cohasset.

Hingham continued to have difficulty with Cohasset's pressure defense and tight zone. Hingham kept Cohasset on their toes, abandoning the 1-3-1 zone and falling back into a man-to-man defense once Cohasset broke the press. But seasoned point guard Kayla Farren worked the ball inside to Sammi Lehr who put up a short fall-away jumper giving Cohasset a 6-3 lead. With three minutes remaining in the quarter, Cohasset had racked up five team fouls defending Hingham drives to the hoop. A pair of free throws and a follow up shot put Hingham in the lead 6-7. Sammi Lehr and Carly Haggerty tallied points inside but Hingham stayed in the game closing the quarter at a 12-12 tie.

The play continued to be tentative in the second quarter with both teams plagued by turnovers.

A few minutes in Meredith Kelly came alive putting in three baskets and a point from the charity stripe giving Cohasset a 20-14 lead. Hingham was successfully penetrating Cohasset's 1-2-2 zone but their shots were not getting net.

Cohasset was methodical on offense moving the ball around the Hingham zone. Lindsay Davis hit a long ball off a pass from the inside and Samantha Crough put one in from the elbow bringing the score to 27-18. With 10 team fouls, Hingham continued to force the ball inside against Cohasset hoping to get a key player in foul trouble. In the final seconds of the half, Rachel Fredey had the soft touch on a short jumper and at the buzzer, the score read 29-23 in favor of Cohasset.

Cohasset picked up the pace in the second half, pushing the ball up court quickly and forcing Cohasset's Nate Morse rides during the Cyclocross National Championships at Kansas City in December. Morse was second in his age group.

Cycling comes naturally for Cohasset youth

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

When most people think of competitive bicycling, the first thought is usually the Tour De France.

Not so for Cohasset Middle School's Nate Morse.

When Morse thinks of the sport, he generally turns his thoughts to a different area of the sport called Cyclocross. He has good reason. When it comes to Cyclocross, a combination of road, mountain and off-road racing, with a touch of obstacle course thrown in, Morse is one of the best.

"My first word was bike."
Cohasset Cyclocross champ
Nate Morse

Just before the holidays, Morse showed how good he is, finishing second in the 2008 National Cyclocross Championships in Kansas City.

For Morse, the second-place finish in his age-13-14 group was a bit of a surprise.

"Last year I was coming in sixth and seventh in the same races," Morse said. "This was a surprise. This year I was second overall. There were nine races. I won four of them. The kid who beat me (Logan Owen of Bremerton, WA) won four years in a row. He's crazy good. He won the other five."

Morse has been racing bikes since he was four years old, riding in kid-size road races. He's wanted to ride as long as he can remember, especially because his dad, Sam is an accomplished Cyclocross rider. Sam was fifth in the Masters-Division at nationals this year.

"My first word was bike," Morse said. "My dad has always raced. I went with him and watched. I guess it stuck with me."

Morse said he enjoys traveling with his dad and watching him

Skipper wrestlers showing promise

By Emily Toomey
CHS CORRESPONDENT

On January 10, parents of Cohasset wrestlers headed to the gymnasium bearing an assortment of food, aspirin, and earplugs.

The annual Cohasset wrestling tournament was upon them. The tournament, which began at 9:30 a.m. and ended around 7 p.m., consisted of both JV and varsity matches with eleven teams.

Cohasset competed against Marshfield, Lynnfield/ N. Reading, Rockland, Holliston, Milton, Hanover, Nauset, Middleboro, and Norwell.

The JV matches started off the day and revealed promising talent amongst the Cohasset wrestlers.

Matt Brooks won all three of his matches, the most memorable being his pin during the first period of his second match. Robert Weiss also won a match, along with Colin Tarpey who outwrestled his opponent 7-4.

Sean MacCarthy's first match resulted in an extremely close loss in overtime, but he came back with a strong pin seconds after his next match began.

Justin Yeager is proving to be a tough competitor as well, winning his all three of his matches- the first 9-2 and his second with a pin. Billy Mack's matches were also successful, one in which he pinned in the first period.

The varsity team showed equal determination and potential, as evidenced by the number of wrestlers who placed. According to Coach Torin Sweeney, junior Chase Stebbins wrestled well in his first varsity tournament. Furthermore, Matt Dooley, Robbie Hill, and Cam Washak all won notable matches on Saturday.

Freshman Graden Foley pinned twice and came in fourth for his weight class, while Derek Froio was also victorious in his matches and came in third. Sophomores Alex Kinnealey and Thomas Flibotte were just as successful, both coming in fourth.

Jack Murphy placed fourth as well, making a solid pin during the second period of his first match along with his other achievements.

Fellow junior Andrew Littauer had several triumphant matches- the first being a pin- causing him to come in second. Captains Mike Froio and David Toomey demonstrated the abilities needed in team leaders through their accomplishments. Toomey placed second and had memorable matches such as pinning with over a minute left in the first period.

Froio had an outstanding day, winning all of his matches and coming in as champion for his weight class.

With exceptional performances by both the JV and varsity, there is little doubt about the wrestling team's capabilities.

Skippers split two

Hoopsters beat Mashpee fall to Hull

Six and one; the record of the Cohasset Boys Varsity Basketball Team.

Seven and one by the nights end.

Mashpee came to town.

The word on the blogs was Mashpee had quick guards and this was the "first real test of the Skippers against a legit SSL team", the OT win in Norwell notwithstanding.

And what a game it was in a .

Cohasset led after every frame and played tremendous team ball.

The 2-3 zone the Skippers played, mixed up with the 1-3-1 kept the Mashpee forwards out of the paint and allowed the Skippers to defend the perimeter.

Then to confuse the issue the Skippers would go man defense.

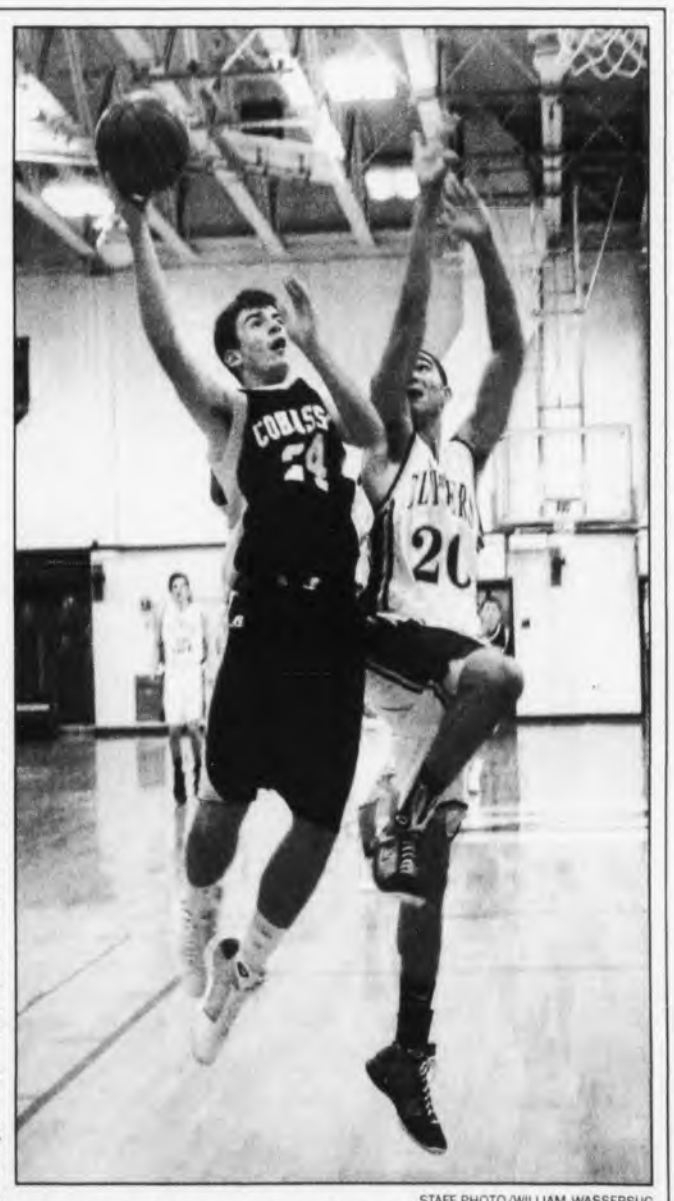
Full court pressure was applied by So. Guard Robert Jones (11 points, 4 steals, 5 assists) and senior. guard Marcus Charles (5 points, 4 rebounds, 2 steals). The "quick" Mashpee guards were decidedly slowed downed. Junior forward Johnny Maher (11 points, 18 rebounds) and senior center Danny Martin (14 points, 19 rebounds, 5 blocks) dominated the boards.

Offensively, the Skippers patiently handled the Mashpee man to man defense and worked the ball efficiently. Senior John Sturino (15 points) had the hot hand for the Skippers, owning the layup from the left. Freshman Robbie Mahoney, Senior Owen Landon and Junior Kevin O'Connell contributed valuable minutes from the bench.

The 2-3 zone the Skippers played, mixed up with the 1-3-1 kept the Mashpee forwards out of the paint and allowed the Skippers to defend the perimeter.

Tuesday, the Skippers traveled to Hull, the team leading the league, also with a 7-1 mark. The tension in the air was thick.

Cohasset jumped out to a quick 8-2 lead and Hull called timeout.



Hull regrouped and with their big men, they set up shop in the paint, getting rebounds and putting the ball in the hoop.

Jones (9 points, 4 assists, 3 steals) hit two big threes in the half, and Sturino (16 points) did what he does best, dropped the ball in the net three times.

But Hull was leading by seven at the half.

Charles (15 points) was on fire in the third quarter, nailing a couple of threess and a pretty layup. Martin (7 points, 9 rebounds) and Maher (4 points, 5 rebounds) both got in foul

Position: Stopper
Stats: One of the better defenders on the South Shore, Kilday shined again this season in the back. Faced with the difficult task of defending some of the area's best talent Kilday anchored the defense in wins over BC High (2-1) and big ties against Falmouth (0-0) and Brockton (1-1). A two-year starter in the back this Atlantic Coast League All-star kept his team in games as five setbacks were decided by only one goal. Also had three shutouts.

Name: Andrew Bishop
School: Hanover
Grade: Junior
Position: Sweeper
Stats: The anchor of the Hanover defense, Bishop was a virtual brick wall in the back for the Indians. The PL All-star was an essential part of an Indians defense that recorded eight shutouts in the regular season and allowed only two goals in three tourney games. Reached the Div. 3 South semis where Hanover was edged 1-0. Also a basketball player at HHS, Bishop would like to continue his sports career in college.

Name: Chris Rogerson
School: Weymouth
Grade: Senior (captain)
Position: Sweeper
Stats: The anchor of the Weymouth defense, Rogerson played a huge role in shutting out nine opponents in 22 games this season. The Bay State Conference All-star was an essential part of a 3-0 shutout of Catholic Memorial in the Div. 1 South Sectional tourney. Also plays volleyball at WHS and plans to attend either UMass-Amherst or UNH next fall.

Name: Steve Allen
School: Pembroke
Grade: Senior
Position: Goalie
Stats: One of the top goalies in the challenging Patriot League, Allen shined in the Fisher Div. notching 15 shutouts for the Div. 3 South finalists. Finished the year with an impressive 0.60 goals against average. The PL and Eastern Mass. All-star had one of his best games in the South semis, denying Hanover in a 1-0 final. The winner of the PL sportsmanship award for Pembroke, Allen also does track & field at PHS.

errors with their tenacious press. They would record 8 points before Hingham even took a shot but Hingham was not bowing down. Cohasset had to earn every point against Hingham's double team defensive set. With the score 27-35 Hingham slowed Cohasset's train by returning to their man-to-man defense. Full court pressure kept the tempo fast and the turnovers high and when the third quarter came to a close Cohasset had earned a commanding 42-32 point lead.

And that was the catalyst Cohasset needed. The Skippers took control of the contest in the fourth quarter, pushing ahead to a 20-point lead on a series of steals and fast breaks. Cohasset's tough 1-2-2 would shut down Hingham's offense and they would record just one hoop for the quarter. Cohasset put forth a real team effort, coming to life in the second half, and putting this one in the win column 56-34. Following the win at Hingham, the undefeated Cohasset squad traveled to Mashpee where they recorded the sixth win of the season (exclusive of tournament wins) by a commanding score of 67-27.

trouble and Mahoney and O'Connell stepped in and played solid defense for the Skippers. Cohasset was down by 11 to start the last frame, but a couple of quick buckets by Sturino and Charles and the lead was cut to 7. Landon cut the lead to five after he followed his own shot, got the board and dropped in the ball for a bucket. The clock was ticking and Cohasset had to foul. In the last minute and 30 seconds, Hull hit 6-of-8 free throws to cement the win.

race. Most weekends, the two race within an hour of each other. Sam also helps out on the course when a bike needs fixing or changing, something that is allowed in the sport.

As for the call of the sport over road racing, Morse said he likes the challenges, which include all sorts of terrain, short, but very steep hills and an occasional wooden-plank barrier that forces riders off their bikes for short periods.

He also likes the more individual aspect of the racing over the slightly more strategic planning in road races.

"In Cyclocross, there are less tactics," Morse said. "This is more of an individual sports. It's more of a technical thing. It's about who can suffer the most."

The courses in Cyclocross are usually short, taking about three or four laps over a timed period. For Morse's age group, the time is usually about 30 minutes.

When he's not riding, Morse plays drums in the school band and jazz band and is also a defenseman for a Cohasset youth team.

He's hoping to play hockey for the high school next year.

"I wish I could play for the high school this year," Morse said. "They have some great seniors I'd love to play with."

In school and on the course, Morse credits math teacher Jon Fortin for helping him along.

Mr. Fortin has really helped me focus," he said. "Math is really hard this year. He's helped. He's also a cyclist. He's come out to one of my races. He's thinking about starting next season."

The other aspect of Cyclocross that Morse likes is the people.

"We're all very intense when we're racing," he said. "But when we're done we're all really good friends. During the race we're competitors. Afterward we have fun."

Morse races for CLNoonan/Coast to Coast Junior Development cycling team, based in Falmouth, MA.

Getting a line on winning

Emergence of second forward trio raises hopes of CHS skater

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

High school hockey teams will not go far if they have to count too heavily on one forward line for offense.

That realization is what has Cohasset High coach Bob Walsh smiling these days through a 1-4-2 record.

"I think we might be able to present teams with some tough match-ups going forward," said the Skippers' third year head coach. "I don't feel like I have true first and second line right now, but rather two lines with some pretty good potential. I think we're starting to find their handle and focus."

Sophomore Anders Goetz centering the juniors duo of Brendan Doonan and Andy McKenna has started most periods this season and thus worn the mantle as "top line". However, junior Conor Queenan, and seniors Paul Pozniak and Andrew Bell have emerged to the point where Walsh now calls them his "1A line."

"The Pozniak line is my big, fast-skating line," said the coach. "The Goetz line has a lot of skill, the hands and cycle the puck very well. But both lines play well together as units. That's the big thing"

Queenan, Pozniak and Bell have played extensively together for years in summer and other off-season leagues, which has helped them get up to varsity speed quickly. It also helps that the super-fast Queenan appears to be growing more comfortable with his wiry 6-foot-2 frame, to the point where he may now (according to Walsh) be a legitimate college prospect.

"Conor is a player," lauded Walsh. "He's super fast, and his handle is getting much better. He's been working his butt off. He's very poised and has great stamina. He's the guy I threw right back out there Monday after he'd just come off the ice when we pulled (goalie) Johnny (Wade), and he was still skating around faster than anyone else on the ice. Really, I think he should be a league all-star this year."

Of course, the fact he'd had both of the Skippers' goals in the game might have had something to do with it too.

Cohasset battled to a 2-2 tie for the first 43:30 of Monday's 45 minute non-league home tilt versus Old Rochester.

Queenan had both scores—both "goal-scorers" goals, according to Walsh.

Unfortunately, an ORR defensemen beat Wade with a low slapper through a screen with 1:22 to go, though, and the visitors managed to tack on two empty netters inside the final minute to make for a deceiving final score.

"That was one of those games we could have really used," said Walsh. "There's a big difference between 2-3-2 and 1-4-2, but now we've got to pick ourselves up by the bootstraps and get it going."

One good thing about the struggles is several freshman have gotten meaningful varsity action.

"They're seeing what it takes to compete at this level," said Walsh. "The more kids who can get a taste, the better off we'll be as a program in the long run."

The Skippers spent most of Tuesday's two-hour practice doing shooting drills after missing on more than a handful of legitimate scoring opportunities the previous day.

"We had guys missing half open nets," reported Walsh, "so it was time to put some extra work in at putting the puck in the net."

The Skippers improved to 2-4-1 (2-1-1 in South Shore League play) with a win at home Wednesday over Mashpee, 7-1. Game details were not available at the time of this writing.

Skippers 8, Hull 0

The Skippers first win on the season came this past Saturday, and it was a rout over ever-struggling Hull.

The Skippers scored four times in the first period, then three in the second and one in the third. Every Cohasset skater saw regular shifts in the middle frame, and the top two lines and defensemen saw no ice in the third.

Skipper plays in International Hockey Championships

Condon, a sophomore at Cohasset High School, has played for the Rangers all season.

As a member of the Boston Junior Rangers AAA Midget hockey club goaltender Tommy Condon is used to tough hockey games. But this week he and his team-mates won an amazing 3 overtime games, in a row, during their 7 game performance at the prestigious International Kiwanis Midget AAA Tournament in Gateneau, Quebec, Canada. Over 50 teams from across Canada and 3 teams representing the USA competed over six days to decide the best Midget AAA team in North America.

Condon, a sophomore at Cohasset High School, has played for the Rangers all season.

He is one of the youngest players on the team but that didn't stop him from backstopping his team to three straight overtime victories this weekend enabling the Junior Rangers to progress to the finals against Detroit's Bell Tire Midget AAA squad.

"We were playing against the best teams in Canada and beating them in front of thousands of people," said Condon.

On Friday night the Jr. Rangers faced the home town favorites Gateneau with nearly 3,000 of their fans in the stands.

"It was wild", said Condon. "You could have heard a pin drop when we scored the game winner". With Condon in net, the Rangers would need to win three more games to move forward to the Championship Game which was televised across Canada.

"I have never seen a team win three overtime games in a row, we refused to give up," said Condon. "At a certain point you run out of gas."

In the end the better rested Detroit squad was able to wear down Boston late in the championship game Sunday afternoon and take the first place trophy. Condon received 'Player of the Game' honors after their overtime win over Dartmouth Nova Scotia in the quarter finals.

"I'm proud of how our guys played," said Head Coach Bobby Kinsella. "We were sort of a Cinderella team, no one expected us to make it to the finals, when we needed a big save our goalies were there and when we needed a goal our forwards came through."

Kinsella previously coached the Sioux City Musketeers Jr. A team, of the USHL, where he was a two time All-Star game coach.

The Boston Junior Rangers is a newly formed hockey team comprised of players from across the United States, aged 16 to 18. Their home rink is the Mark Bavis Ice Arena in Rockland. The team was formed last spring and summer and began playing this past September.

The Junior Rangers have several South Shore players on there roster including, Co-Captains Connor Leary of Hingham and Dan Dempsey of Norwell. Norwell is also represented by Pat Johnston, with Kyle LeBrun of Bridgewater and Charlie Wemyss of Dover completing the Massachusetts contingent.

For more information on the Junior Rangers check out their web site at www.jrrangers.com.

Semi-formal will be a 'happening!'

LIFE AT CHS

LAUREN MACK

So get your shoes, your dresses, and your dates (optional), and get pumped up for the semi on Jan. 31!

Hello everyone! As we near the end of the first semester, most classes are either winding down or packing in last-minute information to cram into a final exam. That being said, it has been a very busy week at the high school, albeit short. Big news this week is that all of the final preparations for the annual Cabaret are being undertaken; the show will be held this upcoming Thursday at Atlantica, $10 at the door, and it will be full of the magnificent talent produced by our very own student body...and perhaps even some teachers — but you didn't hear that from me. The annual Junior-Senior Semiformal is also coming up fast; or biannual, rather, since last year's semi was cancelled due to lack of interest. This year, however, I can assure you that the semi will not only actually happen, but that it will also be a great time for juniors and seniors alike. So get your shoes, your dresses, and your dates (optional), and get pumped up for the semi on Jan. 31!

In other news, the school newspaper, The Spinnaker is scheduled to come out within the next week or so. Mr. McCabe's first-semester journalism class has been working hard to produce this second issue of the paper and it is sure to impress. Be sure to bring a dollar to school when the paper is hot off the press, because they sell out fast! Also, the student council will be hosting a food drive beginning next Tuesday; any non-perishable donations would be greatly appreciated!

This week's Teacher Quote of the Week comes from a teacher who's new this year in the Fine Art department. Her name is Ms. Sugrue (pronounced Shugroo). She teaches the electronic art classes, but is not refined to simply electronic art. She is well versed in many forms of art including ceramics, screenprinting, and drawing. I asked Ms. Sugrue what she does on a typical day after school, she replied: "Lately my days have been pretty boring. Yesterday, for example, I picked up some dog poop in my front yard. The sad thing is that it was the highlight of my day". There you have it everyone, hope you all enjoy your extra-long four day weekend! Auf Wiedersehen!

Spelling Bee fundraiser

Cohasset Education Foundation will offer its second Children's Spelling Bee fundraiser on Sunday, Feb. 8. All children in grades two through five are welcome to participate in this fun, community event. Each team is made up of three children in the same grade. Team members could be from class, a sports team or a Cohasset resident in another school.

Registration, which includes a T-shirt, is $25 per speller. Forms can be downloaded at the Web site at cohasseteducation.org.

Integrated Preschool applications available

Applications for Cohasset Integrated Pre-school are at both Osgood School and the Student Services Office. Children must be 3 by Sept. 1, 2009, to participate in the morning class, and 4 by Sept. 1, 2009, to participate in the afternoon class.

Applications should be returned to the Student Services Office, 143 Pond St., no later than Friday, Feb. 6. The lottery will take place Wednesday, Feb. 11, and families will be notified by mail that week.

A deposit of $150 by March 3 is required to hold the space. Tuition is currently $2,000 for the years; four days of 2.5-hour sessions each school week.

An open house for parent will take place at the Osgood School Pre-School classroom from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m., on Friday, Jan. 30. Parents will have an opportunity to meet staff and view the classroom facilities.

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE SMULLEN

It sounds as though all we do is eat. Not so! Perhaps you would like to come on Friday afternoons to knit with Edna and her group.

It is hard to believe that the busiest holiday season of the year has come and gone. As soon as Thanksgiving is over many of us are busy, busy, busy. There are cards to address, shopping to do and wrapping. Those of us who like to cook are baking special

Breads, cookies and pies, all of which make nice gifts for those we care about.

We didn't lack holiday celebrations at the Senior Center, beginning with a delicious lunch with scrumptious desserts at the Golden Living Center of Cohasset. It was hosted by Administrator, Bob Rego and his staff. After lunch we were entertained by a vocalist who accompanied himself on the piano. He sang holiday tunes interspersed with show tunes and oldies but goodies.

The next day a group of us joined with a group from Plymouth and rode into the Boston Opera House to enjoy the Boston Ballet's performance of the Nutcracker. It surely puts one in the holiday mood. I enjoyed the comments of a little girl sitting behind me. She was so excited when the nutcracker was given to Clara. She also announced that she was going to be a prima ballerina. When the performance was over we again boarded the bus, stopping at the Dry Dock Café for a late lunch.

At our last Wednesday luncheon before Christmas, Patty Johnson and her group of Angels served a lip-smacking meal. After lunch, a group from St. Anthony's Choir entertained us with the singing of carols. We also were treated to wonderful holiday favors made by Girl Scout Troop 4066.

Due to the snow and icy weather, our Twelfth-Night celebration had to be postponed until the eighth of January, when the Angels again served an outstanding lunch.

Now we are looking forward to our Valentine's Tea on Feb. 12. Be sure to call into the Center to make your reservation. The number to call is 781-383-9112.

It sounds as though all we do is eat. Not so! Perhaps you would like to come on Friday afternoons to knit with Edna and her group. Or, if you are getting a little stiff in the joints, how about coming to the Center on Friday mornings for gentle exercise. Or, try Line Dancing on Tuesday afternoons or Tai Chi. If you enjoy reading and discussing books with others, the Book Group meets on Friday mornings once a month. And how about Bridge? At one o'clock on Wednesday afternoons anyone can drop into the Center for a friendly game—no need to be an expert.

Be sure to pick up a copy of the monthly Vista so you can keep abreast of what is going on with our senior population.

Louise Smullen is a local senior. Mariner readers can look forward to her columns on a regular basis.

Rev. Colette Wood completes journey

Scituate woman ordained as priest

By Brian P. Nanos
BNANOS@CNC.COM

A little more than 10 years ago, Colette Wood was eating breakfast at her home near Scituate's Egypt Beach when she mused to her husband Russell that if she had been born in the Episcopal Church — instead of converting into the faith — she might have liked to become a priest.

Wood was worried that she was too old to start working toward the priesthood, but his response was, "Maybe it's not too late."

Wood, still a Scituate resident, was ordained in Boston Jan.10. The next day, she gave her first Mass at St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset, where she is serving as assistant rector.

"I'm absolutely beside myself," she said. "I gave my fist Mass and cried though most of it. It was just an extremely emotional thing."

When Wood was 19 and studying in Europe, she said she took a quick trip to see what had been the concentration camp at Dachau. Halfway through the journey, as she stared at the bleak February landscape passing her train window, she was startled to realize that she was on the same tracks that had led men, women and children to their deaths.

"I just promised God that I would do something that would help (the world)," she said.

In Wood's first Mass, she reflected that the promise she made at the age of 19 being solidified at the age of 43.

"As many journeys sometimes go, the journey to finding where God wanted me in the world has taken some time, I am a little older than 19 years now," she said during her Mass. "But yesterday, that promise that I made to God all those years ago at Dachau was made real, as I formally committee myself to God as a priest in this church."

The Rev. Collette Wood, recently ordained as an Episcopal priest, serves as assistant rector at St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset and gave her first Mass Jan. 11.

"I'm absolutely beside myself, I gave my fist Mass and cried though most of it. It was just an extremely emotional thing."

— Rev. Colette Wood, Assistant Rector, St. Stephen's Church

The original plan, Wood said, wasn't to save the world by joining the clergy, but rather to do so as a journalist.

"I thought I was going to help the world through writing," she said.

Wood spent 20 years at Travel New England newspaper before deciding to go on a separate path. She said she was drawn to the Episcopal Church by its care for all people.

"To me it really embraces what Jesus was getting at as far as openness and caring for all people," she said. "There's a sense of, 'We take you wherever you are and whoever you are.'"

After her husband suggested over morning coffee that it wasn't too late for Wood to join the clergy, she began the long process of applying to seminary at the Episcopal Divinity School in Cambridge. She had to answer questions about her background and motivations as well as undergo vetting by her home parish, St Luke's Episcopal Church in Scituate.

Wood said she was drawn to the Episcopal Divinity School by her still-strong desire to help create a better world.

"Episcopal Divinity School is a seminary that is very well-known for its social justice work," she said. "That is something that was very important to me."

In earning her master's degree part-time, Wood said she took classes "on everything from Bible study, church history, liturgies."

In the meantime, she also had what she called "hands-on training," serving as the chaplain at Brigham and Women's Hospital in 2005 and later taking on what was meant to be an eight-month stint as a lay assistant at St. Stephen's in Cohasset. When that parish's rector of 20 years left for Philadelphia, Wood was asked to stay on through a number or interim appointments

"Every time it came time to leave, they asked me to stay," she said. "This is a very active, very strong parish. Without a full-time rector here they felt there was some need to keep me."

Now that Wood has been ordained, she will continue to work at St. Stephen's as assistant rector. She is also working on her own to create the South Shore Pet Ministry, which would provide spiritual assistance for pet owners.

"It's so under-appreciated, I think," she said. "Most people don't realize how hard it is when a pet dies in the family."

Wood hopes to distribute material to local veterinarians offices that could be given out to families that make difficult decisions.

"Our pets love us unconditionally, and I think that's really what God's like as well," she said. "I think that's what God's love is like."

— An excerpt from the Rev. Collette Wood's first sermon, given Jan. 11at St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset.

"Today is a new beginning for all of us, because today, through my ordination and through the baptism of our Lord Jesus, everything is different, and all of us are called to a new commitment. It is not a commitment that is complicated. It is simply a commitment to love.

"I know it sounds silly, love, who believes in it anyway? Love can seem like a heavy burden; love can seem like a setup for a heartache, a fancy notion of something you once knew but lost. But I am here to tell you, it has not disappeared. God has been caring for it. Love is real, and yesterday I committed myself to love. And as my friend pointed out, the commitment has made all the difference.

"Love often makes us silly, doesn't it? Silly me. Imagine, thinking I might change the world? Silly me, for dreaming that something I might do might ensure that tracks to places like Dachau are torn out forever and replaced by paths of justice, compassion and understanding. Silly me, imagine, thinking I might convince all of you that by committing yourselves to love too, our possibilities together are endless. Silly me, for believing in the possibility of a morning sunrise. Silly me, for believing that with God, all things are possible.

"Ah, yes, after all, it is good to be silly ol' me."

Lecture Series at Glastonbury Abbey

Glastonbury Abbey's Inter-Religious Lecture Series Listening to Other Voices: Old Faiths in New Times: "The Abrahamic Religions of Today and Tomorrow," will be presented at 7:15 p.m., on Thursday, Jan. 22. Demetrios S. Katos will present a program titled "Orientale Lumen: An Introduction to Eastern Orthodox Christianity."

From the time of antiquity onward, the Hellenic culture and way of life has influenced what most people take for granted in terms of art, literature and philosophy. Katos, assistant professor of religious studies at Hellenic College and teacher of Eastern Orthodox theology at Boston College, trains students to read theology within an historic context. He will show attendees how early Christianity and Eastern Orthodox theology mingle together and render meaning to today's circumstances, why it is viable today and how it can be used in a practical manner in today's world. His book on a 5th century Hellenic writer and theologian who shaped the view of history and early Christian writings will be published soon.

Lectures are free – donations welcome. The program will take place in the Conference Center at Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham.

For information, visit the Web site at glastonburyabbey.org.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JAN. 12, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Romantic aspects are high at this time for single Lambs looking for love. Warm and fuzzy feelings are also at enhanced levels for Rams and Ewes in paired relationships.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This week favors what Taureans dote on — namely, love and money. Look for more meaningful relationships for both singles and pairs, as well as an improved financial outlook.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) All lingering shreds of that recent bout with boredom are dissipated as you eagerly accept a challenging offer. Your positive mood persuades others to join you in this venture.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might need validation for a possible solution to a situation involving someone close to you. Consider asking a trusted friend or relative to help you with this problem.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Investigate carefully before agreeing to assist a friend or colleague with a personal problem. There might be hidden factors that could emerge later that will create problems for you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your decision to work with an associate rather than go it alone, as you first proposed, brings an unexpected bonus. Be careful not to be judgmental. Allow for free and open discussion.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A loved one's health problem could, once again, make demands on your time and attention. But this time, make some demands of your own, and insist that others pitch in and help.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time for the traditionally staid Scorpion to plan adjustments in your day-to-day schedules. Be more flexible and allow for more impromptu, off-the-cuff actions.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Avoid creating unnecessary fuss over a situation you don't approve of. If it's going to work, it will do so despite your objections. If it fails, it will do so without a push from you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Working with a trusted colleague could open your mind to exploring some considerations you previously dismissed out of hand. The weekend brings news from a loved one.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Resolving a recent problem leaves you in a good position to strengthen your influence on how things get done. But continue to encourage ideas and suggestions from others.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A new friend suggests an interesting opportunity. But check it out before you snap at it. It might be a good deal for some people, but it might not work in helping you reach your goals.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

WINTER SCENE

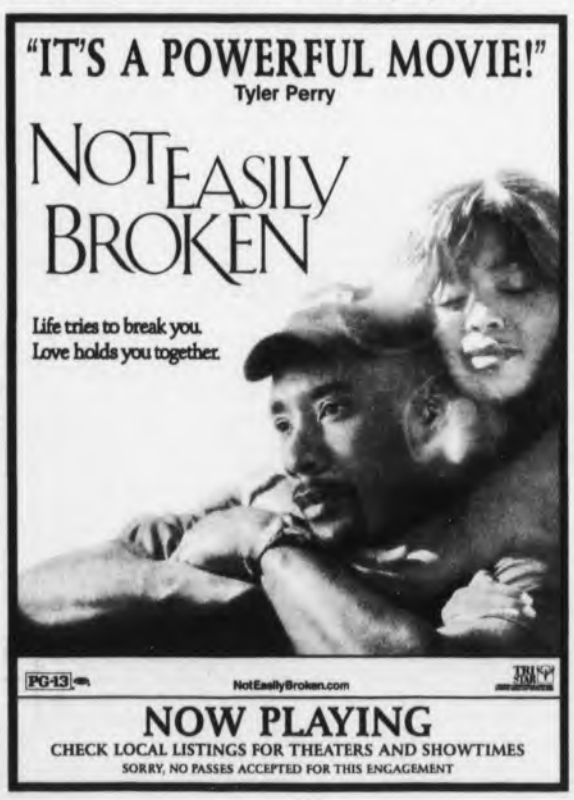
A lone lobster boat sits idle on a partially iced over Cohasset Harbor on Sunday afternoon following another snowfall that left close to five inches across the South Shore. By the time the Mariner reaches your mailboxes and the newsstands today (Friday), more snow and even colder weather will have arrived.

POLICE STATUS REPORT



Police made four arrests last month

December was a quiet month for the Cohasset Police Department. There were four arrests, one for Operating a Motor Vehicle with a Suspended License, one for Public Drinking and two for Protective Custody, Chief James Hussey said.

During the month of December the police department investigated 15 Motor Vehicle Accidents, none of which resulted in personal injury. There were 55 Motor Vehicle Citations issued totaling $1,240 in fines. Additionally, there were 54 parking tickets issued totaling $1,400 in fines.

Also in the month of December the Emergency Dispatch Center received a total of 769 calls for police services, and of those 222 were Emergency 911 calls.

In the month of December there were three reports of Breaking and Entering, all of which involved private residences. Also in December there were two Criminal Complaints issued for the month, Hussey said.

Winter fun without the sun

Cranapalooza turns night skiing into family funfest

By Rich Harbert

Fireworks are a highlight of the Cranapalooza celebration.

NORTH CONWAY, N.H. – Skiing under the lights is always a great option, especially if you face a long drive to the slopes or know skiers who just can't seem to get out of bed in the morning.

Night skiing is generally much less crowded. It is typically cheaper as well.

But there's no denying that it can also be colder and harder on the eyes. It's also impossible to light every trail.

So who better than the folks at Cranmore Mountain, one of the birthplaces of American skiing, to show skiers how to enjoy the best of both light and night worlds?

Cranapalooza, now in its fifth years, is a celebration of skiing and entertainment that starts when the sun is still high enough in the afternoon sky for leisurely runs off the mountain's peak. But the party really starts as most skiers and riders are winding down from their day on the mountain.

There's entertainment, refreshments, games and prizes, and this year, even a chance to leave the chilly weather behind and tackle some challenging indoor terrain as well.

The Fun Zone, open Saturday nights and during holidays, features a 65-foot inflatable obstacle course and five 40-foot climbing walls sure to bring out the competitor in adults and children.

Combine it all with a top-rated tubing park and you'll have trouble fitting all the fun into seven hours.

"We started Cranapalooza five years ago because we wanted to start night skiing but have it be fun for the whole family," Kathy Bennett, Cranmore's marketing director, said.

"It's been a big hit with all of our guests for several years now. It features family entertainers, magicians, fire dancers, jugglers, hypnotists plus live music and, of course, night skiing and tubing until 9 at night."

Cranapalooza offers night skiing and riding on Saturday nights through mid-March, as well as on Feb. 18, the Wednesday of school vacation week.

Seven hours of skiing and riding costs just $25 and begins at 2 p.m., early enough for several runs on any of Cranmore's 50 trails and glades. The late afternoon sun offers spectacular views of Mountain Washington and the White Mountains beyond.

Once the lights come on, skiers and riders can enjoy 11 illuminated trails and three lifts for all ability levels. The lights shine down on two terrain parks, Cranmore's signature Darkside Terrain Park and the Other Side progression park.

The party starts early down at the base of the mountain with the afternoon arrival of C-More the Penguin, Cranmore's huggable mascot. The entertainment starts at 3:30 p.m. with face painting in C-More's Den and S'more roasting in Schneider Square. A variety of performers offer free family entertainment from the stage of the Eating House. On the first Saturday of 2009, the King of Silly delighted a packed house with his zany juggling antics. Hypnotist Mike Hathaway, kids singers Brownie and Julie and Sammie Haynes, Puppet Man Dan and Bobo T. Clown are among the acts slated for future Cranapalloozas.

The Indoor Fun Zone, a new addition to Cranapalooza this year, opens in the Cranmore Family Fitness Center at 4:30 p.m. Sara Moore, programs director, jokes that parents might have to draw straws to see who plays with the kids and who skies. But it's hard to tell who gets the better deal.

For an additional $10, Fun Zone guests have unlimited access to a variety of fun and games, from deck hockey, and tennis to dodge ball and an oversized bouncy house. The giant obstacle course is sure to give even teens a run for their money.

For an additional $12, guests can try their hands and feet at any of the five 40-foot climbing walls. Cranmore supplies the equipment and a certified Belayer to make sure no one gets hurt. Guests must muster with the guts to make their way to the top and ring the bell.

Cranmore's Arctic Blast Tubing Park offers yet another diversion from the slopes. For $22, tubers can glide down the lanes for two hours. Be sure to ask the attendant for at least one spin as you push off! Children must be 42 inches to ride solo, but can double up with adults otherwise.

Adult entertainment caps the night. While the lifts continued to turn outside, Tony Sarno and Mike Rocheleau brought a warm, bluesy feel to the folks resting in the Eating House last weekend. Sarno returns later in the month. Other acts this season include Mike Morriss, Dennis and Davey, and Tom Dean.

Watch for fireworks to erupt over the mountain as well. Cranmore put on a fireworks display to welcome the New Year. Fireworks shows will punctuate Cranapalooza five more time before the end of the ski season.

Cranmore Mountain is located in North Conway village, about two and a half hours form Boston. For more information about Cranapalooza or other promotions at the resort, visit www.cranmore.com.

The eighth annual Free WaterWatch Lecture Series continues on Wednesday, Jan. 21, at the South Shore Natural Science Center at 7 p.m. with Lobster Tales with Dave Casoni, Mass Lobsterman's Association Homarus Americanus, our American Lobster, is the most recognized seafood in the world. The transition from the Pilgrims harvesting lobsters (20+ pounders) from the beach to use as fertilizer, to our modern day linen table delicacy has been an ongoing process. Today the process to bring a lobster to our tables is very complicated and involves industry, science, managers, conservationists, and consumers. Dave Casoni, a commercial lobsterman, will give an insider's view of the lobstering industry, from techniques of harvesting a lobster to managing lobster stocks so they will be here in the future. You'll find out everything you wanted to know about lobstering but were afraid to ask. Sorry – no free samples. For information and to learn more about upcoming lectures, visit www.nsrwa.org or contact the NSRWA at 781-659-8168, Mass Audubon at 781-659-9400 or SSNSC at 781-659-2559.

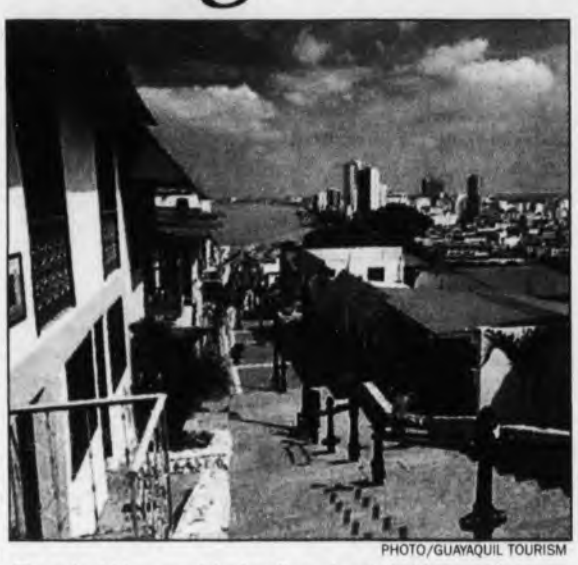
Exploring Ecuador's Guayas region

David Riley
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Before visiting Hacienda San Rafael, a farm-turned-eco-tourism destination in rural Bucay, Ecuador, I never rode anything but a bicycle. For a moment, I longed for handlebars.



But settling into the rhythm, I looked up to see cattle and sugarcane streaming by in fields on either side.

My day had begun at the five-star Hotel Oro Verde in downtown Guayaquil, Ecuador's largest city. It was less than a two-hour drive to the countryside, where farmers grow cacao, bananas and pineapples.

In Ecuador's southwestern province of Guayas, an area roughly the size of Massachusetts, urban and modern turns quickly to rural and traditional.

Guayas is bordered by the Pacific Ocean and Ecuador's Coastal Range, with tropical forests, farmland and ecological preserves throughout. Guayaquil, a city of nearly 3 million and the country's commercial center, is the capital of the region.

Government and tourism officials are working to lure travelers stressing the province's diversity. They note Guayaquil, like the country's capital of Quito, is a good jumping off point to places like the famed Galapagos Islands. Big investments have been made in revitalizing Guayaquil, once known as a gritty port, including opening a $90 million international airport and giving parts of the city a serious facelift.

The colorful homes of the Las Penas barrio in Guayaquil.

My first view was near the banks of the chocolate-brown Guayas River, where the modern downtown has wide streets lined with palm trees, plazas, Spanish-style buildings and historic monuments.

But soon my companions and I found ourselves in the hot, tight aisles of an artisans' market, where vendors haggled from booths overflowing with jewelry, clothes, art and knick-knacks. A colleague snagged a genuine Panama hat - despite the name, they are made in Ecuador - for just $12.

Rising up Santa Ana Hill are the brilliantly painted homes of the Las Penas barrio. From Carmen Hill, the Sacred Heart of Jesus Christ statue overlooks the city. There and beyond are neighborhoods yet untouched by tourism and government modernization.

A great fire in 1896 spared little architecture predating the 20th century, which leaves a city founded in the 1530s feeling oddly contemporary.

On a night ride on Guayaquil Vision, an open-top double-decker tour bus, we cruised the crowded streets and ducked low-hanging palm fronds. We stopped in Seminario Park, where docile, plump iguanas dozed in the trees.

Later, we started up Santa Ana Hill, but we only made it as far as Arthur's Cafe, a little local haunt. Musicians serenaded guests as we munched on cassava tamales, fried plantains and cheese empanadas over bottles of Pilsener, a satisfying Ecuadorian beer.

Members of the Zafreros International Dance Co. perform at Hacienda San Rafael in Bucay.

The next day, we ventured 20 minutes by car to Parque Historico, or the Historic Park, where visitors can stroll on boardwalks through four types of lush forests. Parrots and macaws perch among mangroves and zoo exhibits offer glimpses of spider monkeys and crocodiles.

The park also showcases turn-of-the-century Guayaquil architecture rescued from disrepair, and costumed actors offer visitors a funny peek at plantation life in the early 1900s, mostly speaking in Spanish.

After a lunch of vegetable paella and seafood — and a little siesta — we boarded the very touristy Henry Morgan "pirate ship" for a nighttime cruise. It was worth views of the Guayas River, two miles across in some spots, and Guayaquil, lit up in the night sky.

Venturing toward the farm in Bucay, the city faded to fields and little towns with concrete block homes. People sold fruit in stands along the road, and on one corner, a woman roasted the local treat of guinea pigs on spits.

In Naranjito, about an hour from the city, we stopped to explore a packed market where vendors piled vegetables, fruit and seafood on open tables and booths, with beef and whole chickens hanging from hooks.

We stopped again to approach a family sitting on crates in a circle outside their home, shucking an enormous mound of pungent cacao beans. They chatted graciously in Spanish and invited us to see a truck-sized cement oven used to dry their soggy crop.

A man in rubber boots trudged through the steaming cacao beans that would soon become chocolate, stirring with a wooden plank.

Fresh-made sweets greeted us at Hacienda San Rafael in Bucay, along with tamales, homemade cheese and sweet plantains. We rode horses to a bamboo grove before a dinner of ceviche and kebabs. The brightly dressed Zafreros International Dance Co. whirled around us as we ate and pulled us to our feet as soon as our forks dropped.

Next day, back in Guayaquil, I set out alone along the Malecon 2000, the centerpiece of the city's new face. The nearly two-mile river esplanade is dotted with gardens, monuments, shops and restaurants, an IMAX theater and an anthropological museum.

A view of Guayaquil along the Malecon 2000.

Then I completed an unfinished task — climbing all 444 steps to the top of Santa Ana Hill. At the top, Guayaquil showed all its contrasts. On one side, the sparkling Malecon; on another, people beat drums at a soccer game on a dirt lot. On a flat concrete roof, young people stood in awkward silence until music played from a boom box, and they began to dance.

IF YOU go...

GETTING THERE: American (www.aa.com) and LAN Airlines (www.lan.com) offer direct flights to Guayaquil from Miami. It's about a four-hour trip.

GETTING AROUND: It's best to get just about anywhere in the city by reserving a cab by phone or having your hotel do so. Most rides are $5 or less. Ubiquitous, crowded buses also offer rides for 25 cents. Car rentals are available, but traffic in Guayaquil is not for the faint of heart.

When venturing beyond the city, consider hiring a car, travel agency and/or a guide like Christian Franco, our very knowledgeable trip leader. The cost will vary depending on your trip.

Ecuador's currency is the U.S. dollar, and it can go a long way. It costs $6 for a 90-minute tour on Guayaquil Vision, $5 for the Henry Morgan cruise, $3 for the Historic Park.

A day at Hacienda San Rafael, complete with meals and outdoor excursions, is $50-$80.

STAYING THERE: Hotel Oro Verde (www.oroverdeguayaquil.com) is one of several five-star hotels in Guayaquil; rates from $149 for a standard room, from $220 for a suite. This hotel like many in the city has a casino. Ramada (www.ramada.com) and other mid-range standbys offer cheaper options.

SAFETY ADVISORY: Like any city, it's best to have a plan when exploring Guayaquil. The U.S. Consulate recently warned of Americans being robbed in yellow taxis hailed in the Urdessa neighborhood. Few problems are reported in Las Penas and the Malecon areas, however.

Cohasset astronaut shares experience

By Jill Michaels
CORRESPONDENT

A critical assignment, exotic locales, nifty gadgets, beautiful women.

No, not the latest James Bond adventure — NASA's STS-126 mission.

Cohasset astronaut Stephen G. Bowen, 44, was launched aboard space shuttle Endeavour Nov. 14 and landed Nov. 30. During the 16-day flight, he and his six crewmates fulfilled an important mission objective: lubrication of both Solar Alpha Rotary Joints (SARJs) on the International Space Station (ISS).

Bowen personally participated in three of the four STS-126 spacewalks. The SARJ maintenance ensured that the station's solar arrays can properly rotate to track the sun and therefore generate enough power to sustain a six-member crew beginning this spring.

Cohasset still seems to hold a special place in this astronaut's heart. Before his launch, he said: "I wish I could take the whole town with me."

The Cohasset Mariner had the opportunity to ask Bowen a question while he was flying in space: What experiences or feelings from this flight do you want to share with the people in your hometown?

From orbit Bowen replied: "For my hometown back in Massachusetts, it's mostly just the overall living

Astronaut Steve Bowen, STS-126 mission specialist, participates in the mission's third scheduled session of extravehicular activity (EVA) as construction and maintenance continue on the International Space Station. During the six-hour, 57-minute spacewalk, Bowen and astronaut Heidemarie Stefanyshyn-Piper (out of frame), mission specialist, focused their efforts on the continued cleaning of the station's starboard solar alpha rotary joint (SARJ) and the removal and replacement of trundle bearing assemblies (TBA). Bowen and Piper also cleaned the area around the SARJ's drive lock assemblies, which help the joint to rotate and lock into place. Earth's horizon and the blackness of space provide the backdrop for the scene.

Field fundraising 75 percent complete

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In spite of the economy, the Cohasset Sports Partnership reported this week it is well on its way to reaching its goal of $550,000 in private funding required to build a new synthetic turf field at the high school.

Sports Partnership president George McGoldrick said the fundraising is about 75 percent completed.

"It's going very well," said McGoldrick. "Obviously, in these economic times it is difficult to give a lot, but we're finding people are giving what they can."

The fundraising campaign is generally being done on a one on one basis either by phone or in person and residents are contributing anywhere between $500 and $25,000.

"We're finding very few people who don't think this is a good project for the entire town," said McGoldrick. At Town Meeting, McGoldrick presented a project that would turn a currently underutilized asset into something that could be used effectively. Because the field can be used nearly 24/7, the turf field was the equivalent of three regular grass fields, proponents said.

"The goal is to try to have all the funds in place by the end of March," said McGoldrick. If that goal is

Parisian clothes on display at Historical Society

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Historical Society has an extensive collection of textiles ranging from uniforms to hats to quilts to…French couture?

Yes, it's true. This month, the Historical Society has put together an exhibit of some of the finest fashions to come out of Paris in the early part of the 20th century. Intricate beading, fine lace, soft velvet, flowing satin and sparkling sequins make the dozen dresses and accessories epitomize the craftsmanship and styles of Parisian fashion.

The Parisian exhibit, which will be on display until February, features several dresses, hats, shawls, capes and even a bathing suit.

"Some people have commented that they would wear them today!" said Lynne DeGiacomo, the Historical Society director, as she stood by the classic black silk cape on display in the lobby.

While the pieces are striking in their own right, some of the stories behind the long past Parisian designers add to the glamour. Unfortunately, many of the dress's local stories — who once wore it, when it was donated, who gave it to the society — have been lost over the years.

"So much of the clothing and textiles collection was not kept in a good manner. I think they were more geared toward developing a clothing collection rather than a historical collection."

Candidate pulls papers for Planning Board

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"I'm excited to live in a town so full of charm, natural beauty and character."
— Jean Healey Dippold, potential candidate for planning board

After a slow start the candidates are starting to make their way to the Town Clerk's office for nomination papers.

This week, Jean Healey Dippold of 93 South Main St. took out nomination papers for a five-year planning board seat. Roger Lowe of 100 Beach St. pulled papers for a three-year seat on the Board of Library Trustees. Incumbent candidates Michael Patrolia of 15 Cushing Road for the Board of Assessors and John Beck of 44 Nichols Road for the Sewer commission signaled their intent to run for another term.

John McNabb of the Water Commission and Nancy Barrett of the Housing Authority previously took out nomination papers.

Healey Dippold is a lifelong resident of the South Shore and a new resident to Cohasset.

"I'm excited to live in a town so full of charm, natural beauty and character," said Healey Dippold in an e-mail this week. "If elected, I'd continue to help the Planning Board preserve those characteristics while balancing the needs of development and progress, such as ensuring that our local commercial areas continue to thrive to the benefit of our citizens."

For her day job, Healey Dippold is a prosecutor for the Office of the Attorney General on consumer protection issues, with a focus on home improvement contractor, real estate and mortgage fraud.

"I would bring a thorough and thoughtful approach to the projects before the Planning Board," said Healey Dippold.

Positions available for the 2009 town election include: Selectmen — one three-year position; School Committee – two three-year positions; Trustees Paul Pratt Memorial Library – three three-year positions; Assessor—one three-year position; Board of Health — one three-year position; Planning Board — one for five-year position; Recreation Commission – one five-year position; Housing Authority – one five-year position; Sewer Commission – one three-year position; and Water Commission — one three-year position.

The last day to take out nomination papers is Thursday, Feb. 12. In order to hold a position you must be registered voter of the town. In order to hold an elected office, you must be a registered voter of the town. It is important to note that you are not running for office until you take out papers and the Board of Registrars certifies your signatures.

Annual Town Election will be held on Saturday, April 4, 2009.

MLK Day breakfast draws a crowd

Last Saturday, Jan. 17, the Cohasset Diversity Committee along with Cohasset clergy hosted its aAnnual Martin Luther King Day Breakfast. Now in its eight year, the breakfast has become a Cohasset tradition for all ages. This year it also served as the kick-off of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library's 2009 Cohasset Reads Together Program presented by the Friends of the Library.

At least 150 people filled Trueblood Hall at First Parish Unitarian Universalist on North Main Street to celebrate Dr. King's Birthday.

Thermal imaging camera finds cold spots

Sustainable Cohasset in collaboration with Sustainable South Shore has the use of a thermal imaging camera for Cohasset next week.

This will be used to measure heat loss in houses and buildings and is available on a first come basis. Photos of the results will be provided for the homeowner to use. There is a nominal fee of $25 for members and $50 for non-members.

If you are interested, please call Steve Hague at 781-383-2410 or Clark Brewer at 781-383-0873 to schedule an appointment.

Police Beat

Inebriated man taken into protective custody

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 27-year-old Hingham man was taken into protective custody after neighbors in the Doane Street area reported seeing a man walking through backyards. One caller reported he was banging on the door and asking to come in. Protective custody is not an arrest.

At 8:19 p.m. police responded to call from Doane Street about a strange vehicle, with the driver's side door open that was parked on the front lawn.

The incident apparently started when Scituate police notified Cohasset at about 7:40 p.m. on Friday (Jan. 16) about an erratically operated 2006 Saab on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A).

At 8:19 p.m. police responded to call from Doane Street about a strange vehicle, with the driver's side door open that was parked on the front lawn.

The responding officer recognized the vehicle as the same one that Scituate police had reported as being driving erratically. There were no keys in the car and the officer saw footprints in the snow from the car to the house and back. The Scituate K-9 unit was called but police found the man on the side of the road and the K-9 was not needed.

He was under the influence of alcohol and taken into protective custody. Police said he was trying to determine where he was when he banged on the resident's door.

Loose horse

A horse that had gotten loose from a nearby barn caused some excitement at about 5 p.m. on Saturday. Police received multiple calls about a horse loose on Sohier Street that was heading toward Route 3A. The animal control officer and police tried to corral the animal. The owner arrived and captured the horse, which was now in the side yard by Deer Hill.

The horse owner's vehicle, a 2004 Chevrolet Silverado, which he had driven down to the area, was parked in the travel lane on Sohier Street. Police ran a check on the plates and it turned out the registration was expired and insurance had been revoked. The 50-year-old Cohasset man is being summonsed for operating a motor vehicle with a suspended registration and for operating an uninsured vehicle, police said.

No plates

A local motel complained about a 2004 Jaguar that had been parked in the lot that was not properly registered and was impeding snow plowing last week. The motel had left notes but had received no response. Police seized the plates after running the registration and finding it to be revoked, Chief Hussey said. The computer revealed the insurance had been revoked and the registered owner, who lives in Braintree, had a suspended license.

Since the car was on private property, the officer suggested that the motel have it towed.

However, sometime later the motel reported that someone was entering the car and leaving the lot. Police could not locate the car but notified other police departments to be on the lookout.

Worksite theft

Police are investigating the theft of lumber from a home under construction near the 700 block of Jerusalem Road. The contractor noticed the missing lumber and went to the police station. There were no apparent witnesses. Police have put on extra patrols in the area and the matter remains under investigation.

Possible larceny

The owner of a business in the 700 block of Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) reported a possible larceny of money by an employee. The business owner asked police to be on hand to keep the peace the following day (Saturday) when the employee would be terminated. Chief Hussey said there were no problems.

He said police have collected evidence regarding the larceny and the matter was turned over to detectives.

Off-road vehicles

Police received two complaints last week, one about dirt bikes and the other about All Terrain Vehicles, dubbed ATVs. Both complaints concerned the Hull Street-Grace Drive area.

Police investigated the first incident that occurred on private property and not a public way.

Hingham police reported the second incident about ATVs being operated on public ways in their town and was looking for help in identifying the offenders.

Cohasset police went to the house and identified the ATV riders. Hingham police will be following up.

Dirt bikes and ATVs are not properly registered and insured and should not be operated on public ways, police said.

Stolen wallet

Police referred a Cohasset woman to Framingham police after she went to Cohasset police headquarters on Saturday to report that her wallet had been stolen that day while she was in Framingham. Police have jurisdiction where the crime took place. Cohasset police told her to cancel her credit cards and to make contact with the FPD.

Turf field: Lead should not be a concern accomplished the project will go out to bid, be constructed over the summer and be ready for fall sports.

What may not have helped the fundraising campaign was a Boston Globe article published earlier this week about lead found in a recently installed turf field at Concord-Carlisle High School.

However, McGoldrick said when Cohasset's turf field goes out to bid, one of the requirements in the request for proposals (RFP) will be the field not contain any lead.

"A number of the major manufacturers make their turf fields without any lead."
— George McGoldrick, Cohasset Sports Partnership

"A number of the major manufacturers make their turf fields without any lead," said McGoldrick. Additionally, the engineers who install the field will have to insure there is no lead in the product that goes in.

Steve Bobo, a longtime member of the Board of Health, has written about lead in turf fields in his weekly Mariner column "Health Notes."

"The Board of Health has concerns with turf fields. Our position on it was that if the town opts to buy a turf field, it must have the manufacturer specify the lead content," said Bobo in a phone interview. As long as the town did its due diligence in ensuring the manufacturer lists all the constituencies and there was no lead, then there shouldn't be a serious health risk.

"If that's done and there's no lead in the turf field, there are no disadvantages to having the field," said Bobo.

The Globe commissioned independent lead testing of the several city and suburban turf fields. The Concord field installed in the fall was found to have 300 parts per million lead. The standard for bare soil in children's play areas set by the US Environmental Protection Agency is a maximum of 400 parts per million.

In July 2008, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) issued a press release reporting after evaluation they determined young children are not at risk from exposure to lead found in synthetic turf.

"CPSC staff evaluation showed that newer fields had no lead or generally had the lowest lead levels. Although small amounts of lead were detected on the surface of some older fields, none of these tested fields released amounts of lead that would be harmful to children," states the release. The release did call for voluntary standards be developed for synthetic turf to preclude the use of lead in future products.

The Cohasset turf field project was supported with a majority vote at November's Special Town Meeting. The passage of the article authorizes the town to borrow up to $500,000 to design, permit and construct the field, but conditions that bond with having $550,000 in private funds available to be raised by the Cohasset Sports Partnership.

Capital requests pouring in Library, recreation and elder affairs present their case

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"We have more requests this year than I think we've ever seen."
— Steve Gaumer, Capital Budget Committee

It's a case of putting two pounds of potatoes in a one-pound sack. With a rising number of capital requests and a small pot of money, the Capital Budget Committee has the task of narrowing and prioritizing the requests.

On Tuesday night, they heard the needs from the first group of departments: Elder Affairs, Recreation and Library.

The Capital Budget Committee makes recommendations on capital spending, but it is ultimately the voters at Town Meeting on which capital items get purchased. Each Town Meeting season the Capital Budget Committee hears from town departments about their capital items and project needs. They have the job of narrowing down the requests to a few that go forward to the Town Meeting floor.

Capital purchases during this town meeting cycle will be funded through the capital stabilization fund, established at the 2008 Annual Town Meeting. Free cash, which has been used for capital expenditures in the past, is near an all time low and will not be able to use for capital items for this go round. The plan is to put future debt service roll-off into the stabilization fund (which requires an annual vote of Town Meeting) and use it to maintain and replace the town's capital assets.

Computers for the library children's room, a resurfacing of the Milliken tennis courts and a replacement van for the Senior Center topped discussion Tuesday night. No recommendations were made as of yet because more departments are scheduled to come over the next few weeks.

"We have more requests this year than I think we've ever seen," said Steve Gaumer, chairman of the Capital Budget Committee. Close to $3 million capital expenditures are proposed for fiscal 2010.

Linda Elworthy, director of Elder Affairs, said the seniors are in need of a 12-passenger van for their growing transportation services. The current 1998 Dodge Ram van has low mileage (69,000 miles), but was in an accident a few years ago and never fully recovered. This year the van has used up close to 50 percent of the van maintenance budget, Elworthy said. Volunteer drivers are finding the van's doors particularly hard to open and close.

"It's just not in good shape," said Elworthy.

Elworthy noted the Elder Affairs is providing more and more transport trips each year. In 2007, they provided 2764 rides, in 2008, 3606 rides and now, halfway through fiscal 2009, 2000 rides. Seniors request rides to popular events like the Wednesday luncheons and more necessary trips to the supermarket and medical appointments.

Member Peter Decaprio noted there could be a trade-in value for the van because of its low miles. He also suggested looking at purchasing a van with low miles that may be coming off a lease that might be cheaper, but still serve the purpose, than a new van.

Recreation

Recreation Director Ted Carroll came before the Capital Budget Committee with the recreation department's first-ever, five-year capital plan. The top priority for the department was a renovation of the Milliken tennis courts estimated at $100,000.

"They are the only public tennis courts in town, but they do need some major work," said Carroll. The tennis courts, which are the home courts for the high school tennis team, have not been touched since the high school renovation about 10 years ago. The estimate includes court re-surfacing, repair of a retaining wall, fencing, netting and lighting.

The committee asked Carroll to get a more specific cost estimate with the break out costs, warranties and useful life. Carroll also brought up capital projects for the basketball court at the library, lights at the Elms Meadow skating pond and a bandstand on the library property.

"We recognize recreational facilities are important assets not only for the kids but also adults," said Carroll.

Library

The library came forth with three requests for fiscal 2010. The children's room computers are seven years old and library trustee Stacey Weaver presented that as the top capital priority. The cost estimate is $12,000.

"It is a continuation of the replacement of all the computers started two years ago," said Weaver. "These computers are literally wired together with dental floss."

The Capital Budget Committee said plans were afoot to develop a town-wide technology plan because of the opportunity to save some money.

"I'm not sure we can wait for that with seven year old computers," said Weaver.

Gaumer agreed, "if they are breaking down to the point where services are inhibited then we have to consider it carefully."

Member Jack Keniley asked if the library had looking into the state cooperative buy program where computers possibly be purchased cheaper.

The library also requested funding to finish the staff workroom, which was never completed when the building was renovated ($5000), due to a more than doubling of circulation at the new library building. At the former library building on South Main, the library lent out 60,000 to 65,000 books each year. In fiscal 2008, they loaned almost 150,000 items.

Library Trustee Patience Towle said with the down economy libraries across the nation are expecting a rise in usage. As people cut back on personal expenses, they may turn to the library to fill the gap as far as computer usage and lending services.

The library also submitted a plan to reupholster some furniture in the library ($2500).

Community Preservation applications available

Community Preservation Committee chairman Stuart Ivimey said this week he has yet to receive any applications for project funding to be considered at the upcoming town meeting. Some groups have approached him with preliminary plans to apply for funding.

The Friends of Elder Affairs is considering an application for engineering and architectural services for a proposed new senior center.

The Historical Society would like to use some leftover funds from previous allocation toward other items.

The Open Space Committee may seek funding for the Morrissey property located off Beach Street.

"If people are interested in applying for funds, I'd suggest they get in touch with me asap," said Ivimey.

Ivimey can be reached by e-mail at stuart.ivimey@verizon.net.

"The way I look at it, if funding is available we have as much a shot as anyone else."
— Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr

To many across the nation a billion dollars, let alone hundreds of billion dollars, is an inconceivable number. But, on the local level, a $650 billion bill put forth by President Barack Obama could mean a renovated Town Hall or a new culvert at Jacob's Meadow.

Or at least that's what the town is hoping a federal economic stimulus package will translate into for Cohasset. During the first part of January, town departments put the nose to the grindstone and put together applications for 19 projects estimated to cost about $21 million. They had just seven days to do it.

"I'm really pleased everyone really jumped to," said Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr, who helped Town Manager Bill Griffin get mobilized early on the putting together the applications.

However, Cohasset will face stiff competition from other towns across the state. According to Carr, whose day job is chief of staff for the Executive Office of Housing and Economic Development, the municipal facilities task force received 3500 applications from cities and towns.

The projects ranges from the much publicized (the high school turf field project) to some few people have heard of (the wind turbine power generation for the wastewater treatment plant).

"These were items on the various departments wish lists," said Carr.

The municipal facilities task force is a 20-member board made up of elected officials and state employees. Carr will serve on the committee as a town official/selectman representative.

"Right now, we're trying to come up with the criteria to judge the submissions," said Carr.

The projects will be considered for funding under the mobilization for significant infrastructure investment initiative, if the federal economic recovery bill is enacted. The bill is expected to be available for Obama's signature in early February.

"The way I look at it, if funding is available we have as much a shot as anyone else," said Carr. If President Obama signs the bill into law, the money could be available almost immediately.

The possibility of outside federal funding is important because it could allow the town to complete projects, some desperately needed, they might otherwise not be able to afford, Carr said.

For example, Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons has put forth a project to renovate the partially deteriorated harbor boat ramp. She has said at previous meetings if there was ever was an emergency, like a hurricane, it would take three days, 24 hours a day to remove 350 boats from the harbor. In recent years, the bottom of the ramp has eroded and can only handle one boat at a time.

"That is something the town would have a hard time paying for," said Carr. If the town does receive federal funding for any of the projects, it could have short- and long-term financial impacts. If projects were chosen that the town would eventually have to pay for, it would prevent the town from taking on additional debt. The extra monies could be used to pay down debt already on the books as well or be used for something else needed in the budget, Carr explained.

"For the long term economic health of the town, it's a good thing," Carr said.

One of the projects Carr believes has a very good chance of receiving funding is the Town Hall renovation and restoration.

"That renovation is well overdue…and it is something the town would have a hard time doing without some outside funding sources," said Carr. Preliminary estimates for the Town Hall renovation are over $4 million.

However, Carr said the project has a lot going for it that could make it an attractive project for funding. The project involves a pillar of the community, could create a revenue generating location for the town (rental space) and stimulate the local economy through jobs and leased space for town offices while the work is ongoing.

Perhaps most importantly, Carr said the fact the project would put over 100 mostly local tradesman to work makes it attractive from a local economy standpoint and, in turn, coincides to what the federal stimulus package is all about — creating jobs and work for the unemployed or underemployed.

One of the other key attributes is the project could be ready to go in a short amount of time since much of the preliminary work has been completed. The application estimates about 18 weeks to engineer the project and in week 19 the project could go out to bid.

"They know they can get going on the project in the next six months and it could be completed in a year and a half," said Carr. "I'm optimistic that project will be considered well."

The projects

From the town

- Jacobs Meadow culvert repair and upgrade
- Cohasset Village revitalization, phase III
- Alumni Athletic Field replacement
- DPW salt shed replacement
- Harbor boat launching ramp
- Wiggle detention construction
- Various dam improvements
- North Main Street sidewalk extension
- Treat's Pond watershed – in basin storage
- James Brook watershed – in basin storage
- Various drainage culvert replacements
- Comprehensive restoration and rehabilitation of Cohasset Town Hall

From the Water Commission

- Expansion of water treatment plant
- Drinking water distribution system improvements
- Installation of water meters and AMR system
- Restoration of the Beechwood Street culvert

From the Sewer Commission

- Central Cohasset sewer service replacement project
- Wind turbine power generation for WWTP

Avalon apartments in final planning

Developers aiming to break ground in summer

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

An off-site plan for sidewalks, the on-site wastewater treatment plant, final building plans and various other site development issues are being finalized.

The 200-unit apartment Avalon apartment complex slated for a 62-acre parcel off Route 3A is still very much on its way to breaking ground.

It has been nearly six months since the developers reached an accord with the Water Commission over an on-site wastewater treatment, but nothing has happened on the site yet.

Scott Dale, Vice President of Development and project manager for Avalon Cohasset, said the company is looking at a construction start date of July 1.

"We're working on a number of issues, all of which pertain to the final plans of construction," said Dale in a phone interview this week. An off-site plan for sidewalks, the on-site wastewater treatment plant, final building plans and various other site development issues are being finalized.

The Avalon project was issued a comprehensive permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals for 200 apartments more than five years ago. What can be described as a controversial project will bring 200 apartments, evenly split between one- and two-bedroom units, to a 62-acre plot off Route 3A. The entrance to the complex will be across from Good Sport.

The complex was approved as a 40-B project. Under Chapter 40B, a state law, a town's zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20 to 25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns that are under the 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards are vulnerable to 40-B projects.

Twenty-five percent of the units, or 50, will be considered affordable. The state encourages rental housing, and because all 200 Avalon units would be rentals, all units — affordable and market rate — would be counted toward the town's affordable housing inventory. However, Cohasset currently has 76 units (or 2.8 percent) of affordable housing. The project will bring Cohasset within about 30 units to compliance with 40-B.

The Avalon developers have been working with Building Inspector Bob Egan in preparation for pulling a building permit and will need to go before the ZBA with the final drawings.

Originally Avalon Cohasset was aiming to being construction in the spring with the first occupancies in winter 2009. However, Dale said, with a July 2009 construction sequence the first occupancies are in the spring 2010, which is typically a more favorable leasing season.

The developers of Avalon have been keeping abreast of the proposed plans for two wind turbines on the abutting property.

"We are keeping in close communication with the proponents," said Dale. "We are concerned there will be some impact, particularly with shadowing and noise."

The exact turbine locations are still being finalized, but the Avalon apartments will be residences closest to the turbines.

WINTER WONDER

Hello Cohasset. This snow is so pretty outside don't you think? I know, Jen you are too sappy but hey, we have to try and find the good side of things. Hats off once again to the DPW workers, Police and Fire Departments and the many others who have helped to keep the roads safe and deal with a number of winter-time cold weather issues. For anyone who is looking for something for the kiddos to do on Friday nights while the grown ups head out for some grown up time, give the Our World Museum a call at 781-383-3198 or, send an email to ourworldprograms@comcast.net and they can be registered for tonight from 5:30-9:30 for a fun-filled evening with dinner included, arts and crafts, music, movies and so much more. Now, on to this week's news…

OFF TO ITALY

I want to start this week's news by letting everyone know of one special young lady. Cohasset's own Rhianna Fitts, daughter of Doug and Jackie, is currently in the 10th grade at Cohasset and was accepted into the AFS (American Field Service, an International exchange since 1919) program and will be leaving on Jan. 28th to begin a semester in Italy!

She'll be living with a host family in Curtatone, outside of Mantua in the Lombardy region, and attending a local secondary school full-time there. This is something she's hoped to do for a long time. Her very proud family will miss her but are very excited that she's willing to undertake this great cultural experience.

Cohasset is very excited for you Rhianna and I would love for you to send me updates if possible of your experiences as they happen. Best of luck and enjoy the entire trip!!!

SCI/COH BOARD

The Scituate Cohasset Youth Football & Cheerleading organization is having an open meeting on Wednesday Feb. 11 at 7pm at the Scituate Public Library. All interested parties are urged to attend this meeting and petition for a position on the Board of Directors. The Sci/Coh Board is actively seeking new members to help manage the organization for the Fall 2009 season and into the future. Contact any current board member for information through: www.scicohfootball.com

COLLEGE HONORS

Congratulations go out to a number of college students from Cohasset. First, Katrina Reardon, who is a member of the class of 2010, has been named to the Dean's List at Providence College for the Fall 2008 semester. To qualify for the Dean's List, students must achieve at least a 3.55 grade point average with a minimum of 12 credits.

Next we have Stephen Daniel Hurlbut, a 2008 graduate of Cohasset High School, who has been named to the 2008 fall honor roll at Oklahoma State University in Stillwater, Okla. Stephen had to have a grade point average of 3.50 or higher with no grade below a "C" to be placed on the Dean's Honor Roll.

Last, but certainly not least, we have Laura Kondrat, who has been named to the dean's list at Quincy College for the Fall 2008 semester. Laura had to earn a 3.75 GPA or above in her courses this semester for this honor.

Nice work and effort by all, keep up the good work.

BASKET MAKING

Interested participants will be allowed to make a Nantucket Basket at this upcoming Nantucket Baskets for Beginners Workshop at the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell. The four-week workshop is from 7-8:30 p.m. and starts Tuesday, Feb. 24 and continues on the following Tuesdays March 3, 10, and 17th. The instructor states that "At the end of the workshop, each participant will have made a Nantucket Basket and also have a mold to continue making more Baskets. It's a rewarding hobby and especially great to do during the winter months."

The cost of the workshop includes all materials and the mold to continue making baskets; a 4 inch basket is $75, 6 inch basket $110 and an 8 inch basket $140. Call the South Shore Natural Science Center at 781-659-2559 to pre-register, deadline Feb. 3. For your convenience, payment may be made with a major credit card by telephone.

GARDEN CLUB

The January meeting of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset will take place at Bancroft Hall on Tuesday Jan. 27th at 9:30 a.m. This change in location for the general meeting only applies to the January meeting. The speaker is Debbie Cook, the manager of the Greenscapes Program. Her topic is Greenscapes: Strategies for Creating Beautiful and Healthy Lawns.

Debbie will discuss simple changes that can take a lawn from chemical and water dependence to a thriving, healthy mini eco-system that retains water.

SIGNUPS

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association is holding its annual registration for the upcoming baseball and softball season through Feb. 10. Visit: www.CYBSA.net to register online. Please direct any question regarding registration to info@cybsa.net or call Erik Golz at 617-230-2559.

That is all for this week. Send in next weeks news to me no later than 5:00 on Tuesday night.

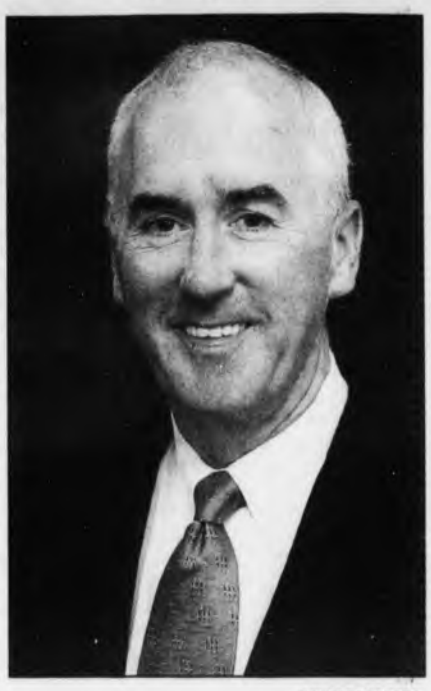
BUSINESS NOTES

Richard P. Campbell recipient of Andrew C. Hecker Memorial Award

The American Bar Association Tort Trial & Insurance Practice Section will honor Richard P. Campbell of Cohasset with the Andrew C. Hecker Memorial Award. The award, named in honor of the late Andrew C. Hecker of Philadelphia, is presented annually to lawyers who have consistently demonstrated, and continue to demonstrate, the qualities of leadership, outreach, enthusiasm, professionalism and pride in TIPS and its accomplishments.



The award will be presented to Campbell during the ABA Midyear Meeting in Boston at the section's welcome and diversity reception at 6 p.m., on Friday, Feb. 13, at the John Adams Courthouse, 1 Pemberton Square.

Campbell is the founder of Campbell Campbell Edwards & Conroy Professional Corp., a firm of trial lawyers with offices in Boston, Philadelphia and other cities in New England and New Jersey. He is a fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers and is certified as a Civil Trial Advocate by the National Board of Trial Advocacy.

After receiving his bachelor of arts degree from the University of Massachusetts in 1970, Campbell earned his law degree, cum laude, from Boston College Law School. In 1995, the law school presented him with its highest award, the Founder's Medal, for his achievements and dedication to the law. He is admitted to practice in all courts of Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Florida, the federal courts of Connecticut, Vermont, the southern and eastern districts of New York, the Court of Appeals for the First Circuit and the United States Supreme Court. He currently serves as chairman of the Board of Overseers for Boston College Law School.

Campbell represents numerous national and international corporations in complex cases, including multi-district litigation, class actions, products liability, aviation, toxic tort and employment disputes. He has tried cases on behalf of clients in several states, including Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire and New Jersey, and has coordinated litigation in locations throughout the United States, including Pennsylvania, Texas, Montana, Vermont, New York, Illinois, Kentucky and California. Currently, Campbell is a member of the Defense Executive Committee as representative of the non-carrier airlines in the litigation pending in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York arising out of the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11.

A leader of state, national, and international bar associations, he has served as chairman of TIPS and is a director of its National Trial Academy. After Sept. 11, the president of the ABA appointed him to its Task Force on Terrorism and the Law and then served as chairman of the task force on the Sept. 11 Victim Compensation Fund. Campbell served as dean of the International Association of Defense Counsel's Corporate Counsel College and has been a member of the executive committees of the International Association of Defense Counsel and the Product Liability Advisory Council.

Cystic Fibrosis fundraiser is Saturday

Atlantica Restaurant in Cohasset will host Abby's Auction for a Cure at 7 p.m., on Saturday, Jan. 24. Cystic Fibrosis is a genetic disease that causes thick, sticky mucus in various glands throughout the body. The pancreas becomes obstructed, blocking digestive enzymes and results in malabsorption. The primary concern, however, is the toll on the lungs where obstructed airways lead to chronic infections and accelerated loss of lung function.

The evening at the Atlantica Restaurant will include a silent auction, balloon raffles, hors d'oeuvres and live entertainment. Tickets are $35 at the door. Help support this cause and have some fun doing it. Support will help fund the research for adding tomorrows everyday for children who endure CF.

For more information and to purchase tickets, call the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation at 800-966-0444.

experience. I think that's the amazing thing, in addition to being able to look out at the Earth as it passes by. The overall experience of living in an environment like this."

The Cohasset Mariner again spoke with Bowen about two weeks after Endeavour landed at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Bowen said that his spaceflight experience was sweetened by the presence of a friend, his 2000 astronaut classmate and STS-126 Pilot Eric Boe.

"Any trip is better when you share it with a friend," said Bowen. "You have someone to bounce things off of, and you can point out things to each other."

The next day, Boe said that STS-126 was "a great adventure. It was truly amazing. The space station is a true marvel. The pictures don't do it justice."

Boe served as the IV, the intravehicular officer or choreographer, during Bowen's spacewalks.

"I was working with Steve on his EVA [extravehicular activity]. We had practiced it a lot. But it's not like hearing it in real time on the radio."

Added Boe: "Cameras don't do it justice. The colors are two or three times more vivid. The planet is alive.

"Steve is a great guy and a pleasure to work with. I look forward to many more years with him."

According to Bowen, getting home and talking to his family were his first post-flight priorities.

"You can send an e-mail from orbit, but now I'm getting back into the swing of things," he said in mid-December.

"We attended a horse show this weekend. Now we're cleaning and putting up Christmas lights. I also have a hurricane roof issue to take care of, which I was not allowed to do before my flight."

Hurricane Ike ravaged the Houston area in mid-September, but NASA does not permit astronauts to engage in potentially hazardous activities in the months before a space flight.

Bowen's ties to the Cohasset school system are still strong. The astronaut joked: "My mother worked in the school system for 1,000 years."

He said that Pat Plante, his high school teacher for his mechanical drawing class, attended the launch along with Plante's son.

Living on the ISS was much like living on a submarine, Bowen also said.

"You're living on top of each other, even though the ISS is fairly large. Even the odor of the ISS is similar to a submarine. Although on a submarine, the odor is worse.

"You have to know your systems and your crewmates. You have to depend on them to do their jobs. You can't be independent. You are interdependent."

How does training for spaceflight differ from the real thing?

"I was surprised at how little I was surprised," replied Bowen. "How quickly you adapt. After 8-1/2 minutes, there goes 50 percent of your training."

The space shuttle goes from 0 mph on the launch pad to 17,500 mph in orbit in less than 9 minutes.

And just how was that first step outside the ISS for the first spacewalk?

"It was just amazing to go outside. Nothing obstructs your view. It's like you're hanging on a building."

Then Bowen related an anecdote about the irony of perspective.

"On EVA 3, my second, we were flying across the U.S. at night. We flew over Massachusetts. I looked down, and there's some lights. I thought to myself, 'Oh, we must be passing Boston.' My family was looking up as I was looking down."

A few days later, the Cohasset Mariner spoke with local resident Patricia "Trish" Fontaine, Bowen's sister. She confirmed that the extended Bowen family was waving as they watched Bowen, the ISS and the shuttle pass overhead.

Fontaine even quoted the exact day and time from memory: "5:34 a.m. Saturday," the morning of Nov. 22.

"I can't believe how unreal a lift-off is," said the enthusiastic Fontaine. "Steve asked us about it. It's a party atmosphere, with high anticipation.

"The speed made me feel overwhelmed. I asked him about it, and he said the lift-off was just amazing."

Revealed Fontaine: "I saw one of Steve's friends at the grocery store today. He asked me about the lift-off. I told him it was the most unbelievable experience."

Fontaine viewed the STS-126 launch from the Banana Creek site at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida, the traditional vantage point for astronauts' family members.

"NASA treats astronaut families very well," she said. "It's a good community, a good family. We were on our buses for a midnight tour, with an astronaut as our tour guide. We got to see Steve before lift-off, at a distance. He was excited."

Fontaine claimed that Bowen is unfazed by his new adventures. "He's still a regular guy. He doesn't want to show off."

She quipped: "He's a cute kid."

Astronauts attend post-flight briefing

Bowen could visit Cohasset

By Jill Michaels
CORRESPONDENT

During the STS-126 post-flight presentation on Jan. 8 at Space Center Houston, mission commander Chris Ferguson —noted for his dry wit — described his crew's on-orbit adventure as one worthy of James Bond.

Looking at Ginger Kerrick, NASA's lead station flight director during STS-126, Ferguson joked: "In this analogy, you would be M. You're the one who makes our day-to-day operational decisions."

Turning to STS-126 lead shuttle flight director Mike Sarafin, Ferguson deadpanned: "And of course you are Q, with all our gadgets to get the job done."

That evening, each astronaut received NASA's Space Flight Medal. The medals, typically presented by the director of the Johnson Space Center (JSC), were bestowed upon the STS-126 crewmembers by visiting NASA Administrator Mike Griffin. Former astronaut Mike Coats, now JSC director, assisted Griffin with presenting the accompanying certificates.

A representative from the Cohasset Mariner was sitting in the Houston audience when Bowen received his Space Flight Medal.

During the debriefing's question-and-answer session, Ferguson confirmed to the audience that the STS-126 crew would march in Barack Obama's presidential inaugural parade on Jan. 20.

"We were thrilled to be invited," Ferguson said.

Bowen and his six crewmates accompanied NASA's Lunar Electric Rover this past Tuesday along the two-mile Pennsylvania Avenue parade route from the Capitol to the White House. The rover, chosen from a record 1,382 parade applications, not only participated in the march but served as the parade's finale.

The post-flight schedule for each STS-126 crewmember calls for a hometown visit the week of Feb. 22. JSC's Astronaut Appearances Office in Houston has advised the Cohasset Mariner that Feb. 23-25 are the working dates for Bowen's rounds in South Boston, including anticipated stops at Deer Hill School and Cohasset High School.

Bowen's own astronaut appearances will mark a full circle for him. He was attending the U.S. Naval Academy when his former Cohasset math teacher, Mr. Walsh, visited him there. Together they attended a presentation by Bruce McCandless, the astronaut who first wore NASA's MMU (Manned Maneuvering Unit) during a spacewalk in 1984.

The Cohasset Mariner will provide further details about Bowen's upcoming February tour as NASA confirms dates and times as well as any additional venues.

Parisian clothes on display at Historical Society

said DiGiacomo. "It can be frustrating."

To the best of their ability, DiGiacomo and Martha Hurtig, chairwoman of the textile collection, tried to gather information on each item's individual history and the designer's history.

The inspiration behind the exhibit began about two years ago when the Historical Society sent a couple of their Paris fashions to an exhibit in Nassau County in Long Island, New York.

The inspiration behind the exhibit began about two years ago when the Historical Society sent a couple of their Paris fashions to an exhibit in Nassau County in Long Island, New York.

"We figured it was time for us to show them," said DiGiacomo.

The dresses are the standout pieces of the collection. One of the dresses, a navy velvet evening gown with elaborate beading was designed by Paris-based Corbay-Wenzel. DiGiacomo found a similar white beaded dress by the same designer commissioned for Empress Maria Feodorovna of Russia, the mother of Tsar Nicholas II.

A sheer knit overdress with stunning royal blue beading was donated by the Bancroft family in 1964. It was designed by Madam S. Moghabghab and is circa 1915 to 1920.

Mrs. Lyman Gutterson donated a stylish ivory dress with ornate embroidery in 1956. It has a coordinating jacket and hat. According to the label, the dress was imported by one of the more prominent importers, Thurn. It dates back to between 1915 and 1920.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

A white cape that dates from 1884-1889 is on display along with an evening dress that was designed by Rouff and dates back to around 1900.

The Historical Society was only able to display about half of its "Paris textiles" because of the disrepair the items were in. Others on display had to be exhibited creatively to camouflage their flaws. One such piece, a black crepe and silk Paul Peirot, is not in tip-top shape, yet the story of the designer made it worthy for display. Peirot opened his fashion house in 1903 with a line of controversial kimono coats. After serving in World War I, his styles fell out of fashion, he went bankrupt, closed in 1929 and his leftover clothes were sold as rags. Tough break.

The Historical Society literally has thousands of textile pieces in their possession from parasols to wall hangings to needlepoint samplers to underwear.

"I think the idea of a small society like we are having so many of these dresses is really quite amazing," Hurtig notes. The Parisian exhibit will be on display for the next few weeks.

Next up for the Historical Society

In February, the Cohasset Historical Society will unveil an exhibit devoted to Civil War artifacts. The exhibit is being put together in conjunction with the Paul Pratt Memorial Library's Cohasset Reads Together program. One of the books, David Blight's "A Slave No More," features the manuscript of an emancipated slave who spent the final years of his life in Cohasset.

One of the highlights of the exhibit is sure to be the three sets of letters from Cohasset Civil War veterans. The letters are in the process of being transcribed — a difficult task considering their age and subsequent fading and the lack of spelling and punctuation.

Civil War soldiers' mementos and other memorabilia will be on display.

One can learn the history of gift-wrapping from a display in the Paris exhibit at the Historical Society.

Fido loved Abe Lincoln

By Alexander Macmillan
SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

Many people don't know that Abraham Lincoln and his family owned a pet dog while they lived in Springfield, Ill. Fido was born in circa 1855 and lived with the Lincoln family for five happy years. The dog was of uncertain ancestry, but closely resembled a retriever/shepherd mix and was roughly the color of mustard.

Fido often followed Lincoln around the streets of Springfield, happily carrying the daily paper or some other object for his master. The dog would wait calmly outside the barbershop while Lincoln would get a trim. Fido was apparently a full-fledged member of the family and was an inside dog with the run of the house. He loved a horsehair sofa in the home and often claimed it for his own.

Lincoln's dog, Fido, often followed him around the streets of Springfield.

His time with the Lincoln family ended upon Lincoln's election to the presidency.

His time with the Lincoln family ended upon Lincoln's election to the presidency. Lincoln noticed how terrified Fido was of the cannon blasts marking Lincoln's election and never enjoyed being around trains. Lincoln loved animals with a passion (he abhorred hunting and fishing, for example) and strongly believed that Fido would not survive the trip to Washington. So with great sorrow, the Lincolns gave Fido to a local family with the stipulation that he be an indoor dog, given special treats, allowed the run of the home, etc. In fact, the Lincolns even gave Fido's favorite horsehair sofa to the family who took over the raising of Fido.

Fido was still living at the time of Lincoln's assassination and his new owners brought the dog to greet mourners at the Lincoln family home in Springfield. Sadly, Fido himself was killed by a drunken man within a year of Lincoln's death.

Alexander Macmillan is chairman of Hingham Historical Commission.

Event celebrates two Lincolns

Hingham Historical Society has announced plans for Lincoln Day 2009, and promises it will be a celebration of history and community. Lincoln Day will take place at 11 a.m., Saturday, Feb. 7, at Old Ship Church, 106 Main St., Hingham.

Lincoln Dayis named in honor of Gen. Benjamin Lincoln, a hero of the American Revolution, and Abraham Lincoln, 16th president and the pre-eminent figure of the Civil War. In this year 2009, the 200th anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's birth, Lincoln Day, will focus on the deeds and legacy of Abraham Lincoln and on the life and legacy of a Lincoln contemporary, Hingham resident, leading abolitionist and governor of Massachusetts during the Civil War era – John Albion Andrew.

The event will feature the Hingham Militia, a color guard from the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, (once commanded by Gen. Lincoln, and a number of commemorative and re-enactment Civil War groups. Representatives of various patriotic organizations.

The principal ceremony will take place at Old Ship Church, both the place of community worship and the seat of town government in 17th century Hingham and Cohasset.. The ceremony will feature familiar patriotic songs, organ music, vocal renditions provided by a mixed chorus from Hingham High School and brief remarks. Following the Old Ship portion of the ceremony, there will be the traditional procession by participants and attendees down Main Street through Hingham Square to the Lincoln Statute and Gen. Lincoln memorial at Fountain Square where wreaths will be placed and military honors rendered. The procession then returns to Old Derby, headquarters of the Historical Society, for light refreshments.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Congratulations, President Obama

Present and future voters send their congratulations and best wishes to President Barack Obama on the historic occasion of his inauguration as President of the United States.

The election of President Obama was a social and political milestone in our history.

As our first African-American president, Obama officially took office just a day after we commemorated Martin Luther King Jr. Day on Jan. 20.

Some four decades ago, Dr. King gave his inspiring "I Have a Dream" speech.

On Jan. 20, 2009, that dream came true as Obama took the oath of office.

We still have a long journey ahead of us to reach the day when all men and women stand together as brothers and sisters, but we have attained a significant destination along the road.

Like Dr. King, we have been to the mountaintop and have glimpsed our destination achieved.

Many look forward to the dawn of a new era.

It will take the united effort of our countrymen and its leaders to address the economic and political crises we now face at home and worldwide.

Of course no president has ever been unanimously elected, but, the day after Election Day, the spirit of the people unanimously supports our country's leader.

Gathering in support behind the incoming president is an American tradition and a cornerstone of our democracy.

One local woman recalls, as a child, asking her aunt who she had voted for in that presidential election.

"On the day after an election, everyone voted for the president," the aunt said.

Of course no president has ever been unanimously elected, but, the day after Election Day, the spirit of the people unanimously supports our country's leader.

America is called a melting pot because we are made up of so many races, religions, cultures, and ethnic groups; yet we are not a bland brew. No matter who we are, every day we bump into people who are not "like us."

In a multi-cultural society such as ours, embracing differences is important, but so is the acceptance of difference.

"To be one, to be united, is a great thing. But to respect the right to be different is maybe even greater," U2 lead singer Bono once said.

At the end of the day — and at the beginning and noon of the day and all through the night — we are one people.

Many religions, many races, many ethnic origins, yet united under the banner of democracy.

Shortly after Sept. 11, 2001, celebrated American author Barbara Kingsolver wrote about our unity in "And Our Flag Was Still There," a chapter in a book of her essays, "Small Wonder."

"Now that flag is mine to carry on, promising me that I may, and that I must, continue believing in the dignity and sanctity of life…That is my flag, and that's what it means: We're all just people, together."

Congratulations, President Obama.

We wish you well.

POLITICAL NOTES

Bottle campaign subject of forum

A team of organizers from the Think Outside the Bottle Campaign will stage an interactive training on ways to challenge the corporate control of water in Massachusetts. Join Corporate Accountability International at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, from 7 to 8 p.m. on Jan. 28.

Every day decisions are being made about the future of our most precious resource. Corporations like Coke, Pepsi and Nestlé are changing the way we think about water and turning it into a profit-driven commodity.

Over the past six months, Corporate Accountability International has helped move 1,000 mayors to resolve to end city spending on bottled water. But even as the bottled water industry continues to negatively impact communities across the country, some state governments are still spending millions of taxpayer dollars each year to buy bottled water even when they are responsible for ensuring people get safe and affordable water from their tap.

Kicking the bottled water habit is good for our pocket books, the environment, and our communities. And it's time for the people of Massachusetts to take action!

Contact Fauna Shaw at 617-695-2525 or fshaw@stopcorporateabuse.org for more information and to RSVP.

Democrats to elect delegates

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will host a caucus at Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 10 a.m., on Feb. 7, to elect four delegates and three alternates to the 2009 Massachusetts Democratic Convention. Delegates will be divided equally between men and women.

The convention will take place Saturday, June 6, at the MassMutual Center in Springfield. At that time, Democrats from across the state will gather to adopt a party platform. David Plouffe, campaign manager for Barack Obama's presidential campaign, will be the keynote speaker.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in Cohasset. The committee normally meets on the first Saturday of the month at Paul Pratt Public Library. For more information, contact Kevin McCarthy at Kemccar68@comcast.net, or call 781-383-0639.

A thank you message from Hair Imports

TO THE EDITOR:

The staff at Hair Imports Salon on Route 3A, Shaw's Plaza, in Cohasset, would like to take this opportunity to say thank you to everyone who purchased raffle tickets for our beauty/spa basket during the holiday season. We would also like to thank Pamela Dawson for her generous donation of a $100 gift certificate to the basket for personal training services with her, in her studio in Scituate, Room to Stretch. We are very pleased to report that through your kindness we were able to raise $650 to support the local food pantries. Your support and patronage is greatly appreciated!

The basket was filled with beauty and bath products, hair products, and gift certificates valued at $350. The lucky winner of the basket is Annette Sawchuk from Cohasset.

Big news about Jerusalem Road

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

More on Jerusalem Road Wall Stabilization – The Really Big News, is that Jerusalem Road, from Steep Rocks to Bow Street will be closed for a period of approximately one month starting next Monday, Jan. 26 while work is being done to stabilize the wall on the east side of the road. The detour will be Beach Street to go from the Atlantic Avenue area to the Main Street area. In order to expedite this repair, the Sewer Commission has arranged to do this work as a change order to the LM Holdings contract. Material is now on order and will arrive by this coming Monday, so work can begin as soon as it is delivered. By using LM Holdings, the Town is saving money because a significant part of any construction contract is a "mobilization cost." Mobilization cost is the cost that the contractor incurs in setting up his operation in a new location in preparation for a new construction project. Since, LM Holdings is already active in Town these mobilization costs do not need to be a part of the Jerusalem Road Wall Project.

This past Tuesday as we announced, Jerusalem Road was closed and several trees were taken down alongside the west side of Jerusalem Road between Steep Rocks and Bow Street below the homes on Steep Rocks. One more tree was limbed, but still needs to be removed. The tree cutters will be back shortly to take care of that tree.

A reasonable question you might ask is, if we are shoring up the wall on the east side of the road, why are we taking down trees on the west side of the road? In this case, there is a simple answer. As a part of the project we are not only stabilizing the wall, but we are making the site better. The road is being widened, i.e. a small portion of the hillside to the west of the road is being removed. This will add space to the right side of the road where a guardrail and a pedestrian walk will be constructed behind the guardrail. Of course it would be nice to have a walkway all along the road, but we won't, at least not now. However, it will be nice to have a protected walking path along side this hill portion of Jerusalem Road.

Little Harbor Project – This week we had a chance to look around Town to see what work was underway on the Little Harbor Project. The contractor was mostly working out of sight on some of the smaller lanes. The most visible work area was at the Little League Field on North Main Street. Here LM Holdings was running a trench from the main line sewer pipe on North Main Street to near the concession stand where a grinder pump will be installed.

Then we meandered down near the shore and observed construction on a small private road opposite Sandy Cove Lane which leads to 40 Atlantic and other homes. Again a main line sewer pipe is being laid from Atlantic Avenue up the lane.

Moving along Atlantic Avenue toward Cunningham Bridge found workmen on Lothrop Lane where their machinery just barely fit the narrow lane between the fencing and the trees. The Lothrop Lane photo shows an excavator lifting stockpiled construction materials with an ocean view in the background. Here LM Holdings is running the sewer main line from Atlantic Avenue to the end of Lothrop Lane.

So, the Little Harbor work continues, rain or shine, snow or sleet.

Past inaugurals

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

It was only 60 years ago, when Harry Truman insisted that blacks play a role in his inauguration, that a group led by New York City's Deputy Commissioner of Housing J. Raymond Jones tried to check into a Washington hotel.

They were refused entry by the manager, who then relented under pressure and allowed them in, but when they tried to use the telephones in their assigned rooms, they found that all of them, every blessed one, was not working.

Recalling that the owners of the Washington hotel also had several similar properties in New York City, Jones let slip that a "reinspection" was planned of the Manhattan hotels. The phones were working posthaste.

Now, a black man not only has reservations good for at least a four-year stay in the biggest boarding house of them all, the White House, but he can bring the wife and kids along, and the phones are working, too.

The inauguration of a new president has always reflected the changes in the American lifestyle.

The first of the 44, a war hero named George Washington, had to borrow money to make the trip to New York for his swearing in, and it took him five days to make the 280-mile trip from Mount Vernon.

And while the souvenirs of the occasion all were dated March 4, 1789, the actual ceremony didn't take place until April 30 because a needed quorum of Congressmen couldn't be gathered in time.

It took another war hero, Andy Jackson, three weeks to make the journey from his home in Nashville, Tenn., to Washington, first by steamboat down the Ohio to Pittsburgh, then by carriage for the remainder of the trip.

Ever hear of Presidents John Gaillard and David Atchison?

In 1821 and 1849, the March 4 inauguration day set by the Constitution fell on Sunday and, in a time when the Sabbath was held sacred, the ceremony was postponed until Monday, March 5, leaving the country without a president for 24 hours.

Except that the Constitution also specified that the president pro tempore of the Senate should assume the duties when the office was "vacant" and Senators Gaillard of South Carolina and Hutchison of Missouri were the last to fill those positions.

It was four degrees above zero on March 4, 1873, the day of Ulysses Grant's second inauguration, so cold that some West Point cadets passed out and guests wore overcoats as they danced at the ball in an unheated hall.

Most of our presidents recalled their inaugurals as a happy time.

Not so John Adams. One of his recollections was that of so many people with tears in their eyes. Then it struck him that they were crying for the departure of Washington, his predecessor.

"He seemed to me to enjoy a triumph over me," Adams wrote to his wife, Abigail, back on the farm in Quincy. "Methought I heard him think ay! I am fairly out and you fairly in! See which of us will be the happiest."

HEALTH NOTES

Peanut butter 'outbreak' a concern

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

As of last Wednesday 474 persons infected with the outbreak strain of Salmonella Typhimurium have been reported from 43 states; about 40 in Massachusetts. Illnesses began early in September with about 25 percent requiring hospitalization. The infection may have contributed to six deaths nationally. Preliminary analysis of continuing investigations conducted by CDC and public health officials in several states comparing foods eaten by ill and well persons has suggested peanut butter as a likely source of the bacteria causing the infections. The Board of Health has received no reports in Cohasset as of Wednesday this week.

The Minnesota Department of Agriculture Laboratory isolated the outbreak strain of Salmonella Typhimurium from an open 5-pound container of King Nut brand creamy peanut butter produced by Peanut Corporation of America (PCA) in Blakely, Georgia. Major national brands of jarred peanut butter are not affected by the PCA recall. PCA does not sell peanut butter directly to consumers. On the other hand, peanut paste is sold in sizes ranging from 3-to-5 pound boxes and cans to tanker truck sized containers and distributed in many states to establishments such as long-term care facilities, hospitals, schools, universities, restaurants, delis, cafeterias and bakeries. It is not known to be distributed for retail sale in grocery stores. The Connecticut Department of Public Health Laboratory and the Georgia Department of Agriculture also independently isolated Salmonella from unopened 5-pound containers of King Nut.

As of 4 p.m. Wednesday, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has received information about 43 product recalls covering a range of foods containing peanuts. A searchable regularly updated listing of recalled products is available on line at:

www.accessdata.fda.gov/scripts/peanutbutterrecall/index.cfm

The Kellogg Company has announced a voluntary nationwide recall of Austin® and Keebler® snacks containing peanut butter. Shaw's reportedly does not carry any of the listed items. Stop and Shop [1] has removed all related products from shelves and is monitoring developments.

Snack foods containing peanut butter must list the fact on their labels. Sometimes the containers used in packaging batches of snack foods carry warnings and the individual packages only carry a reference to the larger package. It's also necessary to show the fact that the processing machinery for a product is not used in the manufacture of peanut snacks.

At this time, it's probably appropriate to refrain from consuming individual packages of snack foods carrying peanut warnings or any commercially prepared or manufactured products containing peanut butter and institutionally served peanut butter. Refrain from eating all other products containing peanut butter (such as cookies, crackers, cereal, candy and ice cream) until more information becomes available about their safety.

Peanut paste is distributed to manufacturers to be used as ingredients in many products, including cookies, crackers, cereal, candy and ice cream.

The Food and Drug Administration has issued the following instructions:

- For consumers: Do not eat recalled products and throw them away in a manner that prevents others from eating them. Persons who think they may have become ill from eating peanut butter are advised to consult their health care providers.
- Symptoms: Most persons infected with Salmonella develop diarrhea, fever and abdominal cramps 12–72 hours after infection. Infection is usually diagnosed by culture of a stool sample. The illness usually lasts 4 to 7 days. Although most people recover without treatment, severe infections may occur. Infants, elderly persons and those with impaired immune systems are more likely than others to develop severe illness. When severe infection occurs, Salmonella may spread from the intestines to the bloodstream and then to other body sites and can cause death unless the person is treated promptly with antibiotics.

At this time 57 specific products have been recalled and the number is still growing. If you have any doubt about any product, call the Board of Health for information on the latest additions to the list of recalls. This is one of the most active series of investigations we have ever experienced and it's reasonable to assume that they will continue on a nationwide basis.

Cohasset Reads Together – The third annual town-wide reading program began Jan. 17 with the Cohasset Diversity Breakfast. The Friends of Cohasset Library have provided copies of the book "Barefoot: Escape on the Underground Railroad" for all classrooms at the Joseph Osgood School and copies of the book "Sweet Clara and the Freedom Quilt" for all classrooms at Deer Hill School. These books are also on display in the Children's Room along with other materials that support the theme of "Freedom."

'Our Town' to focus on Cohasset Conservation Trust

This week on "Our Town," viewers can watch a show detailing the work of the Cohasset Conservation Trust. Co-host Mark DeGiacomo, a trustee with the group, sits down with fellow board members Debbie Shadd and Gary Vanderweil to discuss the efforts of the group to protect and preserve some of Cohasset's most beautiful landscape.

Co-host Pat Martin goes behind the camera to film the trustees touring and highlighting six of the 18 properties the trust maintains.

Tune in starting Monday, at 9 p.m., or Tuesday or Thursday, at 9 p.m., all on Comcast Channel 10.

Lunch program still struggling

Staffing and morning break to be addressed

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Improved food quality, more fresh produce, revamped menu, and changes to line flow at the high school haven't translated to rising revenue.

Despite changes made in the school lunch program since last June and continuing through the first part of the school year, student participation and profit numbers have stayed relatively flat.

"We're still concerned," said school business manager Dave DeGennaro. Improved food quality, more fresh produce, revamped menu, and changes to line flow at the high school haven't translated to rising revenue. There was slightly higher participation numbers at the elementary levels.

As a result, Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh recommended first steps be taken to ensure the school lunch program ends the year in the black.

Staffing, which costs between $13,000 and $16,000 every month (not including the food service director), will be cut back. One staff member will be let go and the remaining staff will be re-organized and staggered.

At the high school, the food service department will begin to evaluate how food is served during morning break time. Instead of a full breakfast, more grab and go type items will be available. It was suggested that the concession stand near the gymnasium be used instead of the full cafeteria.

An anecdotal trend was that students bought something at morning break and then weren't hungry — and not buying anything — at lunch. Other comments were it took too long for students to get through the line, taking away from their lunch and social time.

"We'll try this and we'll see if we see any difference in the next month or two," said Walsh.

When the School Department closed the books on fiscal 2008, the food services budget ran a deficit of approximately $40,000. It was the first year where the food service budget, which is typically a self-sufficient operation or even a profit maker, ended the year significantly in the red.

At this point last year, the school lunch program was $18,000 in the hole. This year, the program is $500 in the black.

The School Committee and administration began to combat the problem last spring by hiring a food service consultant to do an extensive operational review to help the fledging school lunch program. The consultant's primary goal was to suggest improvements to strengthen the fiscal integrity of the lunch program.

The food service department has implemented a majority of the items she suggested; yet there has been no significant change in participation numbers, which currently hovers around 30 percent. Walsh said the aim for most school districts was 50 percent participation.

DeGennaro is hoping to get a school lunch online payment system going by February, which could encourage participation.

Budget unknowns

Schools prepare for state aid cuts

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In a much larger view, Walsh said there would be increased pressure for regionalization and consolidation efforts over the next few years for both schools and other parts of municipal government.

Right now, the budget is like a puzzle with a lot of missing pieces. But by next week, Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said the pieces would start to come into place.

With news that there will likely be cuts to the current year's state aid and next year's aid, the schools are bracing for the official numbers expected to be released next week.

Until the numbers are firmer, the schools are sticking with the draft budget they presented in early January. However, preparations are being made to adjust the budget for the cuts. Walsh has asked her administrative team to prepare a five percent budget cut for the remainder of fiscal 2009 (the current year) with a prioritized list.

While Governor Deval Patrick is reportedly making over a billion dollars in cuts to prevent a budget shortfall this year and could impact towns across the state with a three to 10 percent cut in state aid, there is some hope the federal government will step in with some aid. Walsh said Massachusetts has submitted $1.6 billion in requests for funding from a possible federal stimulus package.

In a much larger view, Walsh said there would be increased pressure for regionalization and consolidation efforts over the next few years for both schools and other parts of municipal government.

As a small town, Cohasset faces specific challenges in funding its services from the small, mostly residential tax base. While other school districts are looking at closing schools, Cohasset is fortunate as a small town to be running efficiently with three fully populated schools.

"Our size is a hindrance and a help," said School Committee chairman Rick Flynn.

School Committee vice chairman Alfred Slanetz noted he would like to see efforts made to ensure the cuts don't come out of the classroom.

With many questions waiting to be answered, the school committee is being prudent in the time being (non-essential spending has been frozen since October) and adopting a wait-and-see attitude.

"Let's find out what the numbers are going to be, draw up a list of quantifiable items so residents will have an understanding of what the cuts will be," said Flynn.

BRIEFLY

Snow chain of command

When snow and ice are plaguing roads, the Superintendent of Schools has the big responsibility of deciding whether it is safe for students and staff to make their way to school. But, she does not make the decision alone.

Many parents were unhappy with the lack of at the very least a delayed start time during an ice storm a couple of weeks ago. Superintendent Denise Walsh, along with School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy met with Police Chief James Hussey, the DPW superintendent Carl Sestito and Town Manager Bill Griffin to clearly establish a communication chain so Walsh has the information she needs to make the safety call.

"It was a fruitful conversation. We got a lot on the table and walked away with a nice plan of action," said MacCarthy. "There is a communication chain of command and as long as it's followed everyone will be on the same page."

Flynn to step down

Long-time School Committee member and current chairman Rick Flynn made an official announcement indicating his decision not to seek re-election. The Mariner announced his decision to step down in late December.

"After nine years here it may be time for someone else to take over…nomination papers are waiting at town hall," said Flynn, who called being a school committee member "a great experience."

Flynn encouraged anyone who was interested in seeking the position to talk to him or any of the school committee members about what is involved.

School Committee vice chairman Alfred Slanetz thanked Flynn for all his service, "he's been a contributor…it's a positive experience trying to help improve the schools."

Policy manual adopted

For the first time, the Cohasset Public Schools has a complete and comprehensive policy manual. The School Committee adopted a final draft of the manual at their meeting this Wednesday.

The policy manual update has been an on-going effort by the School Committee. The total one-time cost was $9,000 over three fiscal years.

In addition to a lengthy hard copy binder, the policy manual is also available on CD and will be available on the Cohasset Public Schools website (www.cohassetk12.org) in the coming weeks. The electronic version of the policy makes the manual "a living document" making updates and changes easier.

Previously, the policies of the Cohasset Schools were piecemeal, this document puts everything in one place.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on two roll calls and local senators' votes on three roll calls from the week of January 12-16.

GIVE PATRICK POWER TO CUT LOCAL AID (H 98)

House 132-22, Senate 32-6, approved and sent to Gov. Deval Patrick a bill giving the governor the power to make cuts to local aid funding in order to balance the fiscal 2009 state budget. Under current law, the governor's power to cut is mostly limited to health and human services areas. The measure prohibits the local aid cuts from totaling more than one-third of the total cuts that the governor makes. Supporters said that without the ability to cut local aid, the governor will be forced to make more drastic cuts in human services and health programs which were already the victims of hundreds of million dollars of cuts in October. They argued that the bill is a reasonable and balanced one which includes safeguards to ensure that local aid is not cut excessively. Some opponents said that it is simply unfair to cut local aid to communities after promising them a certain amount of it. They said that the cuts would hurt cities and towns and result in cuts in local essential services, education and public safety personnel. Others said that they oppose giving this power solely to the governor and argued that the Legislature should be involved in determining the cuts. (A "Yes" vote is for giving the governor the power to make cuts to local aid funding. A "No" vote is against giving him the power).

LIMIT LOCAL AID CUTS TO 25 PERCENT (H 98)

House 18-137, rejected an amendment that would limit Patrick's local aid cuts to 25 percent of the total fiscal 2009 budget cuts. This would replace the section of the bill that limits local aid cuts to 33 percent. Amendment supporters said that limiting the local aid cuts to 25 percent would offer some protection to cities and towns that are already facing dire problems. Amendment opponents said that the 25 percent limit is well intentioned but would result in even deeper cuts to human service programs that help thousands of people across the state. (A "Yes" vote is for limiting Patrick's local aid cuts to 25 percent, instead of 33 percent, of the total fiscal 2009 budget cuts. A "No" vote is against the 25 percent limit and favors the 33 percent limit).

CUT LOCAL AID BY SAME PERCENT FOR EACH CITY AND TOWN (H 98)

Senate 8-30, rejected an amendment requiring that the governor cut each city and town's local aid by the same percentage. Amendment supporters said that this would ensure that all communities are treated equally and prohibit the governor from making unilateral decisions on how much local aid each community would lose. Amendment opponents said that "one size fits all" does not work and argued that the governor needs flexibility in order to fairly administer the cuts. (A "Yes" vote is for requiring the governor to cut each city and town's local aid by the same percentage. A "No" vote is against the requirement).

GIVE LEGISLATURE FIVE DAYS TO VETO LOCAL AID CUTS (H 98)

Senate 8-30, rejected an amendment giving the Legislature five days to review and act on any local aid cuts proposed by the governor. Amendment supporters said that the Legislature should be more involved in the process and not just hand over all cutting power to the governor. They argued that this amendment would essentially give legislators the power to vote the governor's cuts up or down and allow the governor to come back with a new package of reductions if the cuts are rejected. Amendment opponents said that it is essential to take quick action to make these local aid cuts and argued that the state cannot afford to have these proposal tied up in the Legislature for weeks. (A "Yes" vote is for giving the Legislature five days to review and act on any local aid cuts proposed by the governor. A "No" vote is against the five-day period).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

Gov. Patrick signed into law dozens of bills that were approved in the final days of the 2008 legislative session. Here are some of the proposals that he signed:

ALLOW BREASTFEEDING IN PUBLIC (H 5177) - Permits breastfeeding of children in any public place or establishment which is open to the general public. The measure exempts breastfeeding from laws prohibiting indecent exposure and permits mothers to bring civil actions and be awarded damages of up to $500 if they are harassed or penalized for breastfeeding. An exemption allows temples, churches and other places of religious worship to prohibit breastfeeding.

FOOD ALLERGIES AND RESTAURANTS (S 2701) - Requires all restaurants to prominently display a poster about food allergy awareness in the staff area and to include on all menus a notice of the customer's obligation to inform the server about any food allergies. Another provision requires the Department of Public Health (DPH) to develop a voluntary program that allows restaurants to be designated as "Food Allergy Friendly" by the DPH and be listed on the agency's website. The guidelines that restaurants would have to meet for the designation would be developed by the DPH and would include a requirement that a restaurant maintain on the premises a master list of all the ingredients used in the preparation of each food item on the menu.

On the forefront of storm water management

COMMENTARY

KATY KONARY

After years of development where storm water management was often poorly designed or perhaps ignored, the town is taking the lead among other communities in the state for regulating storm water management on new development and redevelopment. The Stormwater Management Bylaw was voted on and accepted into law by the Town of Cohasset this past summer. Some residents may be wondering how, or if, this bylaw may affect them and their property.

In technical terms, any activity that results in net increase of impervious surfaces (such as pavement or rooftop) of more than 500 square feet, any replacement of an existing building with a new building of more than 500 square feet, any activity that alters 5,000 square feet of land or more, any construction activity on an undeveloped parcel, or any development or redevelopment of land uses with higher potential pollutant loads is subject to the Stormwater Management Bylaw. However, if there are any questions as to whether a project is subject to the bylaw, the property owner, engineer, or builder should contact the Conservation Commission (tel. 781-383-4119) and/or the Stormwater Agent. The Conservation Commission issues the permits under this bylaw, and the Stormwater Agent reviews the technical aspects and makes recommendations to the Commission.

Norfolk Ram Group LLC is the Stormwater Agent, acting on behalf of the Town of Cohasset and the Conservation Commission. Norfolk Ram Group is an established civil and environmental engineering firm located in Plymouth and was selected for this role based on their award-winning work in the field of storm water management practices. The Stormwater Agent professionals available to assist you with questions pertaining to the Stormwater Bylaw are Katy Konary, P.E. (tel. 508-747-7900, ext.137), John McAllister, P.E. (ext.117), and Mark Bartlett, P.E. (ext.131). The Stormwater Agent can help a homeowner understand what their specific needs are, what can be done to improve existing conditions of their land, and also help determine the best course of action through planning and development stages of the work. In some cases, it may be possible to avoid obtaining approval under the bylaw if proposed site changes are properly managed to reduce impervious surfaces. This is why a pre-application meeting with the Stormwater Agent is strongly encouraged.

The good news for most residents is that the new Stormwater Bylaw will help prevent future damage associated with storm water, such as flooding and polluted waters. The purpose of the bylaw is to prevent and reduce flooding, protect water quality, increase groundwater recharge, reduce erosion, and promote environmentally sensitive site design.

While there are many ways to manage storm water, the following are just four examples of beneficial storm water management practices and low impact Ddevelopment techniques:

1. Bioretention rain gardens, which utilize a natural matrix of soils and plants, treat storm water before it is discharged into the land. These shallow depressions filled with sandy soil topped with a layer of mulch and planted with dense native vegetation receive storm water runoff from streets or paved areas.

2. The use of vegetated filter strips (a.k.a. grass buffer strips) is another effective method. Vegetated filter strips are designed to slow runoff velocities, trap sediment, and promote infiltration, thereby reducing runoff volumes.

3. The use of permeable pavement is an excellent strategy to help compensate for increased impervious surfaces, such as driveways or patios. Permeable pavement (porous asphalt, pervious concrete, paving stones and permeable pavers), when substituted for traditional pavement, allows storm water to infiltrate directly into the underlying soil and receive water quality treatment.

4. Constructed wetlands, which maximize the removal of pollutants from storm water through wetland vegetation uptake, retention and settling, temporarily store runoff in shallow pools that support conditions suitable for wetland plants. Excellent locations for constructed wetlands are natural depressions or low-lying areas.

Should Cohasset residents have questions as to whether a development or redevelopment project (such as an addition to a home or construction of a deck or garage) is subject to the new Stormwater Management Bylaw and requires a permit issued by the Conservation Commission, please contact the town's Stormwater Agent - Norfolk Ram Group (tel. 508-747-7900).

Martin leads Skippers past Carver

Despite the cold and snow, Senior Co-Captain Danny Martin was red hot as he scored 33 points, pulled in 15 rebounds and blocked seven shots in a 75-65 Skipper victory against league opponent Carver. The boys in blue traveled on a snowy, blustery Sunday for a make up game against Carver. They were coming off losses against Hull and Abington. This was a big game, critical to keep them near the top of the SSL, but also critical for them to realize that they are contenders in the league and that the wins so far this season are legit.

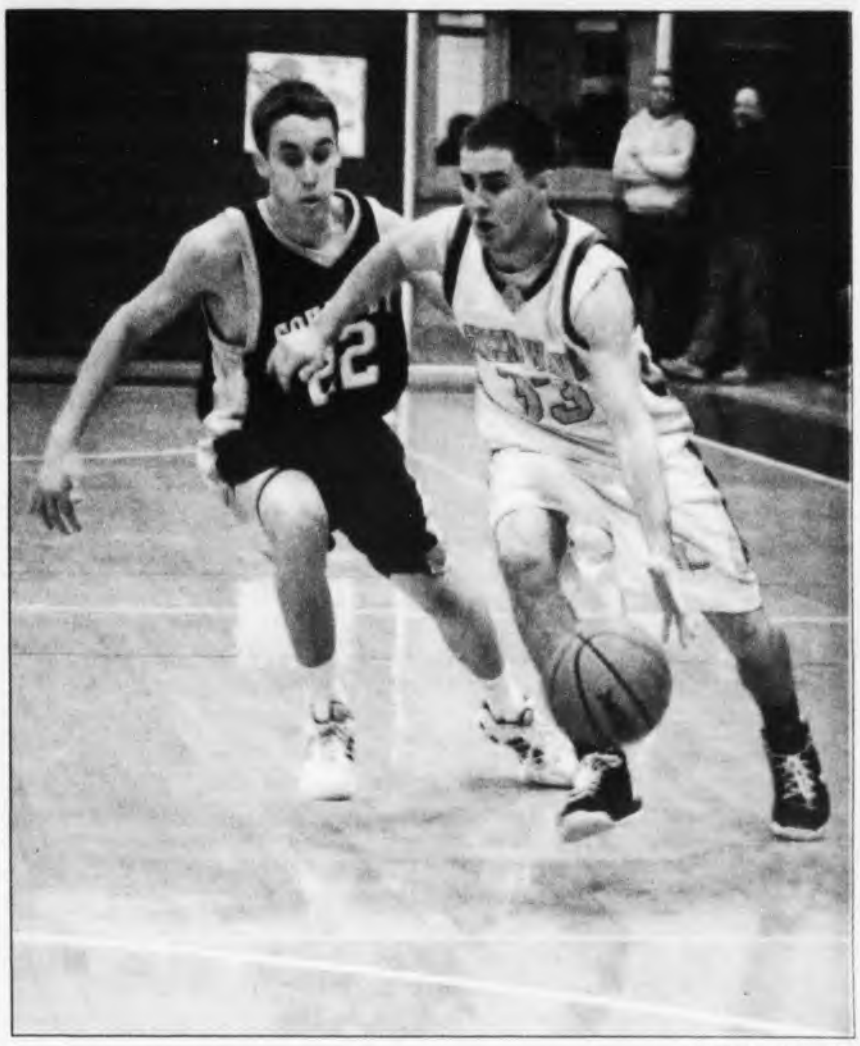
The Skippers took control of the game from the opening tip off and never looked back. The lead was as much as 21 points, and Carver looked to be making a comeback, cutting it to nine at one point. But the focus and the discipline and the patience that has guided the Skippers to victory before came through again.

Cohasset managed control of the ball well, capitalizing on sloppy ball handling by Carver. The team registered a season high 14 steals. Marcus Charles (9 points, 4 assists 3 steals) and Robert Jones (16 points, 4 assists, 3 steals) controlled the tempo of the game.

"It was a very good team win, although Danny was as dominant as I could have hoped he would be. We still did lots of good things as a team, but Dan was a force tonight with a double double. Thirty-three points is a huge game," Coach Bo Ruggiero said. "The bar for him keeps getting higher as my expectations are now raised. We ran on all cylinders in the first half and between the press and our running game and shot selection, we played as well as one could expect. Robert Jones led some solid transition fast breaks and delivered the ball for some simple buckets. It was a very nice win on the road against a good Carver team."

Next up was a big 72-66 overtime win over East Bridgewater who was coming off an upset win over Hull.

They were definitely feeling confident. The first quarter had EB up 17-15. Cohasset pushed the ball into the paint, going to the line eight times. Martin (22 points, 22 rebounds) controlled the defensive boards, while the quick hands of John Sturino (10 points, 3 steals) stole the ball twice. John Maher (7 points, 10 rebounds) had a nice steal and breakaway and fed Jones (13 points, 3 steals, 5 assists) who was hard fouled. Jones converted one and Cohasset got the ball back.



Cohasset got their first lead of the game 31- 29 with two minutes left in the half and for the next 120 seconds it was a defensive battle and EB hit a bucket to tie up the game. Charles (15 points, 6 rebounds, 3 steals) hit the offensive board three times in the quarter giving Cohasset scoring opportunities.

In the third quarter Cohasset jumped out to a six point lead on great second effort putbacks by Martin. The man defense the Skippers executed forced turnovers and missed shots halfway through the quarter. However EB battled back, hit a couple of shots including a trey and with two minutes left they were back on top by three. The Skippers battled back and the quarter ended 43-44 EB.

The Vikings began to run away with the game, or so it seemed. After three minutes, they had jumped to a six point lead. Cohasset was missing shots and not getting rebounds. The lead grew to seven. A Charles steal and a bucket.

A Sturino steal put Martin on the line where he made both.

Challenging week on the court for the Lady Skippers

Cohasset sweeps through four games

By Susan Franklin

The undefeated Cohasset Lady Skippers faced three opponents and had their most challenging week of basketball since last year's road to the state title. Things got tight in all three of these contests but Cohasset's seasoned coaching staff and gifted players prevailed extending their season-to-season winning streak and earning entry to this season's playoff tournament. In the stretch, the Lady Skippers beat Hull 59-44, Abington 49-40 and possibly most importantly Carver, 49-46.

Cohasset added another victory to the tally Tuesday with a 48-25 win at East Bridgewater.

Sammi Lehr had 14 points, 20 rebounds and three blocks, while Tori Lehr chipped in 10 points, 18 rebounds and four blocks.

Cohasset hosted the Hull Pirates Tuesday night just three weeks after taking the Holiday Tournament over Hull. Both young teams with only three seniors apiece, these squads have deep benches and innate desires to win. Hull came out in a man-to-man defense and Cohasset led with a 1-2-2. Cohasset worked the ball well and got inside for a few early opportunities, posting three points on the board.

Hull played a run and gun game and on set offense relied on outside shots.

Three minutes into play a Hull fast break resulted in a three-point conversion that tied the score but Carly Salerno put Cohasset ahead with a clean jumper from the elbow and Kayla Farren added a pair. The game pace was quick and Hull's man-to-man was a challenge for Cohasset squad. Tenacious play on the open floor and the offensive boards kept Hull in close range with a score of 9-7. Playing point on the 1-2-2, Meredith Kelly's quick hands tipped a Hull skip pass up the floor where she chased it down for a breakaway. Drawing a foul on the play, Kelly iced two from the charity stripe returning later for another pair on a steal. Cohasset had the ball and a 12-7 lead with 30 seconds left in first quarter play and that is where things would stay at the buzzer.

Hull came out strong in the second cutting Cohasset's lead to one until a well executed baseline play by Hull was thwarted by Tori Lehr and the momentum went back the other way. Cohasset pulled ahead 17-12 but Hull drilled a three-point shot from the corner. Hull with eight team fouls put Cohasset into the 1-1 early where Sophomore Rachel Fredey made two giving Cohasset a 21-15 lead. Cohasset kept Hull at bay by pestering ball handlers and anticipating passes. Offensively, the Skippers worked the ball around the Hull defense getting inside to Tori Lehr who popped it out to Carly Salerno for a jumper on the perimeter. Hull answered with their third three-pointer of the contest from the top of the key and the score stood at 23-18. A jumper from the corner by Rachel Fredey and a power move by Sammi Lehr brought the end of quarter tally to 27-20 in favor of Cohasset.

Hull recorded the first points of the second half on a long ball but Little one learns about joy of sport, coach hits milestone

POPPIN' OFF

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

Big congratulations to Cohasset boys varsity basketball coach Bo Ruggiero for his 450th career victory.

Ruggiero hit the milestone with a 72-66 win over East Bridgewater Tuesday night.

Ruggiero, who is already enshrined in the State Coaches Hall of Fame, was happy with the milestone, but more for his team than himself.

"This is my first year at Cohasset," he said. "And this team is on the verge of making the Tournament for the first time in a number of years. We're 9-3. We only need two more wins to qualify. When I came here, my goal was to resurrect the program."

After sitting down with his captains and talking about goals, an agenda was set, both for wins and performance.

"I came here with 441 wins," said Ruggiero. "At the beginning of the year when I saw what I had I thought it might take three years to get nine wins, but the kids are working hard. They work as hard as they could imagine they could work. They have a tremendous work ethic. That translates into more wins."

Ruggiero hit No. 400 during an eight-year run at Foxboro, then

Scituate/Cohasset swimmers edge Norwell

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

For the Scituate/Cohasset swim team, Saturday's meet against Norwell in Quincy was one of the most exciting meets of the season.

Heading into the final events of the day, the boys and girls meets could have gone either way.

The girls trailed 84-82 entering the 4x400 relay and the boys led 80-77.

When it was over, Scituate/Cohasset swam away with a 92-88 victory on the girls side and an 88-83 win for the boys.

For the boys, Scituate edged Norwell by inches to take first in the race to seal the victory.

With the girls, Scituate/Cohasset took first in the race, but as importantly, notched a third-place finish as well. Joanna Regan, Kaitlyn Mahoney, Torey Hart and Jen Gavis picked up that spot, giving Scituate/Cohasset enough for the final score, according to Scituate/Cohasset coach Bill Edward.

"These are the closest meets we've had," Edward said. "It came down to the last relay for both. I knew that whoever won would win the meet. Our third-place relay in the girls won the meet. We figured we might get first, but knew we needed third to win."

Edward was pleased with the overall meet.

"It was a total team effort," he said. "It got to the point that I told the team that first-place only wasn't going to win. The third, fourth and fifth places would do it."

Scituate/Cohasset first-place winners included Betsy Crawford in diving, Mimi Mahoney in the 100 backstroke and Aniko Haber, who notched wins in the 100 and 200 freestyle.

Megan Little also fared well for Scituate/Cohasset and Erin

•••Soccer•••

Name: Caitlin Burke
School: Duxbury
Grade: Junior
Position: Forward
Stats: Led the Div. 2 state champs in scoring with 40 points on 23 goals, 17 assists. Scored the game-tying and winning goals in the Lady Dragons' 2-1 win over Wahconah in the title game. Also netted the game-winner against Wellesley in the South semis. Also runs indoor track and plays lacrosse at DHS and will return to the soccer field next fall.

Name: Melissa Gavin
School: Duxbury
Grade: Sophomore
Position: Forward
Stats: A playmaking machine, Gavin connected with Burke on the game-tying and winning goals in the team's 2-1 win over Wahconah in the Div. 2 state title game. A postseason gem, she scored four goals, five assists in the tourney, en route to 37 points (16 goals, 21 assists) for the season. Scored the game-winner in OT against Scituate in the South quarters. Just a sophomore, she still has two more seasons at DHS.

Name: Katie Egan
School: Hanover
Grade: Senior (captain)
Position: Forward
Stats: One half of Hanover's two-pronged scoring machine, Egan racked up 48 points on 26 goals, 22 assists. Was the catalyst in a comeback 5-4 win over Hopkinton in the Div. 2 South quarterfinals, scoring the game-tying and winning goals. Also plays tennis at HHS and plans to play soccer in college.

Name: Michelle Montillio
School: Hanover
Grade: Senior (captain)
Position: Forward
Stats: Led the Hanover offense with 47 points on 29 goals, 18 assists. Netted a pair of hat tricks this season against Norwell and rival Pembroke. Also a standout and captain on the HHS softball team, Montillio plans to continue her soccer career at American University.

Name: Kim Clooney
School: Weymouth
Grade: Senior
Position: Midfield
Stats: Made the All-New England team after netting 27 points on six goals, 21 assists. Career totals find her with 65 points on 18 goals, 47 assists. The main playmaker and distributor for the Lady Wildcats, Clooney helped lead the girls to their second-straight Div. 1 South Sectional title and state semifinal appearance. Hopes to continue her soccer career in college.

Name: Julie McCauley
School: Marshfield
Grade: Junior
Position: Forward
Stats: This blisteringly quick McCauley used her speed to its full advantage, scoring many of her 12 goals this season on breakaways. Her biggest came against rival Whitman/Hanson, knocking off the top-seeds in the Div. 1 South quarterfinals, 1-0. Also runs indoor and outdoor track at MHS and will return to the soccer field next fall.

Name: Mary Vercollone
School: Pembroke
Grade: Senior
Position: Midfield
Stats: This Eastern Mass. All-star racked up 26 points on 14 goals, 12 assists. Scored the game-winning goal in a win over Medway in the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney, helping the Lady Titans reach the semifinals. Also runs indoor track and plays tennis at PHS and will continue her soccer career at Providence College.

Name: Kathryn Nathan
School: Pembroke
Grade: Senior (captain)
Position: Midfield
Stats: The leading scorer on the Lady Titans squad, Nathan finished with 30 points on 11 goals, 19 assists and was essential to the team's Fisher Div. title and run to the Div. 2 South semifinals. Had a goal and an assist Pembroke's league-clinching win over NQ. Also runs indoor and outdoor track at PHS.

Name: Vicky DiNatale
School: Weymouth
Grade: Junior
Position: Sweeper
Stats: Was the standout defender for the two-time Div. 1 South Sectional champs, shutting down a strong Marshfield offense in the semifinals and holding Norwood in check in a 2-1 win in the finals. Also contributed to the offense with one goal and four assists this season. Just a junior, she returns to anchor the WHS defense next fall.

Name: Jenn Bell
School: Weymouth
Grade: Senior
Position: Forward
Stats: Was named her team's best offensive player after racking up 28 points on 22 goals, six assists. Tallied the game-winning score in a 2-1 win over Norwood, giving the Wildcats their second-straight Div. 1 South Sectional title. Also a track standout at WHS, Bell captains both the indoor and outdoor squads. She plans to continue her sports career in college.

Name: Maggie McGoldrick
School: Cohasset
Grade: Senior (captain)
Position: Midfield
Stats: The South Shore League Player of the Year, McGoldrick racked up 22 points on 16 goals, two assists this season. Her consistent play in the midfield helped guide the Lady Skippers to their first-ever Div. 3 South Sectional title. The two-time Eastern Mass. All-star will attend Holy Cross next fall.

Name: Tristen Chin
School: Duxbury
Grade: Senior (captain)
Position: Stopper
Stats: One of the best defensive players around, the Lady Dragons don't win the Div. 2 state title without Chin. The owner of the ability to make big plays, perhaps none was bigger than her goal-line head save that preserved a 2-2 tie with Belmont in the Div. 2 state semis, which Duxbury would win on a last-second goal. Marked the opposing team's best player and did so with ease, highlighting a defense that won six-straight one goal games in the tourney.

Name: Kara O'Connell
School: Norwell
Grade: Junior (captain)
Position: Stopper
Stats: Perhaps the most versatile player on the Norwell squad, O'Connell was essential to its run to yet another Div. 3 South Sectional final. The South Shore League and Eastern Mass. All-star played several positions for the Lady Clippers, shining at stopper and at forward. The Jr. Class president also plays basketball and lacrosse at NHS.

Name: Casey Edward
School: Marshfield
Grade: Senior (captain)
Position: Goalie
Stats: One of the area's top goalies throughout her four-year career Edward was once again a rock for the Lady Rams. Posted nine shutouts in the regular season but shined in postseason play. Stopped Notre Dame's final shot in a 10-shooter PK win over the Cougars in the Div. 1 South tourney. Then made eight saves in a 1-0 shutout over Whitman /Hanson. Leaves MHS with 47 career shutouts.

Name: Sarah Wooley
School: Duxbury
Grade: Senior (captain)
Position: Sweeper
Stats: The last line of the Duxbury defense, Wooley was equally as essential to the Lady Dragons' run to the Div. 2 state championship. Had her hands full in the back against defending champs Oliver Ames in the South final and held her own in the 1-0 victory. Excellent in 1-on-1 scenarios, Wooley was especially good at cutting off breakaways and often assisted the offense with her long clears from the back.

Cohasset wrestlers hang on

By Emily Toomey
CHS CORRESPONDENT

Last Wednesday, January 14, the Cohasset wrestlers faced Carver, a small but skilled team, battling to a 40-36 victory.

The home meet had a rough start on Cohasset's side, with Carver winning the first three matches.

Senior Rudy Helbock participated, despite his injury, for the first time this season and won by forfeit.

At the 130 weight class, Derek Froio gave his teammates some confidence by making the first pin of the night in the second period with 35.3 seconds left.

Robbie Hill followed Froio's lead by also pinning in the second period of his match, which involved very intense competition with his opponent.

Cohasset was equally successful in the 140 weight class in which junior Jack Murphy won by ten points.

The next two weight classes suffered difficult losses, but Cohasset's luck turned when Carver forfeited three matches, giving Matt Brooks, Robert Weiss, and Thomas Flibotte varsity wins.

Although the last two matches were lost, both Cam Washak and Alex Kinnealey wrestled up a weight class and Cohasset won the meet 40-36.

Martin leads Skippers past Carver

FROM BOYS BASKETBALL, PAGE 17

The lead was shrinking, it was only two. Less then a minute to go, Cohasset had the ball and Ruggiero called a timeout.

Down by two, Cohasset inbounded the ball and Maher got it into Martin for the tying bucket and the game went into overtime.

The players were definitely getting fatigued. With a minute left and down by one, Owen Landon was fouled and went to the line and tied up the game. Martin came up with a big defensive steal and fed Jones who went the distance for the go ahead bucket. The trademark fastbreak went into overdrive as Maher came up with a big rebound and outlets the ball to Jones who saw Charles at the other end. Charles made the easy layup. Cohasset went up by four and held on for a 72-66 win. The victory improved the Skippers to 9-3 on the season.

With this win, Coach Bo Ruggiero reaches 450 career wins, a milestone not many achieve. The Cohasset basketball community congratulates Coach Ruggiero on this remarkable accomplishment.

The Skippers face Carver tonight at CMHS at 6:30.

Seventh Grade hoopsters sweep weekend doubleheader

Cohasset's seventh Grade Boys Patriot League Travel Basketball Team returned to action after the Holiday break in grand style this weekend, as the Boys in Blue prevailed over a game Pembroke squad in Pembroke on Saturday, and upset a Bridgewater powerhouse at Bridgewater on Sunday.

Saturday's game was tight through the first ten minutes, but the Cohasset five went on a 10-2 run at the end of the first half to take an eight point lead into the break, keyed by Mark McKenna's driving one hander just before half. The second half saw Cohasset's full court press take its toll on the Pembroke squad, and the Boys in Blue built a 20 point lead that they would not relinquish. Highlights included Liam Burke's continued strong inside play, as "LB" made like Sir Charles Barkley inside with his relentless rebounding, and Jack "the Magnet" Conte stuck to the Pembroke guards like well, a magnet, forcing several turnovers and fast break opportunities with his ball hawking defense.

Sunday saw the Boys in Blue trek through the snow to a late afternoon tilt with 5-1 Bridgewater. Many of these same players had been blown out of the Bridgewater gym last year as 6th graders, as they suffered their worst loss of the year. But redemption is sweet....this year's squad sent a message from the opening tip, as its relentless full court press forced early turnovers by the Bridgewater guards, and Cohasset raced to an early ten point lead. But Bridgewater was up to the challenge, and its big front line keyed a late first half comeback. At half, Cohasset lead 19-16.

The second half was an epic battle. Back and forth the teams went, with neither squad leading by more than 4. Halfway through the second half, the teams were deadlocked at 32. Cohasset's front line were terrific in battling Bridgewater's big men, as Mark Rattenbury, Joe Buckley, Burke, and the Brown men – "Chopper" Henry and Mark "the Eraser" – attacked the glass with authority. Cohasset's guards were up to the challenge too – McKenna and Conte played great D, and Doug Fitzgerald canned a key jumper in the last five minutes of the see-saw contest. Rocco Laugelle was again the X Factor, as his tremendous speed keyed the Cohasset press, and created defensive havoc. In the final minutes, Dakota Achin nailed a critical baseline jumper, and the aptly named Chris "Hoops" Haggerty followed a Cohasset miss with a sweet put back while being fouled, and drained his free throw for a three point play. From there, the clutch free throws of J Buck and point guard Brendan O'Connell kept the Bridgewater squad at bay, and Cohasset walked off with a thrilling 48-45 win.

Next up – another doubleheader – Saturday night January 24 in Weymouth, and a noon tilt at home against Hanson on Sunday the 25th. Go Blue!

Little one learns about joy of sport

took a year off from coaching before joining Cohasset.

"I had a great run at Foxboro," he said. "A lot of individual records were set by the teams. Still, the players are the ones who win the games. Coaches can't win games. They can lose them. I'm just the air traffic controller. I can motivate and teach. In 450 wins, I didn't score a bucket. The players do that."

Ruggiero said he hopes his milestone can benefit his team, if only to get them noticed for their accomplishments this season.

Hopefully people are watching, because these Skippers are for real.

Friday night was a pretty interesting night in the area. Not one, but two local high school players scored their 1000th career point that night.

In Scituate, junior Rodney Beldo hit the milestone, scoring 27 points in a win over Randolph.

Down the street, Duxbury's Mark Brust hit the mark in a win at Pembroke.

When Beldo scored No. 1000, the teams stopped the game, coach Matt Poirier had a few words, including a mention that Beldo had stayed up late the night before writing a paper, and Beldo celebrated with his family and a special basketball made for the occasion.

It was a pretty special moment to watch, and after the game, my seven-year old daughter/assistant Katy, who was with me because she wanted to learn how to play basketball before she starts playing in gym class, found out why moments like that are so special.

The simple joy of the game.

She's actually been doing that a lot the last few weeks.

"I just love playing basketball," Beldo told Katy when she asked why he felt so good about his accomplishment.

Think about those simple words.

"I just love playing basketball."

It says so much. Trust me.

Randolph helped the cause of sportsmanship as well.

After a 27-0 Scituate run put the game away, Poirier spoke with Randolph coach Russell Young about keeping Beldo in the game with a big lead.

"It was awful good of Randolph to let Rodney stay in the game," Poirier said. "They said they'd make him work for it. The coach on the other side is a very good man. Coach Young has done a lot there. He's done a good job."

Katy did it again Saturday at a swim meet.

"I love high school swimming," Norwell's Lauren Connaughton said. It's very tiring, but it's fun. Connaughton had reason to be tired.

Saturday she swam the 500 and 50 freestyle and two relays.

Norwell coach Julie Fox had a sililar answer about why she coaches.

"I enjoy working with swimmers," she said smiling. "It's exciting to see them progress and meet their goals."

I have to admit, when I look around the area, I'm seeing this a lot. Players, coaches and fans who all just love the game.

I'm glad my little one is learning from them. Hopefully I help too.

Swimmers edge Norwell

McGinty scored several big points.

Despite the final numbers, it was a good day for Norwell.

Heidi Gordon qualified for State competition in the 100 breast stroke in her first time competing in the event this season.

Gordon's 400 free relay squad, along with Jane Liffers, Bridget Lawson and Emily Mandigo.

Liffers also requalified for States in the 100 freestyle.

"It was an exciting meet," said Norwell coach Julie Fox, who has the girls. "Last year we beat them by two points with a disqualification."

Fox said she was happy to see some of her younger swimmers step up.

"I was able to see what our freshman are capable of," she said. "It will be great in four years."

The Clipper boys had solid performances.

Dan Caldwell had a personal best in the 100 breast stroke, Shane Carey was second in the 500 freestyle in his debut in the event.

Carey, along with Brandon Morrison, Ian Flesher and Stephen Herling were in the final relay that was just edged in what may have been the day's most exciting race when Scituate/Cohasset's John McGuiness closed up a big gap in the final leg and won by a touch.

In all Norwell finished first in nine-of-11 events.

Norwell's Ruth Westegard also fared well, nearly qualifying for States in diving.

Clipper coach Jennifer Schad agreed that the meet came down to more than just top finishes.

It's all depth," Schad said. "They beat us with depth. We'd get first, they'd get third and fourth. That was the difference."

Scituate/Cohasset improved to 5-0, boys and girls, while Norwell dropped to 1-2 (girls).

Edward, a long-time swim coach in his first season with the Scituate/Cohasset team, likes the way things have been going.

"The swimmers are improving," he said. "We're coming together as a team. I'm seeing dramatic improvement."

Scituate Cohasset Football and Cheeleading to host open meeting

The Scituate Cohasset Youth Football & Cheerleading organization is having an open meeting on Wednesday February 11 at 7pm at the Scituate Public Library.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

FOUR STEPS TO THE RIGHT SUMMER CAMP EXPERIENCE

It's the middle of winter and the economy's tough, but a lot of families are already thinking summer camp. In fact, many camps are already beginning to fill up! To help families along in the process, the American Camp Association, New England offers four simple tips to help families find the right summer experience.

1. Consider and List Camp Expectations (Yours and the Prospective Camper's)
Not every camp is a good fit for every child. Parents, guardians and children are the experts on camper needs and interests. Ask questions about what's most important in your search.

2. Utilize Available Search Tools
• Attend a camp fair. Meet face-to-face with camp representatives and directors and take the chance to ask key questions about your specific search.
• Search Online. Use your "camp expectations" list to search online and request camp marketing material. See all ACA-accredited camps in New England at www.acane-camps.org.
• Ask people you know. Speak with people you know who have attended or have children who have attended camps. Keep in mind – what's good for them, may not be good for you.
• Consult professionals. Speak with camp representatives on the phone and in person. In addition to the ACA, there are referral agents (paid by the camp if you enroll) who can help.

3. Decide! Examine Finalist Camps Closely; Then Go With Your Gut
Review all of the camp materials that you have collected and compare each to your list of expectations. Tour your finalist camps when in session (if possible) and attend Camp Open Houses and events.

4. Prepare for Camp Together
Discuss how to handle homesickness. Pack only what is on the list provided by the camp. Find out the recommended method of communication. Send a letter or postcard a week ahead of time so there is mail for the first mail delivery!

"Guardian Angels" race to raise funds for Children's Hospital Boston

BOSTON - Guardian Angel Motorsports (GAM), an organization of race-car enthusiasts whose mission is to harness the power of motorsports to support Children's Hospital Boston's (CHB) Competing for Kids program, is entering a Porsche 997 Grand-AM Spec GT3 Cup race car in the famous Rolex 24 at Daytona sports car endurance race. Their goal is to complete the full race, driving 24 hours in a team effort. All funds raised at the Rolex 24 Hours through per-lap donations, single gifts and sponsorships will support Children's Hospital Boston's Competing for Kids program

Long-time motorsports competitors and GAM's team principals Bruce Ledoux and Cohasset resident Dave Quinlan, along with their three co-drivers Dan Watkins, Steve Zadig and Kurt Kossman, will drive as many laps as possible to raise funds for Children's Hospital Boston. Kossman, a cancer survivor and amputee whose prosthetic leg was made especially for racing, was thrilled to join the team in the mission of raising funds for children with illnesses. He is expected to be the first driver with a prosthetic leg to drive a lap at Daytona.

Quinlan said he's excited to be competing.

"Our mission is to do as many laps as we can," Quinlan said. "We have a lot of pledges per lap. We can do 650-to-700 laps. The key is to stay out of trouble and keep your nose clean. You don't want bumps and thumps. This is exciting. It's going to be a lot of fun. This is my first time at Daytona. It is for all five guys. Some have done 24-hours before, but not at Daytona."

On and off the track, there should be interesting turns.

"A lot of NASCAR guys come out and do this race," he said. "It will be star-studded. You've got guys like the Patrick Dempseys and Danica Patrick is going to be there. If you enjoy racing like we do it will be fun. It will be great getting some autographs. You just don't want to bump fenders with them."

The drivers will take turns behind the wheel, each running off a tank of gas before switching to the next driver.

That gives everyone about an hour driving before taking a break.

Still, when night comes, it is still a challenge.

"At three in the morning it gets to be tough," Quinlan said. "But the racing edge keeps you focused."

Guardian Angel Motorsports co-founder Bruce Ledoux has a personal connection to Children's Hospital.

"It will be a very personal ride for me," says Bruce Ledoux of Southborough, MA whose 5 year-old son Colin has been followed by Children's Hospital Boston since birth.

At two months old, Colin developed lesions on his body and had trouble keeping food in his system, due to severe food allergies. At four months old, he weighed 23 pounds. Within his first year, doctors also noted that he had delayed motor skills and speech. All of these factors led doctors to conduct genetic tests.

"We learned that Colin has a chromosomal abnormality. Since then, we have seen so many Children's Hospital doctors in departments from endocrinology, genetics and metabolism to allergy, immunology, dentistry and radiology. Children's Hospital Boston really works together as a team—they have become my son's pit crew."

"Children's Hospital Boston is thrilled and grateful to partner with Guardian Angel Motorsports to raise funds for exceptional care and cutting-edge research that saves kids' lives," said Carola Cadley, Children's Hospital Trust Associate Vice President of Corporate Development and Marketing. "Using the allure of motorsports and awareness generated from this premier race to help children is innovative and a first for us at Children's."

People interested in becoming a Guardian Angel can donate per lap or through a single gift by visiting childrenshospital.org/giving. The gift is tax-deductible.

"We believe all children need a Guardian Angel so we are racing the Rolex 24 in that vein," says Bruce Ledoux.

Guardian Angel is teaming with TRG, one of the most successful teams in all of sportscar racing, for this race. GAM has hired TRG to provide a car, crew, infrastructure and hospitality for the race.

Tori Lehr answered with a follow up jumper. A swish from the perimeter by Carly Salerno added to the Cohasset lead, sparking Meredith Kelly who went to work driving from right to left through the key for a layup and setting up Tori Lehr on a 2-3 breakaway that put Cohasset ahead 35-26. Hull's continued to play aggressive defense, but Cohasset controlled the tempo the balance of the quarter, committing only one foul and pulling ahead 46-34.

Regardless of the lead, history has taught these teams never to consider the other one down and history repeated itself when Hull put in five unanswered points. Cohasset called a timeout with six minutes on the clock and the score 46-39. Hull closed the gap on a series of tough calls but a long pass by Tori Lehr to a Meredith Kelly got Cohasset a layup and a trip to the foul line. Five minutes to play with the score 48-41 Hull could not get a shot and that possession ended in a jump ball. Grabbing the rebound off their inbound play, Kayla Farren iced a baseline jumper getting Cohasset to 50 points with just under 4 minutes to go. A foul put Hull on the line where they hit only the first of two, but a steal at half court by Carli Haggerty helped Cohasset hold on to its lead and they did not let go, taking home the win 59-44.

Abington

On Thursday the squad hosted the Abington waves. The team got off to a slow start until Tori Lehr put in two turnaround jumpers and stopped Abington's attempt to get inside with a monster block. The tempo was methodical with both teams doing a good job of keeping the ball outside. Abington capitalized on a baseline opening, putting in the layup and getting the extra point from the foul line. But being patient is one of Cohasset's strengths and with seconds left on the shot clock they found Lindsay Davis who sent a three-pointer through the rim bringing the score to 13-7 with two minutes to go in the 1st quarter. The balance of the quarter was spent chasing loose balls all over the pine and baskets by Meredith Kelly and Sammi Lehr would take the score to 17-8 at the buzzer.

Abington opened the second half with a well-executed give-and-go against Cohasset's 1-2-2. Switching to a man-to-man silenced Abington's offense, however, with the exception of a few free throws, Cohasset would not penetrate Abington's compact 2-3 the entire quarter. Cohasset burned the shot clock down every possession but could not put points on the board. Meanwhile Abington's set offense struggled but scrappy play got them second shots and they pulled to within three to 19-16 score at the 1-minute mark and that would be the tally at the end of the quarter.

In the second half Cohasset continued to struggle but their motion offense was able to get the ball inside to Tori Lehr who took a trip to the charity stripe three times in the early going giving Cohasset a 23-18 edge. Abington pulled within two on a three-pointer from the top of key off an inbound pass. Then Carly Salerno got inside to Tori Lehr with a lob and she put in the shot and drew the foul. Missing the foul shot, Lehr grabbed her own rebound and put in it for two. The 4-point conversion put Cohasset out front 27-21. After a seemingly pointless eternity, Sammi Lehr scored for Cohasset. With seconds remaining in the quarter, Abington streaked up the sideline and launched a shot from half court that went in putting the score at 29-26 at the buzzer.

Cohasset came out in the fourth in a man-to-man defense and it appeared the sideline pep talk put some spark in the team's play. Pulling a post to the outside opened up the middle and Cohasset worked it inside to Sammi Lehr who tallied two baskets and a trip to the foul line where she gave Cohasset a 34-27 lead. Meredith Kelly took advantage of the zone collapsing on Lehr to put in two shots from the elbow. With five minutes remaining in the game, Cohasset held onto a 38-31 lead. Abington began to run the offense around the three point shot opportunity resulting in just one attempt at the basket most possessions. The Cohasset offense would produce 11 more points in the quarter and go home with the win 49-40.

Carver

On Sunday the Lady Skippers hosted Carver, the only other undefeated team in the South Shore League. A makeup game rescheduled due to an early December snow storm, both teams were eager to hand the other their first league loss. From the tip off it was clear the game would be physical. Cohasset senior captain Carly Salerno put the Skippers on the board first. It took Cohasset a few looks at Carver's man-to-man before they were able to attack it but the shots would not fall. Carver on the other hand had to settle for the long ball against Cohasset's 1-2-2 but they were extremely effective getting offensive rebounds and converting them to points. Cohasset's points were generated solely from the foul line until Meredith Kelly came alive from the corner tallying four-points and Carli Haggerty added a pair. At the close of the quarter Cohasset trailed Carver 13-14.

The second quarter was frantic. Carver cut through the Cohasset press with relative ease, putting up three-point attempts and muscling in for rebounds and follow up shots. Cohasset had success getting the ball down low but shots were difficult and points hard to come by. At the end of the quarter, Cohasset remained behind 21-25 and had not gained the upper hand yet in this contest.

Carver continued to throw up three point shots but Cohasset's players began to box out and grab defensive rebounds. Quelling Carver's scoring, a few bursts to the basket by Meredith Kelly and a three-point shot by Kayla Farren kept Cohasset with reach. Facing an aggressive man-to-man with pressure on the point guard all the way up the floor, Cohasset could not get a rhythm going. Despite a flurry of baskets by Kelly, Cohasset had trouble containing Carver and they remained down by four at the close of the third quarter.

With one quarter to go, a lob pass to the inside from Carly Salerno to Sammi Lehr resulted in a hoop and Tori Lehr added a second the next trip down the court. With two minutes expired in the fourth, Cohasset finally reigned the score in 40-40. Cohasset came out in a man-to-man defense and the shift caught Carver off guard but this well coached team adjusted quickly. The score seesawed back and forth and with three minutes remaining these teams were locked at 46-46. The game continued its frenzied pace but the Cohasset squad appeared calm. Carly Salerno iced a jumper to give Cohasset the lead. Carver made a drive for the basket and the shot was denied by Tori Lehr blocking the ball. Sammi Lehr came up with the loose ball and was fouled and she got both shots of the 1-1 putting Cohasset out front 49-46. Carver made a last attempt in the final seconds of play, getting off four shots but they did not fall in their favor and Cohasset took the win 49-46.

"Carver is good on the outside and tough on the inside"," said Cohasset coach John LeVangie. "Frankly they have no weakness, nothing we could exploit. I was real proud of how our girls played and the way they stepped up to win."

The win over Carver put Cohasset alone in the top spot in the South Shore League with 7-0 league record and 11-0 record overall. Meredith Kelly holds the spot of second-leading score in the league with 125 points, only a single point behind East Bridgewater's Jen Harvey.

Including this win, Cohasset moved up on the Globe Top 20 list from number 20 to number 14.

"We have had a great season and the hardest thing to do is to keep our focus," said LeVangie.

The team faced East Bridgewater (48-25 win) and will square up again against Carver on the road tonight.

Spinnaker also goes on sale

For the price of a dollar, students can not only read and find out the latest gossip, but also be informed about pressing issues surrounding everything from our school lunches to worldly affairs across the globe.

Hello everyone! I hope you all enjoyed your extended long weekends and the snow that came along with it. It's been a busy, busy few days at the high school filled with final exams, performances, and projects. This is because the first semester ends this upcoming Wednesday and new classes will begin on Thursday, with the exception of any AP classes, which are full-year courses.

The annual Cabaret, hosted by the music department, was held on Thursday, having many memorable performances including the CHS chorus, Jazz ensemble, and various other solo groups. Bravo to all those who participated in the concert and thank you to all those who attended it, all proceeds from the show went to benefit the CHS Art boosters. Tickets for next Saturday's Junior-Senior Semi also went on sale this week; $15 will get you into the greatest high school semi-formal ever, so get your tickets soon because they will no longer be selling them after next Wednesday.

The student-run school newspaper, The Spinnaker also went on sale this past Thursday. For the price of a dollar, students can not only read and find out the latest gossip, but also be informed about pressing issues surrounding everything from our school lunches to worldly affairs across the globe.

More big news at the school, as well as the nation, was that our newly elected president, Barack Obama was inaugurated into office this week. In order to commemorate this event, teachers were given permission to allow students to watch the televised ceremony either in their classes, or down in the auditorium, where the festivities were being projected onto the big screen, if they so desired.

Also, the high school student council has begun hosting their food drive, and it would be greatly appreciated if students could bring in any sort of non-perishable food item such as canned vegetables, peanut butter, or honey, since honey never expires. I leave you now to enjoy your lovely weekend, make sure you drive safe in the snow! Auf Wiedersehen!

RECREATION NEWS

Softball pitchers clinics slated

To register for any program, visit www.cohassetrec.com, stop by the office at Town Hall or call 781-383-4109.

Softball Clinic, Cohasset High School – Cohasset Recreation will host two softball pitchers clinics this winter. The program takes place Mondays, with beginners at 7:30 p.m., and intermediate/advanced at 8:30 p.m., in the gymnasium at Cohasset High School. Ashley Lippert from John Carroll University will instruct the program and a catcher is required. Session one: Jan. 26, Feb. 2 and 9. Session two: Feb. 23, March 2, 9 and 16. Register online at cohassetrec.com.

SAT Math Review, Paul Pratt Library – Bob Beatty, a retired math teacher from Scituate High School and a certified Princeton Review teacher, will teach this 10-hour course starting in February. Class will take place Monday and Thursday nights on Feb. 2, 5, 9, 12, 26, March 2, (make up class on March 9). Cost of the class is $150 and includes all the materials.

Fencing, Cohasset Recreation Center – Hand, eye and foot coordination, concentration and jousting skills will be taught. Fun and safe with equipment provided. Sneakers, T-shirt and sweatpants should be worn. The class will be led by Jim Mullarkey, a championship fencer who has taught for years throughout the South Shore. Cost is $125 per student.

Intermediate Fencing – Mondays, 4:30 to 5:30 p.m., Jan 26 through April 6.

Adult Intro Class – Mondays, 5:30 to 6:30 p.m., Jan 26 through April 6.

Introduction – Fridays, 4:30 to 5:30 p.m., Jan. 30 through April 10.

Middle School Dances, Cohasset Recreation Center – There will be a dance for Cohasset youth in grades six through eight on Saturday, Jan. 24, 7 to 10 p.m., at the Recreation Center. Cost is $6 per person and pre-registration at www.cohassetrec.com is required. Cohasset residents only and school identification is required. Late arrivals after 7:30 p.m. or students leaving early require a parent to be present. Snacks and refreshments will be on sale.

Sunday Afternoon Jam Session, Cohasset Recreation Center – Aspiring musicians can come to Cohasset Recreation Center on Sundays, 4 to 6 p.m., and get together and play music. Music industry veteran and Cohasset resident Howie Altholtz is teaming up with Cohasset Recreation. Thanks go to Crossroads Music of Hanover for this new program. Musicians should bring their own instruments and may bring their own equipment. Amps and drums, provided by Crossroads Music, will be available on site. Cost is $8 per visit or an all access pass of $30 for five weeks. Register at www.cohassetrec.com.

New York, New York, Tuesday, Feb. 17 – This trip to the Big Apple gives people a choice between admission and a show at the Museum of Natural History or a lunch date with one's favorite girl at American Girl Place. For a fee of $99, transportation will be provided to New York City via coach bus and admission to the location of choice. Bus will depart from Cohasset Town Hall at 6 a.m. and arrive in NYC at about 10:30 a.m.

Babysitting Course, Paul Pratt Library – This one-day, three-hour course is designed to assist fifth- through eighth-graders to be better babysitters and to learn the do's and don'ts of being home alone. The course will cover information on child development, playing with younger children, basic first aid, fire safety and prevention, and the overall responsibilities of babysitting. Instructor: Kim Cleary, nurse and mom. Each class is limited to 18 pre-registered students. Cost $18. Meets Tuesday, Feb. 17, 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Kitchen Kids Workshop, Our World Museum – Kitchen Kids is a way to introduce kids to the joy of creative cooking in a fun and safe atmosphere. Children ages 5 through 12 will meet from 3 to 5 p.m., on Saturday, Jan. 24 for a class on "Comfort Foods"; and Saturday, Feb. 21 for "For the Love of Chocolate." Instructor: Sandy Tremblay.

Yoga, Cohasset Town Hall – Hatha yoga class will include moving meditation including gentle stretching and strengthening postures with breathing exercises to decrease stress and increase flexibility. Meets Thursdays, 9:30 a.m. Cost is $8.

Computer Explorers Programs, Cohasset Recreation Center – Begins the week of Jan. 26.

Computertots: Before children turn 4, their brains reach 90 percent development. Introducing technology education at an early age, when children are learning through play, exploration and discovery, integrated with other core subjects, provides an advantage. Ages 4 and 5 will meet Tuesdays, session one, 10:15 to 11 a.m., and session 2, 1 to 1:45 p.m. Cost is $90 per child.

Under the Microscope: Children will explore a whole new world of learning and excitement using a child-friendly digital microscope. Students, ages 4 and 5, will explore the concepts of magnification, science, nature student and digital editing. Meets Tuesdays, 11 to 11:45 a.m. Cost is $90 per child.

Clay animation 1: Clay and animation – what a perfect combination. Working in teams, students do it all from story creation to making the characters and sets. As the learn production, students will animate, record, download and edit their own movies. For ages 6 through 8. Meets from 3 to 3:45 p.m., on Tuesdays. Cost is $90 per child.

Elementary Engineering: This hands-on engineering class combines Lego Educations and Lego Technic materials to explore motorized simple machines by building realistic models. Student teams solve challenges using concepts learned in class. This is the first of four courses in a series providing preparation for First Lego League. FLL extends the first concept of inspiring and celebrating science and technology to children ages 9 through 11 using real-world context and hands-on experimentation. Meets 4 to 4:45 p.m., on Tuesdays. Cost is $90 per child.

Help Plan the Recreation Department's future. Take a minute to answer a few questions about things you enjoy in Cohasset, and things you would like to see improved. The Open Space and Recreation survey is available online on the Web site at cohassetrec.com.

Honorable Judge Julian Houston speaks to those in attendance on Saturday. Houston, author of "New Boy" about a boy coming of age during the civil rights movement, has been the most recent custodian of a rare manuscript: an autobiographical account of John Washington's journey from Virginia slave to free man. Washington spent the last five years of his life in Cohasset.

Obituaries

Alda B. Ronan

Avid reader who enjoyed knitting

Alda B. (Audet) Ronan, 96, of Scituate, formerly of Fall River, died Jan. 8, 2009 peacefully surrounded by her family at Cardigan Nursing Home in Scituate.

She was born in Fall River to Thomas and Delia (LaCroix) Audet.

Mrs. Ronan was the former President of the Ladies Auxiliary at the American Legion John Stafford Post 314 and a dedicated member of church guilds. She was employed for many years as a telephone operator at Union Hospital but she was particularly proud of her more than 1,000 hours of volunteer work at Saint Anne's Hospital in Fall River.

Mrs. Ronan was an avid reader who enjoyed knitting.

In 1982, Mrs. Ronan survived a plane crash at Logan Airport after returning from a trip to visit her sons and their families in California.

Wife of the late Raymond T. Ronan who predeceased her in 1952, she leaves two sons, David R. Ronan and his wife, Nadine, of Cohasset, and Stephen Ronan of Berkley, Calif.; a daughter-in-law, Alda of Hercules, Calif.; her grandchildren Kevin and Stacey Ronan both of San Diego, Calif., Katherine Ronan and her fiancée Christopher Seiwert of Cohasset and Meredith Ronan also of Cohasset; her great-grandson Austin C. Ronan, as well as many loving nieces and nephews.

She was the mother of the late Dr. Michael Ronan, who predeceased her in 2006, and the sister of the late Beatrice Coutu, Herve Audet, Loretta St. Laurent, Lillian Pelletier and Irene Melanson.

A funeral Mass was celebrated on Friday, Jan. 16, at the Saint Anne Parish and Shrine, Fall River.

The Auclair Funeral Home in Fall River handled the arrangements.

In lieu of flowers donations may be made in Mrs. Ronan's memory to Saint Anne's Hospital, 795 Middle St., Fall River 02721. To sign the online guest book visit AuclairFuneralHome.com

Helen T. Huskins

Helen T. (Murphy) Huskins, 83, of Cohasset, died on Tuesday, Dec. 23, 2008 peacefully at home after a long illness surrounded by her loving family.

Wife of the late Lloyd M. Huskins, Sr., she leaves two sons Lloyd M. Huskins, Jr. of Cohasset and Timothy A. Huskins of Yarmouth, Maine. Three grandchildren Larissa M. Huskins of Hoboken, N.J., Emily L. Huskins of North Chelmsford, and Jonathan G. Huskins of Yarmouth, Maine; her sister Rita Voner of Wilmington and numerous nieces, nephews and their families. She was the sister of the late Dorothy Barry.

A memorial service will be held on Saturday, Jan. 31, at 11 a.m. in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset. Relatives and friends invited. For an online guestbook, visit www.mcnamara-sparrell.com

Joan Cameron

Registered nurse

Joan MacGregor Cameron, 96, of Cohasset, died Jan. 16, 2009.

Born in Quincy, Mrs. Cameron was a registered nurse trained at Children's Hospital in Boston. She was an avid knitter, singer and gardener. She was a former member of Cohasset Garden Club, and former member of the Cohasset Golf Club. She was an active member of the Second Congregational Church Choir in Cohasset.

Wife of the late Dr. James T. Cameron, she leaves three sons, Bruce T. and his wife, Lois, of Cohasset, Fraser J. and his wife, Susan, of Manomet, and Duncan S. of Whately; five grandchildren, James T. III of Gilbert, Ariz., Jason R. of Scituate, Douglas R. of Hull, Maren E. of Manomet and Carolyn Caffelle of Portsmouth, N.H; and four great-grandchildren, Charlie of Gilbert, Ariz., Henry and Emmett of Scituate, and Dale of Hull.

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m., on Saturday, Jan. 24, at Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset. Visiting hours omitted. Interment private. Arrangements by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA. 02025.

To sign the online guest book, visit www.mcnamara-sparrell.com.

Suits for Success needs donations

The Suits for Success program, which provides free business attire to men and women reentering the work force, is getting help from the office of William O'Donnell, Norfolk County Register of Deeds. O'Donnell is collaborating with The Career Closet at Interfaith Social Services, which provides women with outfits appropriate for employment interviews, and Father Bills and MainSpring, which offer the same assistance to men who have graduated from a transitional program.

The Registry, at 649 High St. in Dedham, is accepting donations for both organizations during business hours, Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Business attire and other appropriate clothing that is in style and ready to wear —clean, pressed and on hangers — will be gratefully accepted. All contributions are tax deductible.

For information or to schedule a drop off, e-mail Alicia Gardner at agardner@norfolkdeeds.org or call 781- 461-6104.

To learn more about The Career Closet or Father Bills, or to make any other type of donation, visit their Web sites, interfaithsocialservices.org and www.fatherbillsmainspring.org.

Chill out for a great cause!

January winds up with an icy edge when the Drowned Hogs storm Nantasket Beach and make their annual mad dash into the Atlantic Ocean. At noon, on Saturday, Jan. 31, hundreds of hardy nutcases committed to doing something cool and crazy for a cause—Wellspring Multi-Service Center—will predict the arrival of spring in their own special way. Anyone can join, and there are only a few rules.

- The swim doesn't count unless the swimmer fully dunks.
- Wet suits are allowed ONLY if the wearer also wears a tutu and a tiara.

All individuals, teams, groups or families with warm hearts willing to do something chilly for charity are welcome to join the craziness. Information and pledge sheets are available at www.drownedhogs.org or www.wellspringhull.org. Registration fee is $10 and includes the 2009 Drowned Hog T-Shirt and a Drowned Hog button entitling the wearer to great discounts at local retailers all weekend.

Following the icy plunge at high noon, survivors and onlookers are all invited to warm up in the Clarion Hotel at the Nantasket Beach Chamber of Commerce Drowned Hog Soup and Chowder Fest. Last year's defending champion, Weinberg's Bakery, will be challenged by scrumptious offerings from dozens of local eating establishments. Tickets are $10. All proceeds will benefit the food pantry at Wellspring.

Make Chicago your kind of town

Winter in Chicago

CHICAGO — The Illinois Indians gave the name "Chicago"' to the marshland on the shores of Lake Michigan. Chicago roughly translates to "land of the stinking onion."

From this odiferous beginning, Chicago transformed itself into one of the country's world-class cities, offering visitors dozens of cultural attractions that rival any other cultural capital, with the possible exception of Berlin in the 1920s. And with Chicagoean Barack Obama the nation's new top executive — the city is hot, even in January.

Everybody probably knows about the Great Fire of 1871, which burned about four square miles of the city, but they may not be aware that a mere 22 years later Chicago was reborn as "The White City,"America's showplace, as it hosted the 1893 World's Columbian Exposition.

Part of that "new" city still stands on Michigan Avenue in the neoclassic building that is now home to The Art Institute of Chicago.

The Art Institute houses the country's third-largest collection of art — behind New York's Metropolitan and the National Gallery in Washington, D.C. — and contains the largest group of Impressionist paintings outside of France.

Art lovers may want to think about wearing some dark glasses to protect their retinas from the brilliant, vibrating colors of the Impressionists. Alongside works by Monet, Manet, Van Gogh and Cezanne, the centerpiece of the collection is Georges Seurat's oversized canvas, "Sunday on the Grande Jatte."

Later this spring, the museum plans to open a new addition which will allow it to increase the number of works on display.

But not all of Chicago's art is sheltered.

The city has an extensive portfolio of architecture, including buildings by Louis Sullivan, Mies Van Der Rohe and Frank Lloyd Wright.

Take one of the tours given by volunteer docents with the Chicago Architecture Foundation to get a closer look at the city's contribution to architecture known as Chicago School.

Chicago School buildings are easily recognizable by the three-part design copied from the classic column — a solid distinct base, a soaring middle that acts as the shaft of the column, and a top floor to represent the capital, with more ornamental detail capped with a cornice.

Windows in Chicago School buildings are also divided into three parts, with a large middle section and smaller windows that open on either side.

You can pick from 80 different architecture tours, including a riverboat cruise and a bus trip that includes a glimpse of Obama's home in the Kenwood neighborhood, or slip on your walking shoes and hit the streets.

On the Historic Skyscrapers tour, you visit about a half-dozen sites where you can see a concrete, steel-and-glass timeline charting the development of the modern skyscraper.

Once you learn how and why buildings shifted from load-bearing walls to steel frame structures, put your knowledge to use with a visit to the Sears Tower Skydeck. The tallest building in the United States, the Sears Tower offers stunning views encompassing four states from its 99th floor observatory.

Closer to Lake Michigan, the Hancock Observatory at the John Hancock Center allows visitors a chance to step outside on its screened walkway on the 94th floor. In winter, this is like sticking your head out of a 767 that has just reached its cruising altitude.

The Culture and Commerce tour leads groups through the landmark Marshall Field & Co. Department Store — now Macy's — for views of the store's 13-story atrium and Tiffany Dome with a mosaic created by 1.6 million tiles.

Another stop on the tour gets you a peek inside the Sullivan-designed Auditorium Theater built in 1889 — which is still an active playhouse.

Chicago is second only to New York City in the number of live performances on stage any given night.

Theatergoers can choose from current Broadway hits such as "Wicked" and "Jersey Boys" or opt for something a little more challenging like the Goodman Theater's current three-month festival of Eugene O'Neill's works.

From now through early March, you can catch productions of "Desire Under the Elms," "The Hairy Ape," "Strange Interlude" and a Dutch reworking of "Mourning Becomes Electra."

Over at the Steppenwolf Theatre Company, take in one of the first post-Broadway productions of Conor McPherson's "The Seafarer."

The story of five men playing cards on Christmas Eve in Dublin takes on a darker tone as it becomes clear one of the players is the devil looking to score the ultimate pot — one of the other men's souls.

Parts of "The Seafarer," which stars John Mahoney from TV's "Frasier," are wickedly funny. But if it's non-stop laughter you're after, skip the theater and head straight to The Second City.

For the better part of three decades, The Second City has been the starting point for some of America's biggest comedy stars, including John Belushi, Mike Meyers, Bill Murray, Tina Fey and Stephen Colbert.

If live music is more to your liking, Chicago is teeming with spots to grab a drink and relax on a bar stool to hear soothing jazz or soul-searching blues.

The Green Mill on Lawrence and Broadway, about 5 miles north of downtown, offers live jazz music Monday through Thursday until 1 a.m.; Friday until 3:30 a.m.; and Saturday until 4:30 a.m.

You can also hop an elevated train and head to Lincoln Square and the Old Town School of Folk Music.

A performance space and music school, Old Town brings in folk musicians from around the globe to perform in its intimate theater. Old Town also offers regular opportunities for students to showcase their talents in front of an audience.

If you hit the city in the warmer months, musical performances can be found at the Frank Gehry-designed Pritzker Pavilion at Millennium Park. Gehry's trademark abstract design meshes nicely with the nearby 110-ton sculpture by British artist Anish Kapoor. The steel, elliptically shaped piece offers stunning reflections of buildings opposite its location on Michigan Avenue.

Although officially titled "Cloud Gate," locals have adopted a more colorful name in honor of the sculpture's legume shape, calling it "The Bean" — which seems about right for a town once known as the stinking onion.

IF YOU go...

GETTING THERE: Fly to O'Hare or Midway — there are plenty of nonstops from Boston. Once you arrive, take the subway/elevated train from either airport to your hotel downtown.

STAYING THERE: The Silversmith Hotel & Suites (800-979-0084; www.silversmithchicagohotel.com) is located in the heart of Chicago's Loop, just steps from the city's Theater District and shopping on State Street. The Wabash/Madison elevated train station, serving the Pink, Orange, Green and Brown lines, is located just outside the hotel's door. The Silversmith was constructed in 1897 by renowned architectural firm D.H. Burnham and Company for the growing jewelry and silver trade industries. Rooms start around $126 per night; suites go for about $153. The hotel also offers a variety of packages that provide access to various city attractions.

EATING THERE: Because, as Carl Sandburg wrote, Chicago is the "hog butcher to the world," no trip to the Windy City is complete without a Chicago-style hot dog. Chicago dogs are all beef and either steamed or grilled. Order it with the works, which includes mustard, relish, onion, hot peppers, celery salt, tomatoes and a bun-length pickle. Just don't ask for ketchup or you might get shown the door. Gold Coast Dogs, locations around town including 159 N. Wabash Ave. (312-917-1677) in the Loop, and Hot Doug's, 3324 N. California (773-279-9550), which is the only hot dog stand to earn a Zagat rating of 27 for food, are the top two spots for dogs.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
JAN. 19, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although you're getting kudos and other positive reactions to your suggestions, don't let the cheers drown out some valid criticisms. Better to deal with them now than later.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Following your keen Bovine intuition pays off, as you not only reassess the suggestions some people are putting in front of you, but also their agendas for doing so.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You continue on a high-enthusiasm cycle as that new project you've assumed takes shape. You're also buoyed by the anticipation of receiving some good news about a personal matter.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your eagerness to immerse yourself in your new assignment is understandable. But be careful that you don't forget to take care of that pressing personal situation as well.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is a good time to learn a new skill that could give a clever Cat an edge in the upcoming competition for workplace opportunities. Enjoy the arts this weekend with someone special.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You could risk creating an impasse if you insist on expecting more from others than they're prepared to give. Showing flexibility in what you'll accept could prevent a stalemate.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Although you can weigh all factors of a dispute to find an agreeable solution for others, you might need the skilled input of someone you trust to help you deal with an ongoing situation of your own.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The good news is that your brief period of self-doubt turns into a positive "I can do anything" attitude. The better news is that you'll soon be able to prove it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good time for Sagittarians to start making travel plans while you can still select from a wide menu of choices and deals, and not be forced to settle for leftovers.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Like your zodiacal sign, the sure-footed Goat, you won't allow obstacles in your path to keep you from reaching your goal. Don't be surprised by who asks to go along with you.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Let your head dominate your heart as you consider the risks that might be involved in agreeing to be a friend's co-signer or otherwise act as his or her backup in a financial matter.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Prioritize: Resolve to close the door and let your voice mail take your phone calls while you finish up a task before the end-of-week deadline. Then go out and enjoy a fun-filled weekend.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your capacity for care and compassion helps to bring comfort to others.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Stacy Keach tackles role of disgraced president in 'Frost/Nixon'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Not long after being cast as Richard M. Nixon in the national tour of "Frost/Nixon," which comes to Boston's Colonial Theatre next week, Stacy Keach decided that he did not need to look like the disgraced former president to play him.

"Initially, I had a hairpiece, a new nose, and new teeth made to wear on stage, but I threw everything out except the hairpiece when my wife said I looked like some sort of a gangster. My interpretation is more about capturing the essence of his soul. There are certain manifestations of his personality, of course, but it is not an impersonation or impression," explained Keach by telephone recently from Cleveland.

The first stage play by screenwriter Peter Morgan ("The Queen," "The Last King of Scotland"), "Frost/Nixon" debuted at London's Donmar Warehouse before transferring to the West End. The play tells the story of British broadcast journalist David Frost's four television interviews with Nixon in 1977, just three years after the man some called "Tricky Dick" resigned the presidency rather than face impeachment following the Watergate scandal. It opened on Broadway in April 2007, garnering Tony nominations for Best Play and Best Direction. Frank Langella took home the Tony for Best Actor for his portrayal of Nixon in New York, opposite Michael Sheen as Frost. Langella and Sheen reprised their stage roles for director Ron Howard's film adaptation of the play, now in wide release.

Stephen Rowe as Swifty Lazar, Stacy Keach as Richard Nixon and Noel Velez as Manolo Sanchez in the national tour of 'Frost/Nixon,' which comes to Boston next week.

"Frank is an old and dear friend of mine, and I love his work as an actor. I didn't see him on Broadway in this play, nor have I seen the film yet, because I didn't want to have his performance influence me," said Keach. "The presence of the film has really helped the play. It's great branding for the piece."

Stacy Keach

Nixon himself was looking to rebuild his own image with help from Frost, according to Keach. "Nixon's desire to rehabilitate his image is what led him to want to do the David Frost interviews. What's interesting is that Peter Morgan has done such an amazing job with this play of giving us a fresh perspective on Nixon. In many ways, this play does more to humanize him and his image than the actual interviews did at the time. Nixon is very self-deprecating in the play."

The 67-year-old Keach — a classically trained actor who won recent acclaim for his King Lear at Chicago's Goodman Theatre — is perhaps best-known as hard-boiled detective Mike Hammer in CBS-TV's "Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer" and "The New Mike Hammer" (1984-87), the syndicated "Mike Hammer: Private Eye" which aired from 1997 to 1998, and two soon-to-be-released-on-CD radio dramas. He has very clear memories of the 37th president and the wiretap and bugging scandal that abbreviated his second term in office.

"The Watergate hearings were a kind of early reality television. We all watched those hearings from start to finish. We couldn't take our eyes off of them. It was like a soap opera," said Keach, who believes audiences often arrive at the theater with a negative opinion of the former president.

"In the beginning, you can feel the antipathy for Nixon. But by the end of the evening, however, there is real empathy for the character," said Keach, who watched tapes of the actual David Frost interviews and Nixon's August 1974 resignation speech to prepare for his role and better understand his character. "Nixon was misguided and I think probably also emotionally unstable. He was haunted by demons, which made him highly suspicious of anyone outside his own family. He was a constant blinker and a very stiff person who always seemed somewhat uncomfortable in himself. He also, however, had a great brain and was a wonderful, very tenacious lawyer. We get a full range of his humanity in this play."

"Frost/Nixon" will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston St., Boston, Jan. 27 to Feb. 8. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 1-800-982-2787 or go online at broadwayacrossamerica.com/Boston.

A happy homage to 'Superwoman'

New production will appeal to women of all ages, all backgrounds

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

When John F. McDonald Jr., isn't staging his own shows and concerts on the South Shore and in Boston, the Quincy-based entertainment presenter can often be found checking out the competition. McDonald, founder and president of JM Productions, is the first to admit that when he sees something he likes it often inspires him.

"The idea for my newest show, 'Superwoman … A Musical Revue,' came to me because I was really impressed by 'Menopause: The Musical,' 'Girls Night Out,' and other shows. These kinds of musicals really speak to the women of today who want their voices to be heard in ways that are current and not just in the traditional manner of the women's movement. With this new show, I'm trying to offer something that will appeal to sisters, daughters, wives, mothers, grandmothers and women of all ages and backgrounds through great music and rich, sometimes ribald humor. It is really a celebration of, for and about women that offers something for everyone."

"There won't be a woman anywhere who doesn't relate in some way to this show, and the men in their lives are, of course, invited to enjoy the ride, too."
JM Production's John F. McDonald Jr.

McDonald will present "Superwoman…A Musical Revue" on two Fridays and Saturdays, Jan. 30 and 31 and Feb. 6 and 7, at JM's "Standing O!" cabaret, comedy and piano room within Cela's Italian Restaurant in Quincy Center. His cast will include Braintree's Cheri Kelly, who has danced her way across the United States and Europe as Peggy Sawyer in national and European tours of "42nd Street." Kelly has also donned tap shoes to appear with Savion Glover in "The New Tap Generation — A Night of Tap" at New York's legendary Apollo Theatre and at the Strand Theatre and Opera House in Boston.

Joining Kelly will be Kathy Teevens Fitzpatrick, of Quincy, who has starred locally in several JM Productions shows including "Nunsense," "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown" and the perennial "What Christmas Means to Me;" Marybeth Kelly, of Braintree, whose professional career has taken her from the cabaret troupe at the Common Market in West Quincy to Nashville's Opryland USA, where she was featured in "The Country Christmas Show;" Halifax's Sue Susi, whose perfect pitch has been heard in several musicals aboard the American Hawaii Cruise Line; and Kirsten Hughes, of Quincy, who starred as Ariel in Disney's "Voyage of the Little Mermaid" at Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla., and has performed and recorded with her own band, Velvet Krush, in Boston and New York.

"My plan is to keep things simple while maintaining a fast pace. The show opens with the entire cast performing Doug Karsanos' and David Zippel's exuberant anthem to women's freedom and solidarity, 'All Girl Band,' and continues with songs for and about women, including Broadway show tunes, some of the great Bachrach and David songs made famous by Dionne Warwick, as well as more contemporary music by Alicia Keys and others, " said McDonald.

"Our cast is terrific, too, and includes some of the most talented women I have worked with in my 23 years in this business. They're not just gifted performers; they're also strong, independent women who sing from their souls whether the music is poignant and emotional or rock-the-house rhythm and blues. Under Matt Prior's musical direction, the cast employs intricate harmonies and carefully chosen solos to bring the audience along for a musical journey from childhood through adulthood.

"There won't be a woman anywhere who doesn't relate in some way to this show, and the men in their lives are, of course, invited to enjoy the ride, too," McDonald said.

JM Productions will present "Superwoman … A Musical Revue" on Jan. 30 and 31 and again on Feb. 6 and 7, at 8 p.m. in JM's "Standing O!" cabaret, comedy and piano room at Cela's Italian Restaurant, 1495 Hancock St., Quincy, 617-774-0002. For tickets and information, call 617-786-7469 or go online at jmproductionspresents.com.

HINGHAM CIVIC MUSIC THEATRE announces Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 23 and 24, auditions at 7 p.m. for its spring show, "Stepping Out." The tryouts will be at Sanborn Auditorium of Hingham Town Hall, 210 Central St., just off Route 228 in Hingham. HCMT will cast nine female parts and one male part for the non-musical production of the Broadway play, which was also made into a 1991 movie starring Liza Minnelli. The show will be held in late April, although exact dates still are being arranged. Director Pat Sherman is especially seeking people willing to learn a few tap-dance or movement exercises that are part of the play. The Feb. 23-24 auditions will involve some movement work "to gauge how tap/dancing is approached and enjoyed, rather than how well it is performed." For more information, phone Pat Sherman at 781-837-1499, or contact her by email at hcmtstagemomma@comcast.net. Also, visit www.hcmt.org.

Stratus Ensemble, a group consisting of winds, piano and voice, will present an afternoon concert of chamber music.

Stratus Ensemble to perform at First Parish

The ensemble performs programs that include traditional classic works, as well as contemporary and Latin music.

Stratus Ensemble, a group consisting of winds, piano and voice, will present an afternoon concert of chamber music. They will perform works by Florent Schmitt, Juliana Hall, Fanny Mendelssohn, Igor Stravinsky, Hoover, Paquito D'Rivera, and Franz Schubert. The concert will be at 4 p.m., on Sunday, Jan. 25, at First Parish Cohasset, located on the green at North Main Street, Cohasset. Admission is $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

Stratus Ensemble came into existence in 2006 as a wind trio formed by three graduate students of Longy School of Music to explore the often overlooked chamber music repertoire for winds. Later the group evolved to include piano and voice. The ensemble performs programs that include traditional classic works, as well as contemporary and Latin music. Stratus Ensemble performs in public and private concerts throughout the Boston area, and gives educational clinics at schools. Members of the Stratus Ensemble are: Lindsay Albert, piano; Rachael A. Chagat, soprano; Yhasmin Valenzuela, clarinet; and Deirdre Viau, flute.

For more information about the concert, call Allegra Martin at 617-872-0461.

The Olmstead ensemble at St. Stephens

Members of the ensemble tour widely with orchestras and chamber groups in North America, Europe, and the Far East.

Celebrating its 17th year, St. Stephen's Concert Series in Cohasset will be presenting the Olmstead Ensemble in a concert on Sunday, Feb. 1, at 3 p.m.

The Olmsted Ensemble consists of Peter H. Bloom, flute; Brian Clague, violin; Jennifer Shallenberger, viola; and Timothy Roberts, cello. Praised for "glorious music" and "great energy and virtuosity," the Olmsted Ensemble performs across the Northeast, appearing at venues such as Boston's Museum of Fine Arts, Longfellow National Historic Site, and Elmira College, New York. Members of the ensemble tour widely with orchestras and chamber groups in North America, Europe, and the Far East. The program on Feb. 1 will include music of Mozart, Beethoven, Ignace Pleyel, a favorite student of Haydn's, and Charles Hommann, a superb but seldom-heard American composer from the mid-19th century.

The church is located at 16 Highland Avenue in Cohasset, is handicap accessible and plenty of parking is available at the village car park. Admission is free, but donations will be accepted. For information, call 781-383-1083.

Writers' workshop at Buttonwood Books

Grub Street South at Buttonwood, a workshop for writers, will meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 28, at Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset. Lynne Heitman will lead the workshop, called Practice Your Pitch, which will give participants the chance to work on and improve their publishing pitches in an environment that is safe, stimulating and constructive. The 90-minute workshop will open with a short introductory presentation on what makes a pitch work, but the bulk of the time will be reserved for practicing and critiquing pitches. Participants will leave this session with improved confidence.

Heitman is author of the "Alex Shanahan" thriller series. She is a past co-chairwoman of the Crime Bake Committee and served two terms as president of Mystery Writers of America New England.

Reservations are requested and can be made by calling Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

Cabaret tickets on sale!

The 47th annual Hingham Cabaret will run from Thursday, Jan. 29 at 7 p.m., through Friday and Saturday Jan. 30 and 31 at 8 p.m. at the Hingham Armory, Central Street. Cabaret benefits the Hingham Community Center, which last year celebrated its 50th year.

This year's show, called "I've Got Rhythm," will highlight great classics and some new musical favorites. Featured artists will include Billy Joel and Tina Turner, along with hits from South Pacific and Gypsy.

Tickets prices are the same as last year: $15 for general admission and $12 for senior citizens on Thursday night; $23 on Friday and Saturday nights.

Tickets are on sale at the Center, 70 South St., from 9 a.m. to noon, and from 7 to 9 p.m. or call the Center at 781-749- 9786.

A shuttle bus sponsored by Linden Ponds will make pickups at Hingham Town Hall, Central Street, and The Hingham Institution for Savings, Main Street parking lot.

Give warmth.

Rotary quietly helps those in need

Jean Roche is current president

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

If you are civic-minded and willing to serve, there is an organization out there for you. Since their inception over 100 years ago, Rotary clubs worldwide have done quiet work to help those in need help next door and around the world.

"We want people who are looking for a way to give back to the community."
— Jean Roche, president

This year, Cohasset resident Jean Roche is serving as the Rotary Club president — she is only the second female president of the local Rotary chapter since the organization voted to admit women into the club worldwide in 1989. She is currently about halfway through her term.

"For a small group we are able to do a lot," said Roche of the 23-member organization. However, one of Roche's aims as president and as a Rotarian is to get more members and interest in the organization.

Rotarians come from varied backgrounds, but share a desire to give back to the community. Members are business owners, administrators, bankers, accountants, doctors, attorneys and managers.

State aid cut is 7.5 percent

$62,000 in mid-year cuts

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The news was bad, but it was better than predicted.

On Wednesday, Governor Deval Patrick unveiled his fiscal 2010 budget with significant cuts to local aid. While Cohasset budget does not count on state aid as a great percentage of the overall budget, the town will still struggle to make ends meet.

Two weeks ago, Town Manager Bill Griffin prepared town committees for a 15 percent reduction in state aid; in the Governor's budget the decrease is nearly 7.5 percent.

"While what came out (Wednesday) might be regarded as 'good news,' we still have a significant budget problem that I will continue to try and address," said Griffin in an e-mail.

Chapter 70, state aid for public schools, is being level funded. Cohasset will receive $1.78 million. Griffin had conservatively predicted a 10 percent reduction in early January.

Lottery aid is being cut by 28.55 percent. Cohasset will receive $338,837.

Another local aid account dubbed additional assistance is being funded at a 28.55 reduction over last year ($118,680).

A real haunt?

Town Hall ghost elusive

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A year ago, a group of paranormal investigators declared the Town Hall haunted.

A year later, not many employees at Town Hall have seen, heard or felt the ghost during their normal course of duty.

"As much as I'd love to tell you I have, I've never had a run in with the ghost."
— Jack Worley, retired recreation director

Health Inspector Tara Tradd, whose desk is literally feet from the mysterious door used as evidence of a haunting, said she has yet to have an encounter with the ghost of Town Hall.

"Honestly, I have to say I haven't had a supernatural experience here," said Tradd. "I wish there was something more I could tell you."

That was the pervasive thought coming from town hall employees — no ghost sightings. All the employees the Mariner spoke with apologized for not

Sold to the highest bidder!

First Parish earned over $175K

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The historic treasures that had been in the possession of the First Parish Church for almost 300 years netted a sizable chunk last weekend. Three lots were sold for a total of $235,000 at the Sotheby's New York Important Americana auction on Friday and Saturday.

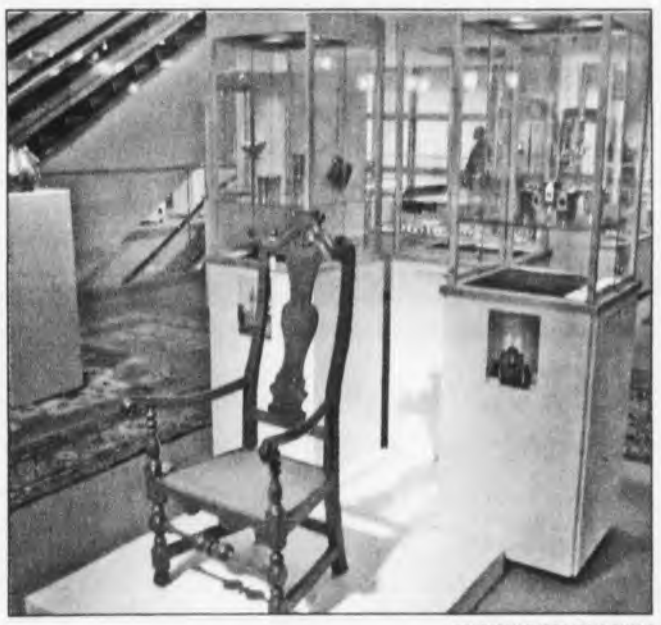
The total is what was paid, but not what the First Parish received. Sotheby's takes a 25 percent commission, earning First Parish approximately $176,000 from the sale.

The two pairs of Deacon John Jacobs beakers by silversmith Jacob Hurd that date back to 1728 were among some of the highest bids of the day. They fetched $85,000 each. The Susanna Lewis beakers, dated 1824, were sold for $8,750. The Important William and Mary carved and figured maple chair sold for $56,250.

"Times are tough and I don't think Sotheby's in general did as well as they thought they would do," said Galt Grant, a member of the First Parish and one of the coordinators for the auction. But, First Parish is satisfied with the amount their items received.

To make matters better, Grant said a Cohasset resident, who at this point in time is remaining anonymous, purchased the Susanna Lewis pair of beakers.

Three pairs of the silver beakers (the 1795 Deacon John Jacobs beakers, the 1821 Deacon Uriah Lincoln beakers and the 1843 Rebecca Tower beakers) did not get sold. First Parish is talking to Sotheby's about what to do with the other silver beakers.



Grant, his wife, Susan and two friends went down to New York to witness the auction first hand.

"It was a fascinating experience that I would recommend anyone to do," said Grant. "Sotheby's has quite the operation."

The silver beakers were the last items up for sale during Friday's auction and the maple chair was the first item up for bid on Saturday.

The Unitarian-Universalist church made the decision to auction off the items, some of which had been locked

With the snow on Wednesday, the Mariner had to improvise to find a candidate for Picture This. With the help of Mike Barra at the Recreation Department, we caught up with 14-year-old Jimmy Lydon. Jimmy is the DJ extraordinaire for the monthly middle school dances. In the photo, he is playing a video game at Laser Gate (an indoor laser tag venue), one of Recreation's Summer Xtreme field trips last summer. The next middle school dance is on Valentine's Day, sign up online at www.cohasse-trec.com so you won't be shut out.

New director of veterans' services

Town Manager Bill Griffin appointed Joe McElroy of 59 Windy Hill Road to be the new Director of Veterans Service for Cohasset. McElroy will serve an indefinite term and indicated he will not accept the $1,600 stipend allotted to the director of veterans service.

McElroy replaced Bob Jackson who recently resigned from the position as of Jan. 1, 2009. Jackson cited personal reasons and thanked Griffin for the opportunity to serve local veterans.

Any Cohasset veteran, surviving spouse/dependent or other who wish to address veterans issues are welcome to contact McElroy through the Town Manager's office (781-383-4105) or directly by phone 781-383-0505 or by e-mail at cohjoe@aol.com.

Police: Snowball complaints on rise

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A caller reported kids throwing snowballs at passing cars at about 6:28 p.m. on Tuesday (Jan. 20). A police officer responded and reported the kids hit the cruiser with a snowball and then ran into the woods. The officer lost sight of them.

Police Chief James Hussey said parents should talk to their children about the dangers of throwing snowballs at moving cars. He said the snowball could cause the motorist to lose control resulting in an accident injuring the occupants, those in another car, or damaging property.

Police have received numerous complaints about kids throwing snowballs at cars this winter.

Disturbing picture

A woman went to police to report a disturbing picture she had received on her cell phone last week. The officer spoke to a parent at the number where the picture was sent. Apparently the picture was some form of chain letter, which the sender had meant to send to a friend. It was sent to the woman by mistake. The sender apologized and the woman, who reported the matter accepted the apology, police said.

The photo was not illegal, police said.

Summons

Police were assisting a motorist in a black Toyota with its hazards on near the train station. The battery had died, police said. The motorist's brother arrived with another car to push the Toyota into the MBTA lot overnight.

However as it turned out, a check on the plate revealed the brother, who is 27 and from Hull and came to help, had a suspended license and was not supposed to be driving. He is being summonsed to court on the charge of operating after license suspension (subsequent offense).

House arrest

Police assisted the court last week in confirming that an individual who is on "house arrest" was indeed at home in Cohasset. Officers went to the house after receiving a call from the court; the individual under house arrest was at home but said he did not hear the phone, police said.

Tools taken

Police are investigating the apparent theft of thousands of dollars in tools missing from a construction trailer off Howard Gleason Road last week. Missing are two hydraulic drills, two hydraulic drill bits, a hydraulic splitter and power unit. The employee checking the trailer discovered the missing items. Police said there were no signs of forced entry. The rear door lock to the trailer had been removed and was missing.

Fence damage

The fence at the Music Circus on Sohier Street was reported damaged on Wednesday (Jan. 21). The call came in at 6:18 p.m. It is not clear what caused the damage to the metal gate and wooden post near the sign on Sohier Street. It could have been an accident or the result of a snowplow, police said.

Money missing

Police are investigating missing cash deposits from Dunkin Donuts. A report came in last week from the Dunkin Donuts at the corner of Beechwood Street and Route 3A but the missing deposits may involve more of the restaurants. The matter is under investigation by detectives.

Taillights

Police gave a verbal warning to a motorist whose taillights were not working properly. The incident occurred at about 9 p.m. last Friday (Jan. 23) on Route 3A. The motorist, who apparently did not realize there was an equipment failure, was told to drive straight home to Scituate and not to drive the car again until the lights were fixed.

Warrant

At the request of Scituate police, Cohasset police arrested at 52-year-old Cohasset an on an outstanding warrant last Friday at 11:15 p.m. at his address.

Union: Aging cruisers are a safety hazard

Lost confidence in high-mileage cars

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Police Association, which is the police officers' union, is so concerned about the aging fleet of cruisers that it filed a grievance — which is a formal, written complaint — on Jan. 6 stating the town has failed to provide efficient and safe equipment.

Last March, union president Officer James P. McLean wrote to selectmen about the union's concern that equipment malfunctions and failures could occur in an emergency situation.

"We want to be safe on the roads between where we are and where we are going as well as make sure the cars are safe for the officers."

— Officer James P. McLean, union president

"Although the vigilant maintenance being performed on the cruisers may extend the life of them, they are at the point of being unsafe to drive," McLean, who also serves as the fleet manager for the police department, stated in that letter.

The department has one new cruiser purchased with funds approved at the November 2007 Special Town meeting, with another due to arrive next month purchased with money appropriated at the November 2008 Special Town Meeting.

However, that still leaves three cruisers in a deplorable state, McLean said in a recent interview.

"We were worried a year ago and we are beyond worried now," he said. "Ideally they have got to be replaced."

McLean, who explained as union president it is his responsibility to look out for the interests and safety of the membership, said cruisers are not used like cars belonging to civilians.

"People say 'my Toyota has 180,000 miles are runs like a top,'" McLean said, explaining that regular cars are not subject to extreme duty like police work. The cruiser also serves as the police officer's "office," he said.

"We want to be safe on the roads between where we are and where we are going as well as make sure the cars are safe for the officers," he said.

McLean said problems with the high-mileage cruisers keep arising. He said in December cruisers were "in the shop" five times for non-routine maintenance. He enumerated a range of problems from transmission issues to malfunctioning horns and headlights. The front ends can shutter "like someone shaking a "bag of coins," he said. The worn-out cruisers are also embarrassing. For example, while an officer was writing a citation for a motorist — the cruiser's engine, parked behind the car, was smoking.

The first step the union took last year was to notify Police Chief James Hussey and then to put it in writing. The union then wrote to selectmen. The grievance was filed Jan. 6.

Sean R. McArdle, associate executive director of the New England Police Benevolent Assoc., Inc. – which represents local police unions and becomes involved when a local union brings an issue to the Association's attention – said some Cohasset police officers are afraid to shut the cars off for fear they won't start. He said the cruiser issue should not have to reach the grievance level.

McArdle said the cruiser issue could affect the morale of the department.

"The officers just want safe cars – 150,000 miles is not safe," he said. McArdle said police cruisers should be rotated out before 100,000 miles.

"The last thing police officers need to worry about when responding to a call is the vehicle they're in," McArdle said.

However, Steve Gaumer, chairman of the Capital Budget Committee – which addressed the cruisers at a meeting Tuesday – said even if the committee could replace three cruisers at once, the appropriation requires the approval of Town Meeting.

"We are a small community which has the luxury of its own police, fire and school departments," Gaumer said in a telephone interview. "Our tax base is almost entirely residential – so there is not much way to expand revenue."

But, with that being said, Gaumer said the police department made the point that cruisers are on duty 24/7. He said two cruisers have been replaced and

Capital Budget Committee hears cruiser requests

At the Capital Budget Committee meeting Tuesday, the Police Department presented its case for capital items. Most of the requested items fell into the "need" category, as Chief James Hussey walked through the requests.

Dominating the discussion was the $62,000 request for two new marked cruisers to replace two cruisers that are approaching 150,000 miles. Hussey said the cars have had numerous transmission problems and the officers are losing confidence in the vehicles.

"This is something they respond with to an emergency…you can't compare that to a car used for commuting or in a garage 80 percent of the time, these are different," said Hussey.

Lt. Greg Lennon said the part of the problem was officers' perception of the vehicles.

"There's a frustration level that has to be taken into account. If you get a call about a baby not breathing or CPR in progress, (officers) are going to go like hell to get there. They shouldn't be thinking 'are the brakes going to work?' We're hoping we can save someone's life," said Lennon.

The Capital Budget Committee understood, but continued to ask questions, the CBC hopes Town Meeting will approve a third cruiser. "Then we would have three new cruisers in the fleet by June of this year," he said. Gaumer pointed out that this year there is a number of what are considered "emergency requests" before the committee, which makes recommendations to Town Meeting.

"We have heard their concerns about the cruisers," Gaumer said. "And if we maintain the current (replacement schedule) we will have addressed them as directly as we know how."

Chief Hussey said he did not believe the cruisers were so much a safety issue but one of confidence.

"It comes down to confidence in the car," Hussey said. "The cars are checked for safety but they are getting old and they are in and out of the shop all the time." He said ideally it would be good to replace two of cruisers with $140,000-$150,000 miles.

"we're not trying to minimize what you do everyday," said Capital Budget Committee chairman Steve Gaumer.

Hussey said at least three of the vehicles have has transmission replacements. With that in mind, Gaumer asked if it was maybe time to look into other vendors, "maybe Ford is not the one any more."

Lennon said there weren't many vehicle manufactures out there doing police packages and there hasn't been much experience with other car manufacturers locally. Hull currently is using Dodge Chargers. Hussey said they are waiting to see how they perform as compared to the Crown Victorias.

CBC member Peter DeCaprio asked about the use of the motorcycles. One of the arguments when the town purchased a motorcycle was it would reduce the wear and tear on the fleet, "that's not happening."

Hussey said motorcycles are not used as an emergency response vehicle because of safety reasons.

The CBC will make recommendations for capital purchases at an upcoming meeting.

— Nancy White

McLean, the union president, said he implores the town to have the three front-line cruisers with high mileage be checked out by an independent Ford technician to determine whether they are safe to drive. He suggested the inspection be put in writing that the cars are safe for emergency response and extreme duty.

"We are not being spoiled," he said. "We just want safe cars – and 150,000 miles is not safe."

The union provided the cruiser numbers, years, and current mileage as follows:

- (886) 2005 Crown Victoria – front line car (supervisors) — 120,778
- (882) 2003 Crown Victoria – front line car (removed from service) — 151,916
- (883) 2005 Crown Victoria – front line car — 145,516
- (884) 2005 Crown Victoria – front line car — 145,029
- (887) 2008 Crown Victoria – front line car — 22,746

up in a safe underneath a staircase unseen and unused for decades. The funds will be used for the upkeep of their two historic properties — the Meeting House and the Parish House — on and across from the town common.

The Deacon John Jacobs beakers (1728) – each of the two pairs sold for $85,000

The Deacon John Jacobs Silver Beakers by Jacob Hurd were made in Boston in 1728. The pairs belong to the very earliest group of dated pieces from the maker's workshop — a workshop that has been credited with the creating of more than half of the surviving Boston silver from that time.

These are the two most valuable pairs of beakers, each valued between $70,000 and $100,000.

Deacon John Jacobs was the grandson of Nicholas Jacobs, one of Hingham's earliest settlers, and the son of John Jacobs Sr., one of the leaders of Hingham's dispute with Scituate over the area that would become the new community of Cohasset.

These four beakers (which are being offered in two separate lots) were exhibited at the Museum of Fine Arts in 1911 as part of the "American Church Silver of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries."

The Sotheby's New York Important Americana auction was held at Sotheby's last Friday and Saturday.

Susanna Lewis beakers (1824) – sold for $8,750

The Susanna Lewis beakers were created by Nathan Hobbs in Boston in 1824. This pair bears the inscription "To the Church of Christ in Cohasset – This Cup is the Gift of Suzanna Lewis, it being the proceeds of a Gold Medal, from the King of Denmark to her late husband Capt. John Lewis."

The "gold medal from the King of Denmark" which paid for these beakers was in recognition of Cohasset's help in one of the most noted shipwrecks off the Cohasset coast.

On Feb. 12, 1793, the Giertrude Maria, underway from Copenhagen to Boston, was wrecked off of the coast of the Cohasset shore, spewing cargo and men into the sea. Cohasseters in small boats rescued both men and cargo and even provided a vessel for the sailors to continue to Boston. In appreciation, the King of Denmark awarded four gold medals and ten silver ones.

The Deacon John Jacobs Silver Beakers by Jacob Hurd were made in Boston in 1728. Each of the two pairs sold for $85,000.

William and Mary carved and figured maple chair – sold for $56,250

The "Important William and Mary carved and figured maple armchair" was given to the First Parish Church nearly 300 years ago. According to Sotheby's, this important armchair relates directly to the largest group of caned seating furniture made in America. Related chairs are exhibited at the Metropolitan Museum of Art and another in a private collection.

Deacon John Jacobs beakers (1795) – unsold

Another pair of silver beakers was donated to the "Church of Christ" in accordance with the will of Deacon John Jacobs. Engraved on the beakers is "The gift of Deacon John Jacobs to the Church of Christ in Cohasset." The beakers has the name "Revere" scratched tantalizingly underneath each one (estimated value $20,000 to $40,000).

Deacon Uriah Lincoln beakers (1821) – unsold

The lowest valued set of beakers0 ($6000 to $9000) were donated to the church by Deacon Uriah Lincoln and created by Nathan Hobbs in 1821. According to "Geneologies of the Families of Cohasset, Mass.," Lincoln was a deacon of the church and a man of prominence in town affairs. He served as Town Clerk, town moderator and Selectman during the 1790s and early 1800s.

Rebecca Tower beakers (1843) – unsold

Valued at $8,000 to $12,000, the Rebecca Tower beakers were donated to the church in 1843. Rebecca Tower was the wife of prominent Cohasset man, Captain Levi Tower. She is also the younger sister of Susanna Lewis who also donated beakers.

Rotary quietly helps those in need

Roche joined shortly after she moved to Cohasset in 2005 and credits the organization with giving her an outlet to serve and a network of friends. An active member of the Quincy Lions Club before she moved to Cohasset, she sought out the Rotary Club as a means for community service. Members of Cohasset Rotary often meet with other local Rotarian groups to network and work on larger issues.

"I like being able to give back to the community…it's a big joke that people in Cohasset don't need things, but there are a lot of needs in Cohasset, especially in these tough economic times," said Roche.

The Cohasset Rotary Club is part of the International Rotary Club, which is a volunteer organization with over 32,000 clubs in over 200 countries and geographical areas. The organization initiates humanitarian programs that address today's challenging issues, such as hunger, poverty, and illiteracy. Internationally, the Rotary Club strives to eradicate polio and provide clean water to third world countries, both endeavors supported by the Cohasset club. Rotary clubs are non-religious, non-governmental, and open to every race, culture, and creed.

The Rotary motto is "Service Above Self" and Roche said a civic-minded person is required to be a member.

"We want people who are looking for a way to give back to the community," said Roche. Cohasset Rotary meets every Monday night at the Lightkeepers' Residence. Each week, there is dinner and a guest speaker.

Residents know the Cohasset Rotary Club from its two high profile fundraisers — the annual Road Race By The Sea (currently gearing up for its 33rd year) and the ever-handy Cohasset phonebook.

Those efforts fund the Rotary's charitable efforts from sending a dentist to Cambodia to help children with cleft lips, to supporting the Appalachia Service Project to contributing to local projects like the Beechwood Ballpark and Veteran's Memorial Park. The Rotary Club also awards college scholarships to Cohasset High seniors. Since their inception in town, the Rotary Club has given about $500,000 worth of scholarships.

If you are interested in learning more about Rotary and what they do, members meet for dinner every Monday evening at 6:15p.m. at the Lightkeepers' Residence. To attend, contact a Rotary member. Jean Roche can be reached a: jeanroche@comcast.net.

Stormwater has marching orders

Advisory committee has charge, needs members

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

At long last, stormwater issues that plague the town have one place to be heard. On Monday night, the Board of Selectmen approved the charge and composition of what is now called the Stormwater Advisory Committee.

The decision comes after several drafts that took into account many discussions between the Selectmen and stormwater committee members over the past six months.

The result is an advisory committee devoted to stormwater issues from public education to working with affected residents to recommending capital expenditures for stormwater remediation to reviewing reports for the EPA.

Several small edits were made to the document as the last surviving member of the stormwater committee, Sarah Charron, and the Selectmen hammered through the one page document.

The result is an advisory committee devoted to stormwater issues...

The bulk of the conversation centered on that would be a part of the committee. Ultimately, the committee's composition will be five members with three-year terms appointed by the Board of Selectmen. Preference will be given to members of other relevant committees who want to be a part of the Stormwater Advisory Committee. Citizens at large with relevant professional qualifications including licensed professional engineers in hydrological or environmental specialties, architects and attorneys specializing in environmental law.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he would like to see a member of the DPW and the Conservation Commission be permanent members of the stormwater committee.

"Fundamentally I don't believe a committee should be created without having the knowledge," said Dormitzer.

However, Town Manager Bill Griffin said he would rather have town employees serve as liaisons and offer advice when needed.

"I'm not an advocate for department heads to be members of committees," said Griffin.

The Board of Selectmen made plans to discuss a review date for the stormwater advisory committee and other selectmen-appointed boards to ensure their charges are current and relevant.

Citizens interested in joining the Stormwater Advisory Committee should send a letter of interest to the Town Manager's Office at Town Hall (41 Highland Ave.).

Engine equipped with ALS

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"This is a big advance for this department at little cost to the town."
— Fire Chief Robert Silvia

This past Monday (Jan. 26) the Cohasset Fire Department received a temporary permit from the State Office of Emergency Medical Service to run Engine 3 as a front-line, Class V, advanced life support ambulance, Chief Robert Silvia said.

The engine is a non-transport ambulance that can deliver immediate ALS (advanced life support) while waiting for a mutual aid ambulance, Silvia said. The engine carries ALS equipment such as a heart monitor and drugs.

Silvia explained that when the Cohasset ambulance is on a call – it can take up to 15 minutes for a mutual aid ambulance to arrive. With Engine 3 equipped to provide ALS, help can be provided almost immediately. Mutual aid is assistance provided by area towns.

"This is a big advance for this department at little cost to the town," Silvia said. He said Engine 3 can be manned with current staffing and the ALS, which it can provide, will be available on most shifts. Currently the fire department has 15 paramedics on staff.

The cost includes $1200 for the state license and money to purchase the medical equipment. The engine cabinet, which holds the drugs, had to be reworked a minimal cost, Silvia said.

He expects the temporary license to become permanent once the state inspector certifies that the Engine has met all the criteria.

The ALS service was put in place last Monday.

"We are very excited about being able to provide this service," Silvia said. "It is the next best thing to running an ambulance."

Fiscal 2010: State aid cut 7.5 percent

Griffin has projected a 33.9 percent cut in lottery aid and a 28.55 percent in additional assistance. Other smaller state aid accounts came in more or less as Griffin predicted.

Overall, Cohasset under the Governor's plan will receive $2,285,606, a decrease of 7.46 percent over last year's numbers.

There are other budget issues that are more immediate. Last week, Patrick announced his mid-year budget cuts to local aid. A massive predicated shortfall at the state level necessitates trimming $128 million from the local aid.

Cohasset is bracing for $62,000 budget cut for the current fiscal year, which ends June 30.

The cuts will be made in two categories of state aid: lottery and additional assistance. Cohasset had expected to receive approximately $630,000 from those two categories. Now, the town, along with towns across the state, is facing a 9.74 percent cut in the number they expected. The result is a cut of $62,000 from this fiscal year, which is more than halfway over.

Governor Deval Patrick was given authority by the state legislature to make these emergency mid-year budget cuts. Patrick is protecting the state aid given to public schools, known as Chapter 70, in the mid-year cuts this year.

"While what came out might be regarded as 'good news,' we still have a significant budget problem that I will continue to try and address."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

Despite the bad news, Griffin tried to be optimistic about the situation at the Board of Selectmen meeting Monday night.

"It is something I think we can deal with," said Griffin. He put Cohasset loss in perspective: a fellow town manager in a bigger city is facing a $3.3 million mid-year cut.

Schools

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh was pleased with both announcements regarding no cuts in Chapter 70 state aid for this year and level funding for school aid in fiscal 2010. However, she cautioned there are still uncertainties that will continue to be firmed up as the budget moves through the process at the state level — and even at the federal level.

"I think it was a campaign promise we hoped (Patrick) would be able to fulfill," said Walsh.

There are still multiple unknowns in the budget. Other school aid accounts like circuit breaker for out of district special education and various department of education grants are still to be determined for both this year and next. It might be a few months before Walsh knows for sure.

Much of Patrick's proposed budget, particularly his promise to level fund Chapter 70, depends on monies from a federal stimulus package currently making its way through Congress, Walsh said.

"We'll be watching the stimulus package and how it will impact the state budget and trickle down to the cities and towns," said Walsh.

Walsh is not expecting current year cuts from grants or circuit breaker, but is not completely counting it out. Cohasset has yet to receive its fourth quarter circuit breaker allocation.

On the local level, there are still some unknowns as far as expenses as well. School administration is in the midst of negotiating four union contracts, including the teachers' union. Walsh is hoping to come to an agreement before bringing the budget to Town Meeting.

Fire department rescues injured 'sledder'

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"We had to bring the equipment to him to extricate him out of there."
— Fire Chief Robert Silvia

A Scituate teenager sledding down the "back side" of the hill at the old Cohasset Heights Landfill off Crocker Lane, which is off Route 3A, had to be rescued by the Cohasset Fire Department after injuring his leg.

The call came into the dispatch center at 5:14 p.m. on Thursday (Jan. 22).

Both police, who assisted at the scene, and firefighters responded.

"He could not walk or move," Fire Chief Robert Silvia said about the victim. Silvia explained that fire apparatus could not drive within a quarter to a half-mile of the victim because of no access and no roads. The trucks had to park on the front side of the hill and firefighters had to walk down the slope and "package him up," Silvia said.

"We had to bring the equipment to him to extricate him out of there," he said.

The fire department used a Stokes basket to load the boy up and then used a rope system to pull him up the hill and carry him to an ambulance. He was conscious and talking, Silvia said. (A Stokes basket has sides and can be used where there are obstacles).

The boy was sledding with a friend and two adults, one of whom called from a cell phone for help.

Silvia said the call came in near the change of shift so there were extra people on duty. Eight people responded not counting police officers.

The hill is private property and is not a sledding area.

Silvia said people should check out an area before they go sledding.

"Check it out and see if there are any obstructions and dangers," he said.

Portion of Jerusalem Road closed

The work to stabilize a weakened wall on Jerusalem Road began this week. As a result, Jerusalem Road from Steep Rock Way to Bow Street is closed to through traffic. The road was shut down Monday, Jan. 26 and will continue to be closed for an estimated period of one month.

Beach Street and Forest Avenue are the recommended detour roads.

The $270,000 project was approved by Special Town Meeting last November. The construction will reinforce and otherwise improve an existing retaining wall along Jerusalem Road. During the course of the Little Harbor water and sewer project, a portion of the wall collapsed. The sewer project contractor to equal or better condition repaired the collapsed portion; however, the road still did not meet current design standards. The engineering will provide reinforcing of the wall and allow some offsetting of traffic to address pre-existing deficiencies. A guardrail and walkway are also included in the design. (For more see this week's Making Tracks.)

Town Census for 2009

The Town Census for 2009 is being mailed each household. Information obtained from the census is used to prepare the street list, annual registry of voters, school list, dog owner list and jury list. It also establishes eligibility for resident's tuition at state colleges, for veteran reimbursement, for senior citizen programs and other benefits. The census provides information to various departments throughout the town.

Dog forms are on a tear-off portion of the census forms. The licenses are valid through Dec. 31, 2009. Dog forms need to be returned as soon as possible with a current rabies certificate although residents may have recently renewed a 2008 license.

If a census was not received, call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100.

SHADOW?

Hello Cohasset, how is everyone doing? I cannot believe that Monday is Ground Hogs Day, will he see his shadow or not? Time certainly goes by fast as we get a little bit older, that is for sure. I want to send out an apology to everyone who tried to send me information last week based on the email address at the end of the column. The correct address is aroundtowncohasset@yahoo.com, not @comcast.net. Sorry about that. There are a number of items to talk about and have you read about this week so here we go, on with the news.

OLYMPIANS

Be on the lookout this week for Jessica MacDonald and wish her good luck as she leaves Feb. 5th to compete in the Special Olympics World Winter Games in Boise, Idaho. Jessica will be one of two Alpine skiers representing Massachusetts. The other skier is Brian Cahill of Duxbury. Both Brian and Jessica train with the South Shore Mariners team based in Scituate.

Athletes from 107 countries will compete in Alpine and Nordic Skiing, Speed and Figure Skating, Snowboarding, Snowshoeing, and Floor Hockey. Ten Special Olympics athletes from Massachusetts will join the USA delegation of 312 competitors in the total of over 2500 participants in Idaho for the ten-day event.

Good luck, Jessie And Brian! Everyone who knows you wish you all the best and want you both to know how proud your towns are of you both! Let us know how it goes!

POST PROM

The next Post Prom Committee meeting is scheduled for Thursday Feb. 5 at 7 p.m. in the high school library. Plans are really starting to come together and it would be so great to have any and all of the parents involved in a very exciting time in your child's life. Come on to the school next week and help plan for this great event. Hope to see you there!

OUR WORLD

The next session of programs and classes being held at the Our World Museum in Cohasset will begin the week after February Vacation with programs like ArtClub for Kids, Musical Magic, Science and Nature, Fitness Fun with Mr. Dykas, and Friday Frolics for ages 2 and up.

Also, every Friday night is Creative Nite in Our World where families can bring their kiddos while enjoying a grown up night out and about and the kids can make dinner, arts and crafts, fun and music and so much more. A February Vacation Program is being run from Tuesday-Friday for ages 2-10 and the Summer Sizzler Camp program will be released next week and begins the first week in June. For more information, call 781-923-1473 or send an email to info@ourworldcgdm.org. You can also check out the website at www.ourworldcgdm.org.

OLIVER

Here is some news about a great family event. With the help of a professional production crew and adult actors, Inly School in Scituate will present the musical OLIVER! the weekend of Feb. 6, 7 and 8.

The show is a family affair for several Cohasset residents: Tucker Antico plays the lead of Oliver, Ashley Antico is an orphan, and their dad Paul Antico plays Mr. Bumble; Gigi Meehan plays Mrs. Sowerberry and Tucker Meehan is a pick-pocket in Fagin's gang.

Tania Keeble sings in the adult ensemble, while her son Henry Snyder is an orphan. Other Cohasset cast members include Kelsey Behenna, Callie DiModica, and Leanne Hayden (all as orphans), John Lengyel as the Knife Grinder, and David Game as Mr. Brownlow. there will be two evening shows and two matinees: Friday, Feb. 6, at 7:30 p.m.; Saturday, Feb. 7, at 2 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.; and Sunday, Feb. 8, at 2 p.m. To purchase tickets ($25 each), call 781-545-5544 ext. 456 or email tickets@inlyschool.org.

Call early for best seats! For more details, visit the News & Events page at www.inlyschool.org.

INAUGURATION

Kate Hurtig, daughter of Carl and Deanna Hurtig of Saginaw, Mich., granddaughter of Carl and Martha Hurtig of Cohasset, performed at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts celebrating the Inauguration of President Obama, last week. Kate, 12, is in the 7th grade at Saginaw Arts and Science Academy. She and three other students from her school were asked to join the Detroit Theatre for the Dramatic Arts production of "Obama," a Children's Fairy Tale. This is an original production by Gregory Gray, who founded the Detroit Theatre in 1985. This was even more special as Deanna and Kate were spotted on TV out of 1-1/2 million people waving at one of the cameras, amazing! Kate's dad graduated from CHS and still connects with many friends from here in town. Thank you Kate and family for sharing this news with us all. What a memory for you to have forever!

HOCKEY BOOSTERS

Here is something for everyone in town to read and attend to get out of the mid-winter blues! The Cohasset Hockey Boosters is holding a Winter Extravaganza Warm Up, their 3rd Annual Dance with all proceeds go to support the CHS Hockey Boosters. The dance will be held at the Red Lion Inn in Cohasset Village on Friday night, Feb. 6th from 8 pm to midnight. The musical entertainment will be performed by The Gratefuls for everyone to moove and groove to.

There will be cash prizes, a Silent Auction and everyone will be able to witness the "Mystery Event!"

Admission for this great night of fun is $20 per person and will include Hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar will be available for all. For more information call Lisa Evans at 781-383-2457 or Ann Whitney at 781-383-3139.

SPECIAL THANKS

The Social Service League would like to thank its faithful donors for being able to "find them" at the correct address of 790 Chief Justice Highway. Due to an error made by the printer, the League's old address was printed on the return envelopes for its annual appeal, therefore creating a lot of havoc with many donations being returned back to their senders. Many persevered and made sure that your donations were able to reach the League. It is with all of your help that the League is able to provide those most needed social services to surrounding communities….Many thanks again.

SCI-COH BOARD

The Scituate Cohasset Youth Football & Cheerleading organization is having an open meeting on Wednesday Feb. 11 at 7pm at the Scituate Public Library. All interested parties are encouraged to attend this meeting and petition for a position on the Board of Directors. The Sci-Coh Board is actively seeking new members to help manage the organization for the Fall 2009 season and into the future. Contact any current board member for information through our website www.scicohfootball.com

SIGNUPS

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association will hold its annual registration for the upcoming baseball and softball season through Feb. 10. Visit www.CYBSA.net_to register online. Please direct any question regarding registration to info@cybsa.net or call Erik Golz at 617-230-2559.

That is all the news for this week Cohasset. Please send in any news to me no later than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm.

Cohasset Town Counsel Paul DeRensis

DeRensis elected to MMA board

Cohasset Town Counsel Paul DeRensis was elected unanimously by of selectmen across the state as a member of the Massachusetts Municipal Association ("MMA") Board of Directors and as "District Two Representative" of the Massachusetts Selectmen's Association to represent selectmen of Middlesex and Essex Counties on Jan. 24 at the MMA Annual Convention at the Hynes Convention Center in Boston.

Attending were the governor, selectmen, mayors, managers, councilors and finance committee members from cities and towns throughout the Commonwealth.

The MMA is a non-profit, non-partisan association of city and town officials, and the various cities and towns elect its Board. DeRensis' election was based on one vote per municipality. DeRensis' term of office for both spokesman for Middlesex County and Essex County selectmen and as member of the MMA Board is for two years.

As representative of Middlesex and Essex Selectmen, and as a member of the MMA Board of Directors, DeRensis looks forward to doing all that can be done to ease the burdens on local government and to make life better for citizens across the state on the local governmental level.

'Freedom' is Reads Together theme

Town-wide program kicks off

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Have you read "New Boy" or "A Slave No More?" Both are the book selections for Cohasset Reads Together (CRT), our community wide reading program, presented by the Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. From Jan. 17 through Feb. 27 there are programming events taking place at the library that support this year's theme of "Cohasset Reads Freedom." The Trustees, Friends, and Staff of the Paul Pratt Memorial library want to bring these books to the forefront of our community and evoke conversations about freedom and its direct ties to Cohasset — a theme which is especially relevant at a time when we have just elected our first African American President. All local book clubs, Cohasset residents and other organizations are encouraged to read the selections and join in the community-wide conversation.

The CRT program kicked off at the Cohasset Diversity Committee's Annual Martin Luther King Day Pancake Breakfast on Jan. 17. An audience of 150 enjoyed a delicious breakfast and was then treated to a heartfelt talk by author Judge Julian Houston, a retired justice of the Superior Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and author of "New Boy."

"New Boy" is historical fiction — a thinly veiled memoir of the author's own experiences as an African American adolescent of the 1950s. Judge Houston spoke of his book, and also of the manuscript of a former slave, John Washington, which had been passed down to him through his mother. That slave, Washington, came to live out the last five years of his life right here in Cohasset, Mass. where he lived with his son on North Main Street. Washington is buried in Cohasset.

This manuscript of Judge Houston's is one of the two that comprise — "A Slave No More" by David Blight. "A Slave No More" is in effect a memoir — the story of two slaves who made their break for freedom during the chaos of the Civil War. Professor Blight will speak at the Cohasset High School on Feb. 12 at 7 p.m. (Abraham Lincoln's 200th birthday). What better way to commemorate the occasion than listening to Prof. Blight speak of the incredible journey of two men who went from slavery to freedom and how one of them was led to this small New England town.

The Cohasset PSO Read-a-thon begins on Feb. 6 and will once again be part of this community program. The books in K-5 were selected for their relevance to the theme Freedom Quilts; grades K & 1 will read "Barefoot: Escape on the Underground Railroad," by Pamela Duncan Edwards and for grades 2-5, "Sweet Clara and the Freedom Quilt," by Deborah Hopkinson.

Thanks to the generosity of the Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial library which sponsors the event, the library is able to purchase a small amount of books for the school libraries and Cohasset senior center. Special thanks to Buttonwood Books and Goodwin Graphics for their generous support of the program since its inception in 2006.

Adult and children's books are available at the library and for purchase at Buttonwood Books. Visit:cohassetlibrary.org for an event schedule.

Winter wonders

The way a crow
Shook down on me
The dust of snow
From a hemlock tree
Has given my heart
A change of mood
And saved some part
Of a day I had rued.
*- Robert Frost

Although it may be hard to believe today, as we are still in the midst of winter, before we know it recent snows will soon melt into memory and spring will be in the air.

Before winter fades — and indeed, it will — we hope our readers will take time this season to appreciate the splendor of it all. At times, Cohasset, covered in blankets of snow, has never been more beautiful.

Fur trees draped in white around town surely give the artist within us pause. The sight of youngsters rolling huge snowballs into snowmen or cross-country skiers at Wompatuck State Park remind us it's possible to love winter.

With the spate of snowstorms this season, we'll admit to joining in the shopping panic at the grocery store before the first blizzard hit in December, buying extra windshield-wiper fluid, and being so grateful we have a heavy-duty snow blower.

We've cursed the inconvenience of snow-filled sidewalks, and have suffered from an occasional bout of cabin fever.

This may turn out to be the snowiest winter in years. (In the winter of 1995-96 the area received more than 100 inches of snow). And according to weather experts, the region has endured consecutive days of below normal temperatures. Towns, like Cohasset, have depleted their snow removal budgets and with even more snow arriving this week, spring still seems like an eternity away.

But there is hope as we head into February and then March. After all, how much longer can Old Man Winter last? Isn't he running out of steam, or should we say snow?

Although snowdrops are not yet popping through the ground and there is definitely no whiff of spring in the air — there will be sunny, winter days when temperatures soar into the 40s.

Patience and a sense of humor are called for as we endure more winter weather.

Even if we're hit with yet another storm or two or three, we'll hold up. More bread and milk will be delivered to the shops, the mail will get through, and streets will be passable again.

While winter holds on, take a walk outside and look around. Try to appreciate what nature has provided: an old-fashioned snowy winter. Chat with your neighbor, lend a hand with your shovel, slow down.

Remember spring will come. Then surely some hot, humid weeks will follow in summer and we'll be yearning for fall.

"Weird, isn't it? Somehow in the dead of winter when its 40 below, so cold your words just freeze in the air, you think you'll never hear a robin's song again or see a blossom on a cherry tree, when one day you wake up and bingo, light coming through the mini blinds is softened with a tick of rose and the cold morning air has lost its bite. It's spring once again, the streets are paved with mud and the hills are alive with the sound of mosquitoes." - Diane Froloy and Andrew Schneider, Northern Exposure, Mud and Blood, 1993.

Bottle campaign talk rescheduled

The Cohasset Political Forum will hold its next program on Wednesday, Feb. 4 at 7 pm at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. This program was postponed from Jan. 28 due to weather concerns.

A team of organizers from Corporate Accountability International's "Think Outside the Bottle Campaign" will stage an interactive training on ways to challenge the corporate control of water in Massachusetts.

While corporations like Coke, Pepsi and Nestlé are changing the way we think about water and turning it into a profit-driven commodity, Corporate Accountability International has helped move 1,000 mayors to resolve to end city spending on bottled water. Kicking the bottled water habit is good for our pocket books, the environment, and our communities. Come join us to learn more.

HEALTH NOTES

Some stats on Cohasset smokers

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Department of Public Health has recently come up with an interesting fact sheet about cigarette smoking. The information is specific to Cohasset and compares the town with all others in the state as well as the State in general. It seems that an estimated 469 smokers live in Cohasset The smoking rate for adults in Cohasset is 9.0 percent; 50 percent lower than the overall rate of 18.1 percent statewide. The rate of smoking during pregnancy in Cohasset is 87 percent lower than the overall Massachusetts: 1.0 percent in Cohasset vs. 7.9 percent statewide.

Health Effects of Smoking: The rate of hospitalizations for lung cancer is not significantly different among females in Cohasset compared to the state of Massachusetts. The rate of hospitalizations for lung cancer is 24 percent higher among males in Cohasset compared to the State.

Illegal Tobacco Sales to Minors: The rate of illegal sales to minors (those under age 18) is 60 percent lower in Cohasset (4.2 percent) than the rest of Massachusetts (10.3 percent) based on data from fiscal 2007.

Try-TO-STOP Quitline: Health care providers referred 3 smokers living in Cohasset to the QuitWorks program for telephone counseling. In addition, two people from Cohasset called the TRY-TO-STOP quitline between fiscal 2004 and 2007 for help to quit smoking.

The smoking rate for adults in Cohasset is 9.0 percent; 50 percent lower than the overall rate of 18.1 percent statewide.

MassHealth Tobacco Cessation Benefit: Two MassHealth members living in Cohasset used the tobacco cessation benefit (pharmacotherapy) in fiscal 2007. An estimated 3.8 percent of MassHealth smokers who live in Cohasset used the cessation benefit compared to 10.3 percent statewide.

As has always been the case, affluence and education are primary factors in the quality of health care. And in order to function efficiently, the medical profession like everyone else has to incorporate the latest tools available. Such a need represents a challenge to each of us.

Personal Health Data: Perhaps the greatest problem we will face will be to begin to maintain health records electronically. A major component of this activity will be for everyone to maintain his own health dossier. Actually, a health data base listing vaccinations, hospital visits, visits to the doctor; symptoms and results should be a part of anyone's personal health file of information, and yet, how many of us have an up to date file covering our health experiences of a type that would help practitioners solve any problems we may be having?

When one goes into a modern doctor's office, generally he is asked to fill out a questionaire which varies as to completeness. Details of smoking experience should be there as well as details about your medical experience — enough information for a practitioner to infer the best treatment for the ailment at hand. It would be very useful for such material to be emailed to the doctor before your visit so he could compare his records with yours.

The vista of health problems is changing. There are more trace contaminants in our environment, to the point that birth statistics are being altered as well as their cure. Other changes in our environment as well as life style may demand a different approach to healing and patient care

The Mass Dept of Public Health (MADPH) maintains and constantly updates much material about us as we relate to our peers, like the smoking information listed above. Such information is useful in planning disease control strategies and allocation of healthcare resources, but in the last analysis it's up to you to maintain the latest health information about yourself.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Wind turbine hearing to be postponed

The next public hearing on the Cohasset Heights wind turbine has been postponed to Monday, Feb. 23.

As of Tuesday morning, the Planning Board office had yet to receive any new submitted data and information from the applicant. The board's consultants would not have had ample time to review the data by the scheduled public hearing date this coming Monday, Feb. 2. According to Planning Board administrator Jo-Ann Pilczak, the postponement to Feb. 23 is to allow the applicant more time to submit the new data and information with adequate time for the consultants to review.

At the Planning Board meeting on Monday, Feb. 2 there will be no discussion of the wind turbine project. The Planning Board will vote to postpone the hearing until Feb. 23 at that time.

Any questions, please contact the Planning Board office at 781-383-3517.

Police complaint

During the public comment period, resident Paul Laugelle came forth to discuss what he said were ongoing threats and harassment made against him by a member of the police department.

"I don't know why nothing is being done," said Laugelle.

Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr said he was aware of the issue and that the town is addressing it.

"We will get a response to you…we take this very seriously and will take appropriate action," said Carr.

Selectman Karen Quigley said she was "stunned" and had no knowledge of the situation.

In an interview Wednesday, Chief James Hussey said he met with Paul Laugelle and listened to his concerns.

"I reviewed Laugelle's allegations and I am confident that no harassment occurred," Hussey said.

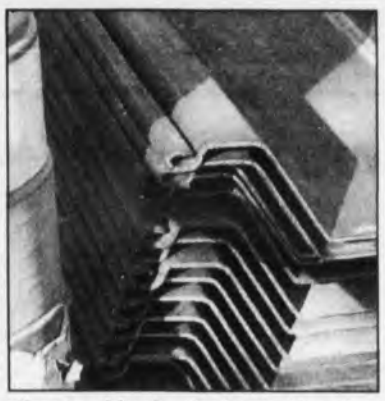
Wall stabilization work interesting

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

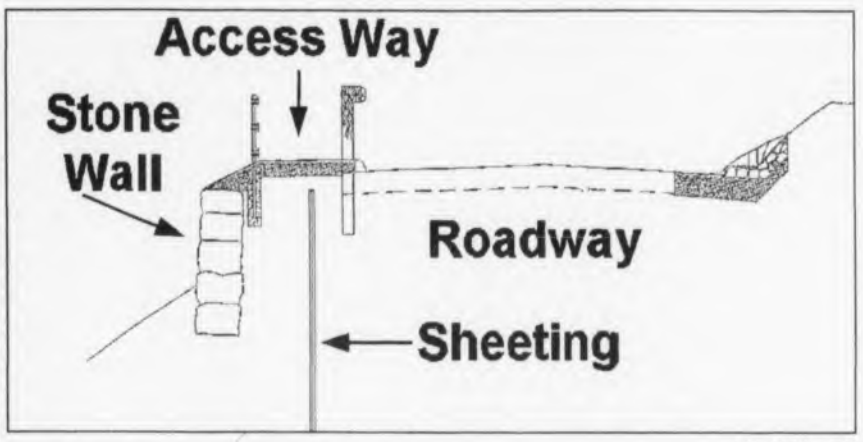


Jerusalem Road and the Wall – By now you probably noticed that Jerusalem Road between Steep Rocks and Bow Street is closed to through traffic. This closure is expected to last for about a month. The detour routes available for travel from the Jerusalem/Atlantic shore area to the center of town are limited to Forest Avenue, Beach Street, or Elm to Atlantic.

The construction technique that is being used to stabilize the wall is quite interesting and we thought we'd take a bit of time to describe the work that is planned to be done. To assist in our explanation, a cross-section sketch of the roadway is shown for the purpose of illustration. (A cross section drawing is a drawing that shows what you would see if you made a slice vertically down through the road and the surrounding land and made a sketch of what you saw.) Thus, a cross-section shows the road, the wall and the under-the-road areas all in profile.

As you look at the cross-section, the stonewall is shown to the lower left, above which is a new sidewalk. Moving to the right is the existing paving and finally the roadway gutter to the far right. With the construction work that took place and the rains that followed immediately after construction, the soil behind the wall became water saturated and became squishy. When heavy trucks drove over the squishy soil it oozed out and pushed two sections of the stonewall outward collapsing them. The wall stones were put back into place where they had collapsed and the soil has dried out to some degree, but the absolute safety of the road near the stonewall could not be determined by engineers. The only way the road could be made safe was to modify the road/wall system. Until these modifications could be made, traffic was kept away from the unstable part of the road. That is why traffic was confined to one lane, away from the wall-side of the road.

The object of this new construction activity is to add support to the soil by driving sheeting down in a vertical direction over the full length of the unstable wall. So, what is sheeting? Sheeting is a corrugated heavy steel sheet that is designed so that each piece interlocks to the adjacent pieces forming a solid wall. Included photos show sheeting stacked up at the job site and a close up of the edge detail that allows each sheet to interlock to its neighbors.



Each piece of sheeting is 16 feet long and will be driven into the ground. In this case a very interesting vibratory method will be used to drive the sheeting. This means that rather than pound the sheeting into the ground with a hammer-like pounding action, a large-sized vibrator will be used to vibrate the sheeting at a high frequency in the vertical direction causing the sheeting to slide into the ground. No more pound, pound, pound.

Close up of the sheeting interlocking edges.

Sheeting stored on Jerusalem Road.

Cross-sectional view of Jerusalem Road work area.

Vibratory pile hammers are powered by hydraulic motors, and designed in such a way that there are no horizontal vibrations and only vertical (up and down) vibrations that are transmitted into the sheeting. The vibratory pile driving machine is lifted and positioned over the pile by means of an excavator or crane, and is fastened to the pile by a clamp and/or bolts. Vibratory pile drivers are often chosen to mitigate noise, as when the construction is very close to residence or office buildings. Vibratory hammers are available with several different vibration rates, ranging from about 1200 vibrations per minute to about 2400 vibrations per minute. Generally, the vibration rate is adjustable from about 1000 vibrations per minute up to as high as 2400 vibrations per minute. The actual vibration rate is chosen based on the type of soils and actual experience. If all goes well, the sheeting should be driven into the ground like a hot knife through butter.

One other feature is evident from the cross-section view of the roadway. There will be a new pedestrian access way added to the wall-side of the road. We can't officially call it a sidewalk because it will be narrower than that required for an "official" sidewalk due to space constraints. But, it will create a safe pedestrian pathway for the length of the road where the new construction is taking place. Of necessity, there will be a guardrail to separate the cars from the pedestrians and a railing at the edge of the wall as a further safety measure for pedestrians. We'll keep you posted as this interesting and critical project progresses.

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

I'm rerunning a previously enjoyed article this week because if I don't, it will go bad. Also, my other job has me bogged down a bit at the moment, and it's this other job that brings in what we used to call "the Benjamins" in the old economy.

Speaking of which I'll give you a little money-stretching tip I use every time I run out of stick deodorant. Simply turn the dial and let the underarm-shaped plastic base pop out of the case. Then just hold it in your fingers as you rub deodorant essence under your arm. You can do this for up to a week before the piece of plastic begins to smell more like B.O. than Irish Spring. That's when you know it's time to bite the bullet and use your wife's Soft & Dri.

One of the comforts of working for a huge multinational corporation is knowing you're unlikely to be the biggest moron in the company. My suspicions are confirmed every year at this time when I'm required to certify that I understand and comply with our Business Conduct Guidelines. The BCGs are ethical rules of thumb so obvious to any human who has lived above ground for the last 10 years, the mere fact the company feels obligated to remind us of them is proof it has a secret monkey division hidden somewhere, probably in charge of drafting our Business Conduct Guidelines.

Certifying compliance with the BCGs involves taking a short on-line course. It's a lot like watching a film in science class. You can sleep through 90 percent of it and get exactly the same educational benefit as the alert girl taking notes in the desk to your left. The multi-media presentation consists of a series of scenarios. First, bad actors act out the Wrong Way to behave in a certain situation. For instance a man playing a sales manager might walk into the cubicle of a female subordinate, compliment her on her "nice gams", and then throw feces at her. A narrator then helpfully explains, to those of us who didn't quite pick up on which actions were inappropriate, what exactly went wrong. "Tom's focus on Leslie's appearance was disrespectful," he'll say in a slow, deliberate tone. Then the two actors will play the scene again to show the Right Way, with Tom restricting his conversation to business matters at hand while Leslie pelts him with feces.

I never actually applied to work at this company. They sent me a letter one day telling me I worked for them and I didn't really feel like arguing. What happened was, 10 years ago I worked for a medium-size software company. Things were going along great until our CEO, who later became the inspiration for the concept of Business Conduct Guidelines, tried to fool Wall Street into thinking our revenue was a billion dollars when in fact we had made less than a hundred dollars, even counting our Christmas tips. The company imploded, then sank, then hit bottom and exploded. It then bobbed to the surface, struck a mine, sank again, collapsed in on itself and became a white dwarf. Laughing in the wings and watching the whole fiasco was one of our largest competitors, who had a well-earned reputation for tight-fistedness. Once our company had cooled and shrunk a bit further into a neutron star, they felt we were just about ready to be acquired. Fortunately for us they waited only another four years before making their move. By then we were a singularity so I don't know how on earth they found us, but they did.

Six years later it still feels odd to be such a small cog in the wheel. Our earnings report reads like a speech from the U.S. treasury secretary. "Overall revenue grew from 4.23 octillion dollars for fiscal 2005 to 1.85 nonillion dollars this year. We remain hopeful that our stock price will reflect these results once investors are convinced that 'octillion' and 'nonillion' are real mathematical terms."

You might think a company this wealthy would live extravagantly, but you wouldn't believe how frugal this operation is. I used to go on boondoggles all over the world with my previous company — you know, the one with all the financial problems — and now I have to justify every three-martini lunch I expense. In truth I admire how well they keep costs down, because I'm a big fan of that at home. At this time of year one of my favorite pastimes is regulating the heat in various rooms. We have seven zones in our house and I'm on top of every one at all times. No one upstairs at the moment? Those three zones go off, click click click. An hour till bedtime? All the downstairs zones go off. Occasionally I'll forget to turn a zone on, but I pride myself on never forgetting to turn one off. My kids call our house "The Penguin Petting Zoo", but I just pull my wool turtleneck up over my ears and continue my rounds.

I'm so good at it that I've become a legend at the oil company. They've got formulas and computer programs running day and night down there, trying to figure out how it is that every time they come to our house expecting to deliver 180 gallons of oil, we only need ten. "How do you do it Mr. Lengyel?" they ask. "You got your own derrick out back?" "Sorry to disappoint you boys!" I call from the window. And we all have a good laugh. They drive back and adjust their models and restart the programs, but it only spurs me on to greater heights of frugality.

This year my company began a program where they pay cash bonuses for good cost-cutting suggestions. So why didn't I pass mine along and spend the money on fuel to keep my family warm? Well, I have to be honest. I'd miss the penguins.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset, on a property that for some reason seems to lose one old-growth tree every winter.

LIBRARY CORNER

Don't miss 'To Kill a Mockingbird' on Feb. 6

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348.

Movie Matinee – The library will show the award-winning film "To Kill a Mockingbird" at 11 a.m., on Friday, Feb. 6. Don't miss this classic film starring Gregory Peck and Mary Badham. Free admission and light refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Author Visit – David Blight will be at Cohasset High School auditorium, 143 Pond St., at 7 p.m., on Thursday, Feb. 12. His book, "A Slave No More," has been selected as one of the books for the library's town-wide reading initiative, Cohasset Reads Together. "A Slave No More," in part, focuses on the memoir of former slave John Washington, who eventually settled in Cohasset. Learn more about Cohasset's history and the story of emancipation fro more of the nation's foremost authorities on the U.S. Civil War and its legacy. Pick up free tickets at the library.

Memoir Writing Workshop, Part II – Attend a free memoir writing workshop with Deb Kurliecz at 2 p.m., on Friday, Feb. 13. Those who missed Part I will still be able to gain an understanding of how to organize ideas and thoughts and get started writing a memoir. Call the library to register for this free workshop. Sponsored by the Friends of the Library for Cohasset Reads Together.

Independent Movie Night – The library will show the independent film "The Trap" at 6 p.m., on Thursday, Feb. 19. Free admission and refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

FOR CHILDREN

MamaSteph – Music will be performed for young children at 10:30 a.m., on Mondays, Feb. 2, 9 and 23. All ages and communities welcome. Sponsored by the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

Drop In Story Time – In the Story Room at 10:30 a.m., on Tuesdays, Feb. 3, 10, 17 and 24. Join others for big book adventures. All ages and communities welcome.

Cohasset Reads Together – The third annual town-wide reading program will continue through Feb. 27. Friends of Cohasset Library have provided copies of the book "Barefoot: Escape on the Underground Railroad" for all classrooms at the Joseph Osgood School, and copies of the book "Sweet Clara and the Freedom Quilt" for all classrooms at Deer Hill School. These books are also on display in the Children's Room at the library along with other materials that support the theme of "Freedom." Cohasset Reads Together also supports the annual PSO Read-A-Thon, which will begin on Friday, Feb. 13.

Chutzpah Hall of Fame

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

One of these days I'm going to establish a shrine for a certain type of creative personality, and call it the Chutzpah Hall of Fame. I've been watching them all year.

The idea came to me the other day when I read about Jeffrey Ely of Minnesota, who qualifies as the first entry in my hall.

Jeffrey struck and killed a miniature pinscher owned by the Munthe family and is now suing them for $1,100 to repair the damage to his Honda Civic.

Is that chutzpah or what?

I would also nominate Dr. Richard Batista of New York, who donated a kidney to his wife, Dawnell, back in 2001 and, now that they are getting a divorce, he is suing to get it back. Was it a gift or a loan? Knotty question, that.

John Singer, a Jewish New York man, is suing Centropa, a Jewish historical society, for "tremendous emotional pain and suffering" for quoting his mother as saying he had never been circumcised.

Ten atheists in Kentucky sued the Office of Homeland Security for the "breathtakingly unconstitutional" practice of thanking God for protecting the state from terrorists.

Anderson Alexander, a New York City detective, sued the city after he fell out of his chair and shot himself in the knee, claiming the chair was defective. Don't laugh. The city isn't. Andy won $4.5 million.

Patrick Albanese of Iowa lost the tip of his finger moving a Martha Stewart-branded chair and sued Martha for ending his careers as a hand model and magician.

Roberta Ritter of Cleveland sued Victoria's Secret claiming its Angels Secret Embrace and Very Sexy Extreme Me bras caused a rash that was "red-hot to the touch, burning and itching."

Steve Kaplan, a New York man, sued after he broke a tooth on an unpopped kernel of movie theater popcorn. Steve lost when Judge Matthew Porter ruled he should have known every box of popcorn contains at least one unpopped kernel.

William Halby, 77, of New York failed to convince a tax court judge that the $322,000 he deducted for prostitutes, pornography and sex toys were a medical necessity to battle depression.

Richard Cooey, a 267-pound inmate on death row in Ohio, sued to avoid execution, claiming his bulk lessened the effect of the anesthetic administered before the lethal injection and therefore was a cruel and unusual punishment.

Matthew Lincoln of Tennessee sued the Lakewind Church for $2.5 million for its failure to have someone catch him when he collapsed in religious ecstasy and struck his head on a cement floor.

Kelly DeBrocky sued the city of Norwalk, Conn. for $54 for a pair of new shoes for her son who ruined his old pair by stepping in dog excrement at the city aquarium. "Poop happens," said City Attorney Jeffrey Spahr.

Jeb Corliss sued the owners of the Empire State Building for $12 million claiming they defamed him when they restrained him from jumping off the observation deck in a parachute and charged him with reckless endangerment when there is no law against jumping off skyscrapers.

'Our Town' focuses on turbine opposition

This week on "Our Town," co-hosts, Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin, sit down with members of the Cohasset Wind Advisory Committee. Members, Conrad Langenhagen and Jeffrey Patterson, will speak on the current plan before the Cohasset Planning Board to erect two, 460-foot windmills on the Graham Waste site and the impacts they may have on the surrounding areas as well as the town as a whole.

Tune in starting Monday, at 9 p.m., or Tuesday or Thursday, at 9 p.m., all on Comcast Channel 10.

Art, fashion and networking

Cohasset got a little taste of Manhattan on Jan. 15, when over 100 professional women (and a few men), braved the cold to network at the South Shore Art Center, at an event hosted by the Downtown Women's Club – South Shore Chapter. Attendees enjoyed cocktails while viewing a pre-opening of the current exhibit, "Trees," a Gallery Artist Exhibition, juried by Emily Eveleth, and a fashion show put on by exhibition sponsor, Pink Tulip, and emceed by owner, Christine Nagle.

DWC-South Shore director and Duxbury resident, Paula Harris of WH Cornerstone Investments, was pleased with the turnout, especially on a cold night. "We always have an enthusiastic group of networkers at our monthly events, but tonight's turnout was even better than expected thanks to the collaboration between the SSAC, Pink Tulip and our other sponsors." The nights other sponsors included Cabot Cheese, The Chef's Table, and Lemon Lime Salon.

Following the Pink Tulip fashion show, Cohasset-resident Jennifer Willms, president of the SSAC, encouraged attendees to take classes and purchase artwork. DWC founder, Diane K. Danielson, mentioned how the DWC-South Shore Chapter is used as a model for the other DWC chapters around the country.

The next DWC-South Shore event will be held on Feb. 11 at the offices of William Raveis Real Estate, Hingham. For more information. visit www.DowntownWomensClub.com. The "Trees" exhibit will run at the SSAC through March 1.

Cohasset residents and business representatives in the crowd included: Kellie Lynch, Balance Studio; Lisa Hebert, Bella Aesthetics; Joanne Ilacqua, Adamo Day Spa; Christine Cunning, modeling for Pink Tulip; Dotty Remick, Cindy Kuppens, Caroline Sheehy, Claire Tinory, Lisa Brown, Diane Herth, Karen Hurd, and Bernadette Faulkner.

Selectmen deadlocked on Treat's Pond

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When Treat's Pond is on the Board of Selectmen's agenda it is going to be a long night. Monday night was no exception and the outcome not fruitful—nearly three hours of conversation left the Selectmen deadlocked on the issue.

The question on the table seemed simple enough: do the Selectmen support the Treat's Pond Army Corps of Engineers saltmarsh restoration project and, if so, which route should the pipe take? Yet, the issue, which has been on the Selectmen's plate and in the news since June 2007, does not have an easy answer.

The Board of Selectmen were split—two and two—on one of the two Army Corps project options and, without a preferred route, they could not get majority vote on supporting the project. (Selectman Ralph Dormitzer recused himself from discussions on Treat's Pond. He resides on Sandy Cove in proximity to Treat's Pond.) This leaves the project at a standstill, at least for a few more weeks.

"The project will not move forward until we pick a route," said Board of Selectmen chairman Ted Carr as the board discussed the complicated issues associated with the project. The next step will likely be a public meeting with the Army Corps to review the alternatives for the project.

Treat's Pond is located off Atlantic Ave. near Whitehead Road. Flooding issues have plagued the area since development uphill from Atlantic Ave. exacerbated stormwater runoff. The issue is important because the town has the opportunity to receive $1million in federal funds for the project, which though primarily designed as a saltmarsh restoration project, could have some effects on minimizing flooding. However, the project does involve a local match. It is estimated $600,000-plus would be needed from non-federal sources (town or state) to do the project.

During summer 2007, the Army Corps laid out several alternatives or routes for the Treat's Pond saltmarsh restoration project. They recommended two of the four options they identified. The Army Corps representatives said the two most viable options would be to install a large pipe from Treat's Pond to discharge at either the inner harbor (via Atlantic Avenue) or the outer harbor (via Whitehead Road and Whale Meadow). Taking no action or installing a box culvert at Sandy Cove were also looked at, but not recommended. Federal funding would not be provided for either of the not recommended options.

Carr was hoping to come to some resolution on the proposed project so it could be placed on the upcoming Town Meeting warrant and give citizens an opportunity to understand the issues surrounding the project and make an informed decision.

The Board of Selectmen heard from a handful of residents and concerned citizens speaking from varying ends of the opinion spectrum. Much of the discussion centered on the possible impact of freshwater on the inner harbor, which two of the Selectmen supported (Carr and Paul Carlson) and two opposed (Karen Quigley and Fred Koed).

The Selectmen received a letter from area lobstermen concerning their opposition to any addition of freshwater to the harbor. In the letter, they stated the addition of freshwater has already negatively impacted their ability to store the lobsters in the water as they wait for an optimal market price. The letter notes the viable commercial fishing fleet puts Cohasset Harbor on a priority list for dredging, which, in turn, allows recreational boating.

The lobstermens' concerns topped Koed's list of reasons not to allow an outfall to the harbor. Selectman Karen Quigley agreed.

"I take issue with the continued representation it is okay to put freshwater in to the harbor, it's okay to put a little more in," said Quigley, adding the project and its data was reminiscent of the previous efforts to help Jacob's Meadow that have actually exacerbated the issue.

Selectman Paul Carlson was not in agreement.

"I just don't think the amount of water is significant…There's just no other place for the water to go," said Carlson, adding transforming Treat's Pond into a healthy saltmarsh could actually benefit the health of the harbor.

The inner harbor route could also have another challenge. Preliminary engineering plans show the proposed inner harbor outfall somewhere between Peter Roy's property at 24 Atlantic Ave. and the Yacht Club. According to Roy's attorney Charlie Humphreys, if the town went that route they would be seeking indemnity to protect him from any damages occurred as a result.

More than a few residents called for a third-party environmental assessment for the project to determine if there would be negative impacts on the salinity and general health of the harbor. Others brought attention to successful local saltmarsh restoration projects. Still others called for protection of the harbor for both the lobstermen and the community at large.

"The problem I have is that no one sitting around this table is an engineer. It is very difficult to see how you would draw a conclusion…without compelling and specific evidence as to what would drive the decision in either direction," said Peter Brown of 38 Atlantic Ave. He encouraged the Selectmen to seek an environmental impact study to help the town make an informed decision. "I think the idea of a perfect choice…is probably not going to happen."

The cost of an environmental assessment for the project could be pricey—and Quigley felt this was not the time.

"As much as I love the harbor, we can't pay for an environmental study right now—we're laying people off," said Quigley. Town Manager Bill Griffin quickly added that it wouldn't stop snowing either.

Koed and Quigley wanted to look more closely at the Sandy Cove option where a drainage pipe currently exists and there has always been a connection between the two water bodies.

"I'm not convinced the Sandy Cove option was looked at as a solution not tied to saltmarsh restoration. The natural historic connection was through Sandy Cove…Here we are as men and women trying to re-engineer what's worked for centuries," said Quigley.

Koed said he wanted to be sure Sandy Cove was discounted as a solution for engineering obstacles, not political issues. "Unfortunately, politics have been involved in this from the very beginning and there's no way around it."

Dan Coughlin of Coughlin Environmental, the firm that recently completed the town's flood control master plan, said his firm did look at the Sandy Cove option as a way to alleviate the recurring flooding.

"It is very susceptible to wave action, storm surge and would not be a reliable source for flood relief," said Coughlin. The master plan recommends a pipe from the Treat's Pond Atlantic Ave. area to a Margin Street culvert.

Jim Drysdale, who has been a staunch opponent of the Army Corps project, brought forth allegations Sandy Cove residents pressured the Army Corps into ruling out the Sandy Cove option for aesthetic reasons. When Carr asked him for evidence, he wasn't able to produce it, but did provide other documentation to the chairman that Carr felt did not corroborate his allegation.

"If you're going to make a statement like that, accusing people of using political pressure (on a federal organization) this clearly doesn't say that. Come and back it up with some paperwork," said Carr, admitting he was frustrated.

When the Selectmen came back to talk amongst themselves, it was clear there was a split vote on pursuing the Sandy Cove option and the inner harbor option. Koed and Quigley supported a Sandy Cove resolution to resolve flooding. Carlson and Carr supported the Army Corps inner harbor route. Each member seemed firm in their position (see sidebar).

"It's tough to go forward with a route I don't want and a route I'm told won't work," said Koed. Likewise,

"We don't have a route at Sandy Cove…we need to do something, this issue has been around for 15 years," said Carlson.

The Selectmen left the meeting in a deadlock. The Army Corps is expected to come before the Selectmen to further discuss the project.

Where they stand

The Board of Selectmen is currently split over how to proceed with the Treat's Pond Army Corps saltmarsh restoration project. The primary topic for Monday night's discussion was do the Selectmen support the project and, if so, which option do they support? Here's a breakdown of where each of the Selectmen stand on the issue:

-Ted Carr

Voted in favor of the inner harbor route, against the Whale Meadow route and against the Sandy Cove route. Carr was in favor of making a clear move toward an option in order to trigger action from the Army Corps. By making a decision now, he said, Town Meeting would have ample time to understand the issue and make an informed decision. Carr stressed the town was not obligated financially until a town meeting vote.

Quote: "There's no engineering to support a solution at Sandy Cove, that's convincing to me."

-Paul Carlson

Voted in favor of the inner harbor route, against the Whale Meadow route and against the Sandy Cove route. In reviewing the Army Corps documents, Carlson felt the freshwater impact on the harbor would be negligible. In fact, he said, if the saltmarsh restoration works properly, the two-way flow could improve both bodies of water. Not seeing a valid flooding solution for Sandy Cove, Carlson voted to support the inner harbor route.

Quote: "We don't have a route at Sandy Cove…we need to do something, this issue has been around for 15 years."

-Fred Koed

Voted against the inner harbor route, against the Whale Meadow route and for the Sandy Cove route. Koed primary concern was protecting the harbor for both public and the commercial fishermen. He wanted to more fully explore engineering options at Sandy Cove.

Quote: "It's tough to go forward with a route I don't want and a route that I'm told won't work."

-Karen Quigley

Voted against the inner harbor route, against the Whale Meadow route and for the Sandy Cove route.

Despite saying up front she was committed to finding a solution to the recurring Atlantic Ave. flooding, Quigley said she found problems in the data used to come to the Army Corps conclusions. She took issue with the fact additional freshwater would be added to the inner harbor, which could lead to further degradation of the harbor's health and vitality.

Quote: "I'd like to see more engineering done to show Sandy Cove is not a viable option."

NOTE: Selectman Ralph Dormitzer has and continues to recuse himself from all discussions and decisions on Treat's Pond because his residence is on Sandy Cove. However, he reserves the right to speak as a private citizen.

Where do we go from here?

- As it stands now, the town is not obligated to the project or share in the project costs accumulated thus far. But, if the town agrees to go forward with the project in a vote of Town Meeting, they will be obligated to the cost incurred thus far (design, preliminary engineering) and the cost of the project. The estimated for the inner harbor route dating back to 2007 hovered $1.7 million.
- The Selectmen plan to invite the Army Corps of Engineers to an upcoming meeting for a follow-up presentation. The last time the Army Corps was at a public meeting about the project was June 2007.
- The presentation could help the Selectmen make a decision on the route for the project. If a route is chosen, the Army Corps will then compile its data and update its cost estimates.
- The town has the responsibility of getting the applicable permits. Four sets of permits are needed from the local Conservation Commission to the state Environmental Protection Agency.
- A two-thirds majority Town Meeting vote would be required for a shovel to ever hit the ground for this project.

OBITUARIES

Jane Hetherington

Loved singing and the performing arts

Jane Henry Hetherington, 40, of Scituate, died Jan. 22, 2009, at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston after a long illness.

The daughter of Dr. David J. Henry and Evelyn V. Henry of Scituate, Mrs. Hetherington grew up in Scituate, where she always enjoyed swimming at Minot Beach with her family. She graduated from Fontbonne Academy in Milton in 1987 where she developed her love of singing and performing arts. She was also a 1991 graduate of Regis College in Weston, where she met her husband through their shared love of music in the Glee Club. She married Christopher Hetherington in 1994 at First Parish Church, Cohasset, where they remained active in the community, particularly the choir and in church performances.

George W. Benedict III

Active volunteer, avid golfer

George W. Benedict III, of Cohasset, died Jan. 26, 2009.

He served his country as a Marine in World War II. After graduating from Stanford, he spent his life in banking at First National and then at BayBank.

Mr. Benedict was an active volunteer that worked with many non-profits. He loved woodworking, swimming, boating, biking and most of all golf. He was a former member of the Cohasset Yacht Club, Cohasset Golf Club and the Kittansett Golf Club.

He leaves his wife Harriet; his children Kay and her husband Bill, Jim and his wife Barbara and Margie and her husband Sinan; his grandchildren Cheryl and her husband Justin, Kristin, Heather, Tanner, Alan and Derek.

Services will be held on Saturday, Jan. 31, at 11 a.m. at First Parish of Cohasset, 23 North Main St., Cohasset.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Homes in Cohasset handled the arrangements.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the First Parish of Cohasset, 23 N. Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025 or the Cohasset Public Library/Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset, MA 02025

IT'S HAPPENING

St. Stephen's concert will be a classic

The Olmsted Ensemble will perform at 3 p.m. on Sunday (Feb. 1) at St. Stephen's Church. Free admission, donations welcome. For information call: 781-383-1083.

The Olmsted Ensemble (Peter H. Bloom, flute; Brian Clague, violin; Jennifer Shallenberger, viola; Timothy Roberts, cello) will perform Mozart's D Major Quartet K. 285 (one of the great treasures of the repertory), Quartet Opus 41 No 2 in F Major by Ignace Pleyel (a favorite student of Haydn and an important influence on Mozart), and the dramatic Quartet in D Minor by American composer Charles Hommann, active in the mid-19th century but seldom heard today.

The Olmsted Ensemble concertizes widely, appearing at venues including Boston's Museum of Fine Arts, Tufts University, the Islesboro Maine Summer Concerts, Longfellow National Historic Site, King's Chapel, Gore Place Historic Site, and Elmira College, among others. Members of the ensemble tour widely with orchestras and chamber groups throughout North America, Europe, and the Far East.

Feb 3 topic is school-based assessment

All are welcome to join the Parent Advisory Council and PSO on Tuesday, Feb. 3 for "Putting the Pieces Together: K-5 School Based Assessment."

This is a program for all parents with children in Kindergarten - 5th Grade in the Cohasset Schools.

The presentation will address:

? How assessment results are used to increase the performance of all students.

? Parent questions relative to math and literacy assessments.

Presenters:

- Kathy Brooks, Math Specialist K-5;
- Lynn Kenny, Reading Specialist, Osgood;
- Alex Bluestein, Reading Specialist, DeerHill

Location: The Osgood School, 210 Sohier Street, (behind the Deer Hill School)

Time: Starts promptly at 7:30 p.m.

All workshops and presentations are Free. The event ist sponsored by the PSO/PAC (Parents Advisory Council)

Kindergarten registration at Osgood School

Kindergarten registration for the 2009-2010 school year began Monday, Jan. 26. Registration will take place daily, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., at Osgood School. Parents will be asked to indicate interest in full-day kindergarten or half-day kindergarten at the time of registration. Parents are encouraged to register early to facilitate planning for the program.

Children who turn 5 on or before Sept. 1, 2009, are eligible to attend kindergarten. A birth certificate and proof of residency are required in order to register.

Call Osgood School at 781-383-6117 for more information.

Spelling Bee fundraiser

Cohasset Education Foundation will offer its second Children's Spelling Bee fundraiser on Sunday, Feb. 8. All children in grades two through five are welcome to participate in this fun, community event. Each team is made up of three children in the same grade. Team members could be from class, a sports team or a Cohasset resident in another school.

Registration, which includes a T-shirt, is $25 per speller. Forms can be downloaded at the Web site at cohasseteducation.org.

Integrated Preschool applications available

Applications for Cohasset Integrated Pre-school are at both Osgood School and the Student Services Office. Children must be 3 by Sept. 1, 2009, to participate in the morning class, and 4 by Sept. 1, 2009, to participate in the afternoon class.

Applications should be returned to the Student Services Office, 143 Pond St., no later than Friday, Feb. 6. The lottery will take place Wednesday, Feb. 11, and families will be notified by mail that week.

A deposit of $150 by March 3 is required to hold the space. Tuition is currently $2,000 for the years; four days of 2.5-hour sessions each school week.

An open house for parent will take place at the Osgood School Pre-School classroom from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m., on Friday, Jan. 30. Parents will have an opportunity to meet staff and view the classroom facilities.

Finally got our snow day!

LIFE AT CHS

LAUREN MACK

Hopefully all upperclassmen purchased their tickets for the Junior-Senior Semiformal, being held tomorrow night at the Cohasset Community Center from 8 to 10:30.

Hello Cohasset and congratulations! We finally got our highly anticipated snow day this past week! After everything that was being said about the violent snowstorm we were going to get, we actually woke up and found that we didn't need to double-check every news channel to see if perhaps they made a mistake. How remarkable. The only drawback to this was the fact that Wednesday was going to be a half-day anyways, meaning that we would've been out of school before many of us probably woke up. Nevertheless, the chance to sleep in was appreciated.

In other news, the student council has been and will continue to be hosting a food drive at the school, any donations in the form of non-perishable food items may be dropped off at the box in the front office and are very much appreciated.

New classes began today! The semester was scheduled to end on Wednesday and then new classes would begin the following day, but due to the snow day, the semester was pushed back a day and second semester officially began today.

Hopefully all upperclassmen purchased their tickets for the Junior-Senior Semiformal, being held tomorrow night at the Cohasset Community Center from 8 to 10:30. Everyone who's anyone is going to be there, and if for some reason you missed your chance to buy a ticket at school, you can get in for $25 at the door. However, if you do attend the dance, know that no student is permitted to leave the Community Center for any reason until 10 P.M. and Dr. Gill urges you all to "Make smart choices!"

This week, I don't have a quote of the week. For it has come to my attention that I misinterpreted and therefore misquoted some individuals and for that I wanted to apologize for any miscommunication or hurt feelings caused on my part. Our teachers are all respected individuals who deserve nothing less than to be looked at in a positive light. It is my duty to give an accurate account of the occurrences at CHS and I will make it a point to be more careful in the future. And with that, I leave you all to a wonderful weekend! Have fun, be safe, and until next week, auf wiedersehen!

Boys hoopers qualify for postseason

In the regular season, you play everyone twice. In the winter, here in New England, you might end up playing the same opponent twice in the same week. That is exactly the situation the Skippers faced when they came away from Carver on a Sunday with a huge win. Carver traveled back to Cohasset Friday night looking to avenge their home court drubbing.

It didn't happen.

Cohasset held tough and notched a 55-51 win.

The first quarter started out well for the Skippers. Their zone defense forced turnovers and on offense, Seniors John Sturino (6 points) and Marcus Charles (11 points, 3 steals, 3 assists) were not afraid to take it to the hoop, creating 'and one' opportunities. Senior Danny Martin (10 points, 12 rebounds, 3 blocks) and Juniorr Johnny Maher (5 points, 6 rebounds, 3 assists) controlled the boards.

The full court pressure kept Carver from getting any fast break opportunities. At the end of the half Cohasset was on top 29-22 courtesy of Sophomore Robert Jones (19 points) who had 3 trey's in the half.

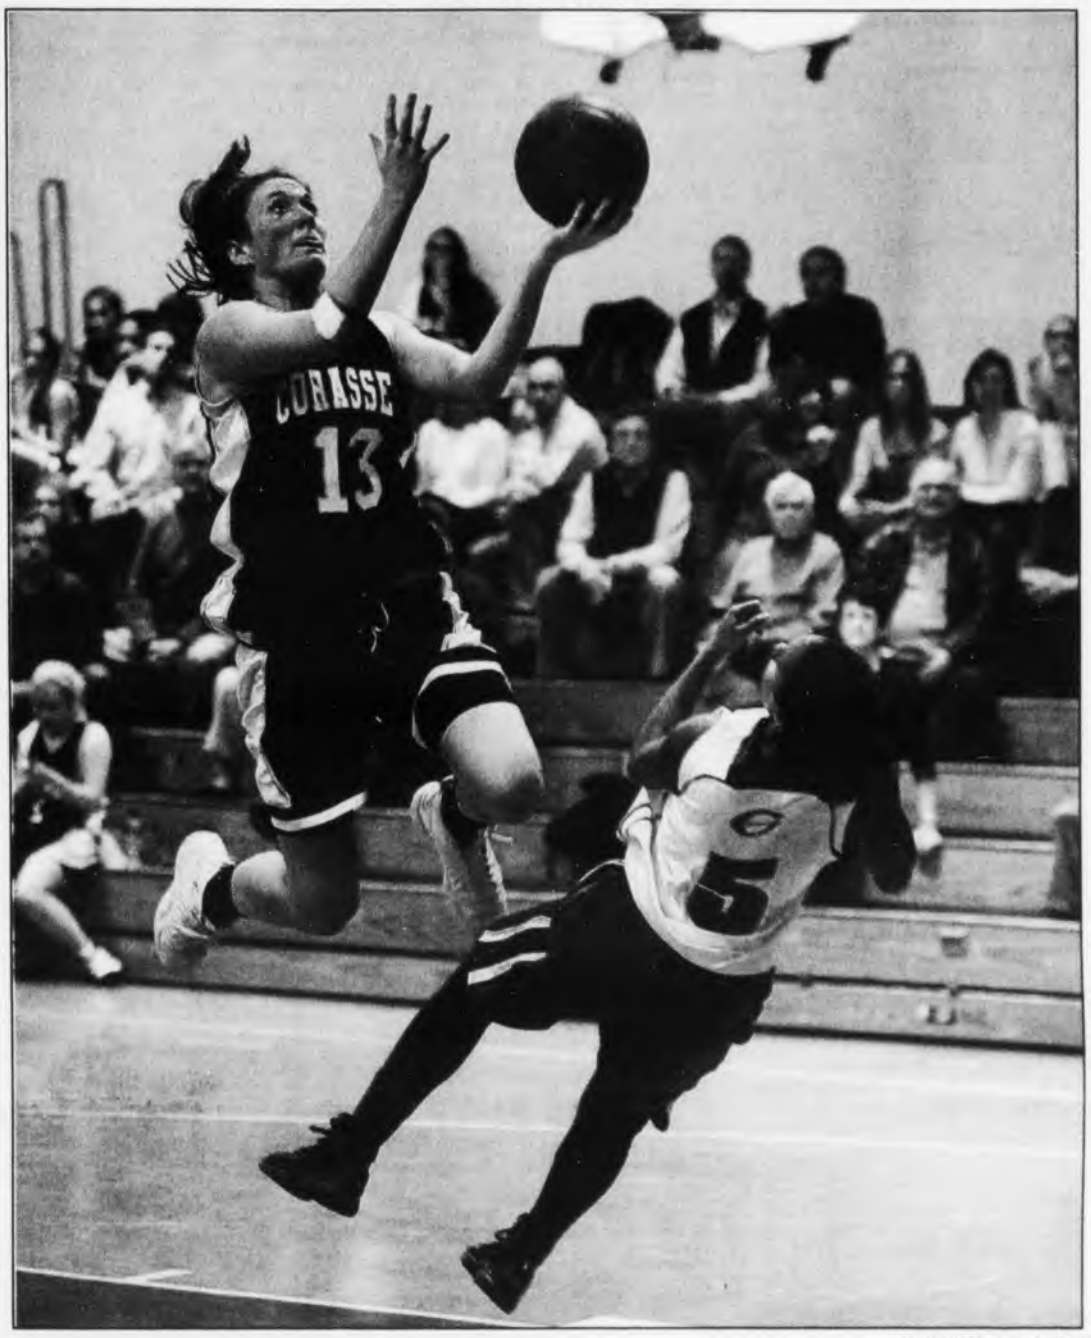
Carver utilized the halftime break well. They came out determined and aggressive, played patient basketball and crashed the boards. At the same time, Cohasset was getting a bit sloppy forcing the ball inside resulting in turnovers. With 2:20 left in the third frame, Carver tied up the game. With six seconds left in the quarter they were up by four, but a great screen by Maher allowed Jones to launch one from outside the arc and the Carver lead was reduced. By the end of the quarter, Carver led by one, 39-38.

The teams traded baskets through the first few minutes of the fourth quarter before Carver began to play in an uncontrolled manner, racking up the personal fouls.

Cohasset shot 81percent from the stripe in the second half led by Jones (7 for 8) and Charles (3 for 3). With 1:15 left in the game, Maher hit a jumper to tie up the game. On the defensive end of the court, Charles stole the ball.

Martin was fouled, sank both. Cohasset stopped Carver. Jones was intentionally fouled and sank both.. Cohasset won 55-51.

Off the bench sophomore Sam Richardson sank a big three in the second half, senior Owen Landon provided his usual high energy, relentless defense with a board, a steal and an assist. Freshman Robbie Mahoney played well also, filling in the paint and stopping the inside game of Carver.



Next up, for the potential 11th win, and tournament berth was Harwich, and the long, long trip to Harwich. After an hour and half on the bus and the JV game to watch, Coach Bo Ruggiero had the varsity jump rope to loosen up and get the blood flowing. It worked. Cohasset won the tip, and the game, 67-63.

Charles (8 points) hit the first bucket, a three pointer. The boys in blue played disciplined basketball working the ball around the perimeter for the open shot, and following up those shots with second chance buckets. Harwich couldn't penetrate the Cohasset D and relied on their sharp shooting perimeter players to hit the long jumpers. Cohasset led after the first quarter 19-16.

Cohasset utilized their speed and captured some quick fast break baskets to start the second Cohasset's Meredith Kelly drives through a Carver defender during Cohasset's 45-37 win Friday night in Carver.

The win gave Cohasset its second straight win over Carver. The Skippers improved to 13-0 with the victory and added another Monday night with a 53-36 win over Harwich.
Tori Lehr scored 19 points and had 21 boards in the victory.
Meredith Kelly scored 14 points, Sammi Lehr added 12 and Tori Lehr dropped in 11.

Strong stretch run needed for CHS skaters to snare tourney berth

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

There is no room left for letdowns for the Cohasset High hockey team.

That was the message delivered by Skippers third year coach Bob Walsh following Saturday's disappointing loss on the road to Old Rochester.

"We just came out flat," assessed the Skippers' fourth year head coach. "The intensity we'd been playing with the last five games just wasn't there, and I can't really explain why."

Indeed. A win here at Tabor Academy would have gotten the Skippers back to the magic .500 mark needed for postseason qualification. Instead, with the loss, the CHS skaters fell to 4-6-2—meaning they must win two more than they lose over the final eight games to finish .500.

"Our goal now is to just win as many games as we can," said Walsh. "I look at the talent we have and I'm surprised we don't have more wins than we do, but I also know we're young. Some of the mistakes we've been making due to inexperience have cost us in some big spots."

"That was the first time we played three very strong periods."
Cohasset coach Bob Walsh

Of course, the Skippers could also qualify for the state tourney by finishing in one of the top two spots in the seven-team South Shore League. First place is virtually out of the question after they dropped a 4-3 decision to unbeaten Norwell (7-0 in SSL play) last Wednesday, but second place would be theirs if they ran the table against four teams they went 3-0-1 against the first time around.

The biggest upcoming game for the Skippers (4-2-1 in SSL play), at the moment, appears to be next Sunday's Game on the road (6:55 p.m., Falmouth Ice Arena) vs. current second place team Mashpee (5-3 in SSL play. 8-5-1 overall). A win or tie there would move the Skippers past the Falcons in the standings and also give them the tiebreaker, as they took the first decision by a 7-1 score.

The Skippers win over Mashpee on their home Pilgrim Arena Ice on January 14 was the best performance Walsh says he has seen to date from his Skippers, and the one that he says proves they are "capable of playing with anyone."

"That was the first time we played three very strong periods," lauded Walsh. "I remember telling the kids after the game that the secret was now out on us. We weren't going to sneak up on anyone else after that."

The cat was also well out of the bag on sophomore star Anders Goetz after his two goal, four assist outing. One Cohasset coach has even taken to calling him "The Great Goetzky." Goetz also scored both Skippers' goals in Saturday's 5-2 loss to Old Rochester.

"Anders is a lot of fun to watch right now," said Walsh. "He's just finding good options all over the ice, and his linemates are learning they just have to get into a good shooting spot and he'll find them."

Thomas Flibotte of Cohasset locks up his Rockland opponent Adam Strong.

All about redemption for grapplers

By Emily Toomey
CHS CORRESPONDENT

According to Theodore Roosevelt, "far better is it to win glorious triumphs, even though checkered by failure, than to rank with those poor spirits who neither enjoy much nor suffer much." In other words, success is the most rewarding only after defeat, when it can truly be appreciated. This lesson was learned over the past week by the Cohasset wrestling team, who suffered a harsh meet last Friday but redeemed themselves the following Tuesday.

On Friday, the team headed to Marshfield along with the Rockland and Malden Catholic wrestlers. Their first match was against Rockland, and Cohasset experienced few victories. Jack Murphy had the first win with a 15-0 victory.

Three weight classes later, senior captain Mike Froio pinned with forty-seven seconds left in the second period, followed by sophomore Thomas Flibotte, outwrestling his opponent 10-9.

Gus Helbock had one of the most intense matches of the night, winning 6-4 in overtime. Matt Dooley's win by forfeit left the score 54-23 in Rockland's favor.

The Marshfield matches were equally difficult for Cohasset, with only three victories.

Justin Yeager easily pinned with thirty-two seconds left in the first period and Froio followed his lead with a pin in forty seconds. Helbock won again for Cohasset, winning 11-2. The final score of the match was a disappointing loss of 51-16.

Cohasset fared better against Malden Catholic, losing by a mere six points, 39-33.

Murphy had the first success and fellow junior Andrew Littauer followed, winning 10-2.

Captain David Toomey was also victorious with an eight point lead. Froio, Cam Washak, and Alex Kinnealey carried on the winning streak by each making solid pins.

Grade: Senior
Position: Quarterback
Stats: Three-year starter racked up 1,100 yards passing and 11 touchdowns for the South Shore League champs and Div. 3 playoff contenders. Two-time SSL All-star also intercepted two passes at defensive back. Also a talented baseball player at AHS, Perakslis will take his talents to a Div. 1 school next year.

Name: Kristian LaPointe
School: Abington
Grade: Junior
Position: Running back
Stats: An offensive stalwart few could slow LaPointe down. Racked up 1,800 all-purpose yards and 21 touchdowns. Career marks find him with more than 3,000 yards and 33 TDs in three seasons. On defense, LaPointe registered 107 tackles and five picks. Also a basketball player at AHS, LaPointe is already considering college.

Name: Joe Gaughan
School: Braintree
Grade: Senior
Position: Wide receiver
Stats: This talented receiver set a new BHS mark for career catches with 104. Forty-six of those grabs came in this his senior season. Had six touchdowns and caught eight passes and scored a TD in a win over Walpole. Also set a single-season record for catches with 58 as a junior. Also plays hockey and baseball at BHS.

Name: Kalonji Kabongo
School: Abington
Grade: Senior
Position: Lineman
Stats: A three-year starter and standout on defense for the South Shore League champs and Div. 3 playoff contenders, Kabongo racked up 14 sacks this season to go along with 109 tackles. Career totals find him with 237 tackles, 25 sacks, and one interception. Had nine tackles, three sacks and a forced fumble in a win over Rockland. Also competes on the outdoor track team at AHS.

Name: Dana Valentine
School: Cohasset
Grade: Junior
Position: Running back
Stats: Despite missing two games this season, Valentine still led the Skippers in rushing with 908 yards and 10 touchdowns. Long runs were his signature, scoring five TDs for 50 or more yards. The Offensive MVP of his team, Valentine was also solid at linebacker. Also plays lacrosse at CHS.

Name: Steve Sousa
School: Marshfield
Grade: Junior
Position: Defensive back
Stats: Perhaps saved his best stuff for last as the multi-talented Sousa shined in the postseason. Was sensational at reading opposing quarterbacks, intercepting the first pass of the Div. 1A playoff against Framingham and later, breaking up a last-second toss to the end zone. Had an interception against Duxbury. As a quarterback, Sousa had eight touchdowns, four passing and four rushing.

Name: Shane DiBona
School: Duxbury
Grade: Senior (captain)
Position: Running back
Stats: The multi-talented DiBona was a star on both sides of the ball throughout his career. Rushes for 1,357 yards and 18 touchdowns for the Div. 2A Super Bowl champs. Also caught 16 passes for 300 yards and two TDs. Career stats find him with 3,125 yards and 42 touchdowns. At linebacker, DiBona notched 61 tackles and 11.5 sacks. Also runs indoor track and plays baseball at DHS. Will continue his football career at University of Iowa.

Name: Nick Hocking
School: Hanover
Grade: Senior
Position: Wide receiver
Stats: A tremendous athlete who shined on both sides of the ball, Hocking racked up 1,050 receiving yards on 65 catches. Had 12 touchdowns. At defensive back, Hocking made 46 tackles this season and picked off five passes. The PL All-star also plays basketball at HHS and hopes to continue his football career in college.

Name: Ian Whitney
School: Duxbury
Grade: Senior
Position: Wide receiver
Stats: One of quarterback Sean Cross' favorite targets and for good reason. Caught 20 passes for more than 500-yards for the Div. 2A Super Bowl champs. Also solid at cornerback, Whitney had 20 tackles, a sack, and a pick. Also a captain on the DHS basketball team, Whitney hopes to play football in college.

Name: Bob MacNeil
School: Marshfield
Grade: Junior (captain)
Position: Running back
Stats: Emerged as the leading rusher on the Rams' multi-backed running game amassing 681 yards and 10 touchdowns on just 110 carries for the three-time Div. 1A Super Bowl finalists. Carried the ball 19 times for 129 yards and a TD against Beverly Hills. On defense, MacNeil had 81 tackles, two sacks and recovered a fumble. Also a wrestler at MHS.

Name: Pat Creahan
School: Hingham
Grade: Senior
Position: All-purpose back
Stats: There wasn't much this talented back didn't do for the Harbormen. Amassed more than 700 yards and 11 touchdowns at running back. Had 101 tackles and four interceptions as a linebacker. Also served as Hingham's long snapper. Creahan also plays basketball and runs track at HHS and is looking at Holy Cross.

Name: Royce Terrell
School: Weymouth
Grade: Senior
Position: Running back
Stats: A standout for the last three seasons, Terrell rushed for 1,410 yards and 14 touchdowns in his final campaign. Career totals find him with 3,500 yards and 38 TDs. On defense, he racked up 80 tackles and five career interceptions. Also a basketball player and track runner at WHS, Terrell will like to continue his football career in college.

Name: Kyle Crowley
School: Scituate
Grade: Senior (captain)
Position: All-purpose back
Stats: A standout on both sides of the ball, Crowley rushed for 1,140 yards and 10 touchdowns. Also racked up 160 receiving yards for the Sailors. At cornerback, Crowley picked off two passes and was second on the team in tackles. Also plays lacrosse at SHS and will continue his career at Bryant University.

Name: Zach Triner
School: Marshfield
Grade: Senior (captain)
Position: Defensive end
Stats: One of the top guards/ends in the area for the three-time Div. 1A Super Bowl finalists, Triner was an absolute terror. Had a knack for reading opposing offenses and racked up 10 sacks this season. Had two sacks in a Div. 1A playoff win over Framingham. Will also captain the MHS lacrosse team this spring.

Name: Petros Hologitas
School: Rockland
Grade: Senior (captain)
Position: Lineman
Stats: Deceptively quick off the line, Hologitas played both sides equally well for the Bulldogs. What he may lack in size Hologitas makes up for with strength, rarely getting out-manned on the line and thus creating great opportunities offensively. The PL All-star is perhaps better known for his wrestling ability. Also competes on the RHS outdoor track team.

Name: Josh Savoy
School: Holbrook
Grade: Senior
Position: Quarterback
Stats: A terror for opposing defenses in the Mayflower League, Savoy threw for more than 1,000 yards this season. He tossed 13 touchdowns while running in four of his own. Also a basketball and baseball player at HHS, he is considering continuing his career in college.

All-Star Fun

The world renowned Harlem Superstars returned to Cohasset on Thursday, Jan. 22 to battle Cohasset's very own "Dream Team" in a night of comedy basketball entertainment. Dream Team players included teachers and specialists from the Osgood, Deer Hill and Cohasset Middle/High schools as well as other special guests. The game took place in the Cohasset High School gym. Proceeds raised support the Cohasset basketball programs.

half. Second chance shots and strong defensive rebounding by Martin (30 points), Maher (10 points) and Mahoney gave the Skippers the edge and put them on top 34-28 at the end of the second quarter.

The third quarter ended pretty much the same the second did. Cohasset was leading 45-42. Martin dominated the paint. Jones (10 points) led the fastbreak feeding Sturino in the lane. The lead could have been larger if not for some careless turnovers. The Skippers appeared fatigued. Mahoney, Richardson and Landon provided fresh legs.

In the fourth quarter. Charles took it baseline and rolled one in. Harwich got within one on a foul. Jones got the board, fed Charles who hit Martin for the dunk.

Harwich and the Skippers traded points, Harwich went up by two. Mahoney banked a sweet one off the glass to tie it again. With less than two minutes to go, and down by two, Charles fed Martin for a bucket and a foul. Martin, who was nearly flawless from the charity stripe in the fourth quarter, hit the free throw and put the Skippers up by one. Still tied with less than 40 seconds to go, Martin fed Maher down low for the layup. Cohasset was up by two, but Harwich had the ball. They took a shot and missed, Maher came down with the rebound and was fouled. Maher sank both and Cohasset won 67-63 moving to 11-3, qualifying for the state tournament for the first time in over five years.

Come cheer on the Boys and Girls as they host Norwell tonight. JV Girls play at 3 pm, followed by JV Boys at 4:30, Varsity Girls at 6 pm and Varsity Boys at 7:30. It's Winter Carnival night at CHS so come on down and have some fun and watch great basketball.

The time is now for Skippers icemen

Junior Brendan Doonan was the beneficiary on three of those assists, netting his first career hat trick. Doonan returned the favor on both of Goetz' goals and also had helpers on tallies from junior linemate Andy McKenna and freshman John Collins to finish with seven points.

McKenna, the third member of that line, matched Goetz with four assists.

Although they did not get on the scoreboard, the second forward line of Conor Queenan, Paul Pozniak and Andrew Bell was lauded by Coach Walsh for their "hard-nosed play and hustle."

The Skippers followed this win up with up with two more lopsided SSL wins, taking down Harwich at home, 8-4, on Jan. 17 and Abington on the road last Monday, 4-0.

Then came the 4-3 loss to league leading Norwell. This loss hardly felt like a setback, however, as the Skippers played the three-peat league champs to a veritable standstill.

"We had long stretches where we had the puck deep in (Norwell's) zone, and had several legitimate chances to win it," reported Walsh. "One better bounce here or there, and we probably would have taken that win."

The Skippers never led in the game, but rallied twice to tie it up.

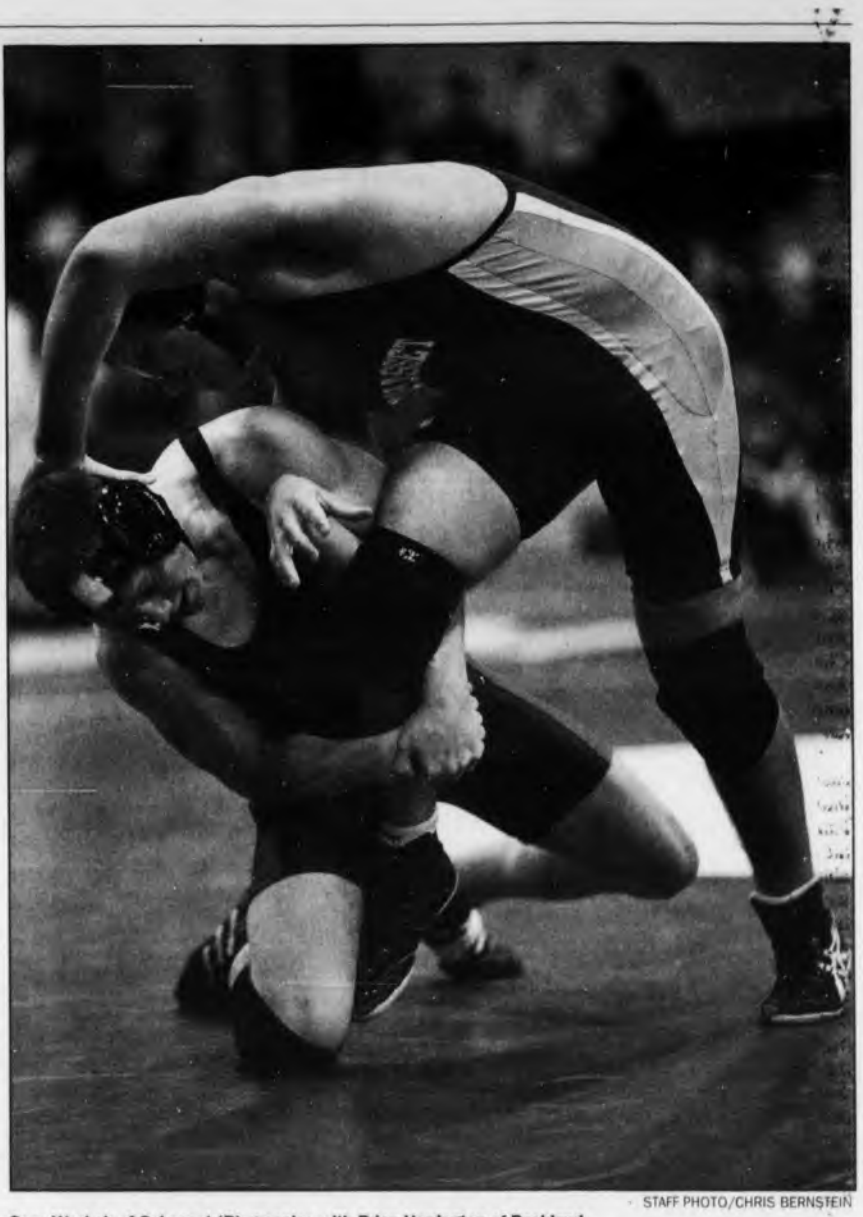
Queenan scored late in the first to tie the game at 1-1.

Norwell rallied with a pair of second period goals, but the top line teamed up to get it back to a one-goal game late in the middle frame. Doonan broke up a clearing pass to keep the puck in at Norwell's blue line, and fed quickly to Goetz on the backboards. Goetz spun free from a check and led McKenna perfectly on a charge through the right circle. McKenna picked his spot and hit it.

Not to be outdone by his big brother, freshman Sean McKenna beat Norwell goalie Clay Ferguson with a slapper near the mid-point of the third to tie the game again.

The Skippers earned a power play with 6:30 to play, but could not finish on a handful of quality opportunities. As so often happens right after a penalty is up, a defensive breakdown occurred as the extra skater hopped back on the ice. Norwell senior Mike Driscoll got wide open in the left circle and snapped the game-winner by Cohasset goalie Johnny Wade (33 saves).

"I felt so bad for Johnny, because he was really the guy who kept us in the game to start with," said Walsh.



Norwell out-shot Cohasset by a 38-25 margin, and Wade had several dazzlers among his 33 stops.

Next up

The Skippers were slated to take on Carver this past Wednesday night and to look for revenge tonight on their home ice (Pilgrim Arena, 8 p.m.) against a Mansfield team that beat them 9-3 way back on Christmas Eve.

"I think we're a different team than we were back then, and I'm hoping we'll prove that to ourselves," said Walsh of tonight's rematch. "Mansfield is a very good team, a good test for us at this point in the season."

The Skippers are off over the weekend, but will host winless Hull on Wednesday (3 p.m., Pilgrim Arena) and Abington on Friday (8 p.m., Pilgrim) before next Sunday's much anticipated trek to Falmouth to take on Mashpee.

Dooley finished off the matches with an achievement of 7-6.

The tide changed for Cohasset on Tuesday when they defeated South Shore Voke 54-17.

Freshmen Graden Foley and Gus Helbock both pinned during their matches, as well as sophomore Matt Brooks, who easily won in 1:45 minutes.

Afterwards, Colin Tarpey's win by forfeit and Robbie Hill's pin during the first period of his match increased Cohasset's score.

Littauer followed with a pin during the second period, in addition to Toomey's victory in forty-five seconds. Froio and Flibotte earned Cohasset another twelve points with their pins that both took place in under a minute.

When the meet ended, the Cohasset wrestling team could not have been more content, for nothing beats triumph after a fall.

For Optimal Child Development Experts Recommend More Opportunity to Play
SIGN UP FOR SUMMER CAMP WHERE PLAYING IS LEARNING!

Children's schedules seem to be more packed with activities and responsibilities – homework, chores, music lessons, and organized sports – than ever before. In fact, 21 to 30 percent of children in grades one to six get fifteen minutes or less of recess a day. With a lack of time for good, old-fashioned play for children, Tufts University child development expert Dr. David Elkind warns in his book, The Power of Play: How Spontaneous, Imaginative Activities Lead to Happier and Healthier Children, that there can be health and psychological consequences.

The American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) concurs. In a report written in defense of play and in response to forces threatening free play and unscheduled time, AAP concludes free and unstructured play is healthy and – in fact – essential for helping children develop important social, emotional, and cognitive skills. It can also help children deal with stress in a healthy manner.

When it's hard for kids to be kids, quality summer camp experiences meet the developmental needs of children by providing:

- Opportunities to engage in unstructured play
- Experiential education and experiences

Weymouth Club Tennis program thrives

Cohasset youth a big winner

WEYMOUTH — The 2008 season proved once again the dominance of the Weymouth Club tennis programs for both juniors and adults.

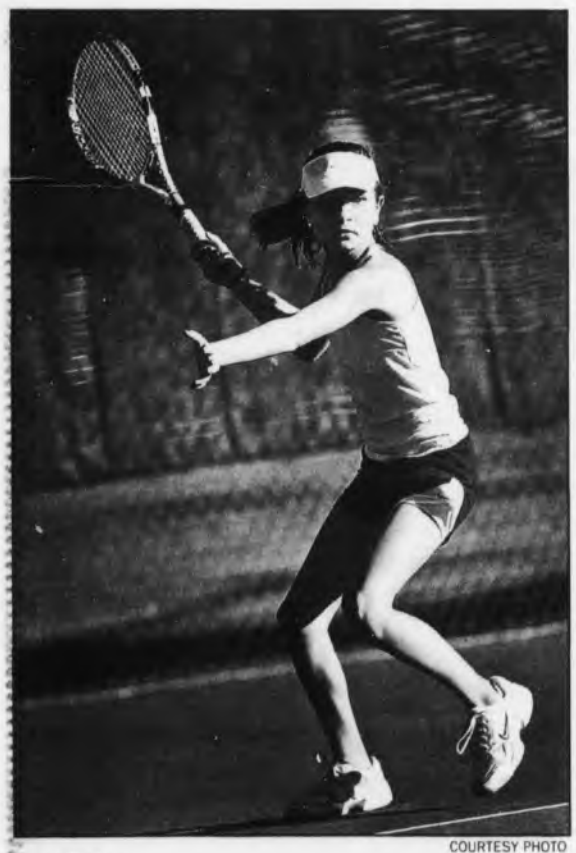
From 13-year-old Jillian Rooney (Canton), who is ranked number one in New England in both the girls 14- and 16-year-olds and is ranked 26th nationally in the girls 14, to Louis Desmarteaux (Hull), who won the KIA Amateur Australian Open National Championship and is playing in the 2009 Australian Open Amateur Tennis Championship in Melbourne, Australia, the Weymouth Club tennis program enjoyed a banner year.

"It was certainly a very successful year for both the juniors and the adults," said Paul D'Amico, the Club's tennis director. "In fact, it's probably the most successful year we have had in my four years here."

Then, in June, with the championship season underway, the Weymouth members dominated the New England Sectional Championships. Of the eight singles and eight doubles groups that were competed, Weymouth Club members won five of them, while five others reached the championship match.

The winners were Emma Davis (Cohasset) (girls 12 singles and on the girls 12 doubles), Rooney (girls 16 singles), Emma Alderman (Hingham) (girls 14 singles), and Bart Panarese (Milton) (boys 12 doubles). In addition to Panarese, who also finished third in the boys 12 singles, the other outstanding male player was Tommy Darling (Canton), who finished second in the boys 18 doubles and fourth in the boys 18 singles.

In August, there were the New England Hard Courts and leading the way were Emma Davis and Alex Huie, who lost in the finals of the girls 14 doubles.



As a result of their outstanding performances during the tournament season, over 40 players who call the Weymouth Club their home court were ranked in the 2008 New England final rankings. Six were ranked in the top 10 headed by Jillian Rooney and Emma Davis. Rooney is top-ranked in both girls 14 and 16 while Davis is number one in the girls 12. Others in the top 10 are Emma Alderman (number three in girls 14), Conner Doyle (Hingham) (seven in boys 12), Sophie Panarese (Milton) (seven in girls 16), and Tommy Darling (nine in boys 18).

Other highlights during the year included

During the indoor season that culminated last May, behind team captain Vince Hiedenreich (Braintree), the men's team won the South of Boston A Division championship, while Diane Heinold (Hull) captained the women's team to the Central Mass. Indoor Tennis Association C Division title.

At the highly regarded Pilot Pen Family Classic Tournament that was held in New Haven, CT in August, Madeline and Peter Dewire (Hingham) defeated Cole and Paul Stansbury (Hingham) to win the Parent/Child 11-and-under division. And, both doubles teams are Weymouth Club members.

In the USTA Junior Team Tennis, the 18-and-under team won the Districts and advanced to the New England Sectionals, while the 14-and-under team advanced to the Districts.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
JAN. 26, 2009ARIES

(March 21 to April 19) Taking some time out of your usually busy social life could be just what you need to help you focus on putting those finishing touches on your plans for a possible career change.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A misunderstanding about a colleague's suggestions could create a delay in moving on with your proposal. But by week's end, all the confusing points should finally be cleared up.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might feel overwhelmed by all the tasks you suddenly have to take care of. But just say the magic word — help! — and you'll soon find others rushing to offer much-needed assistance.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Finishing a current project ahead of schedule leaves you free to deal with other upcoming situations, including a possible workplace change, as well as a demanding personal matter.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Turn that fine-tuned feline sensitivity radar up to high to help uncover any facts that could influence a decision you might be preparing to make. Devote the weekend to family activities.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A state of confusion is soon cleared up with explanations from the responsible parties. Don't waste time chastising anyone. Instead, move forward with your plans.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might feel obligated to help work out a dispute between family members. But this is one of those times when you should step aside and let them work out their problems on their own.

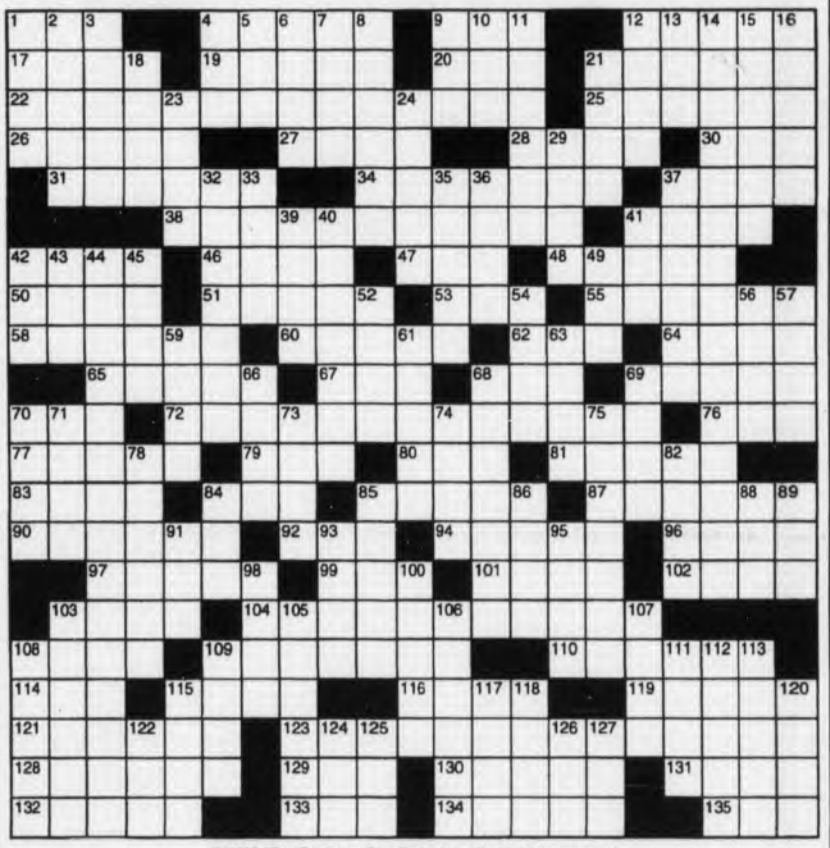
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your ability to resolve an on-the-job problem without leaving too many ruffled feathers earns you kudos from co-workers. You also impress major decision-makers at your workplace.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Newly made and long-held friendships merge well, with possibly one exception. Take time to listen to the dissenter's explanations. You could learn something important.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Be prepared to be flexible about your current travel plans. Although you don't have to take them, at least consider suggestions from the experts in the travel business.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A problem with a recent financial transaction could lead to more problems later on unless you resolve it immediately. Get all the proof you need to support your position.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Daydreaming makes it difficult to stay focused on what you need to do. But reality sets in by midweek, and you manage to get everything done in time for a relaxing weekend.



(c) 2009 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your ability to reach out to those in need of spiritual comfort makes you a much-revered, much-loved person in your community.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Warming up in luxury in the Dominican Republic

Matthew J. Gill
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

CAP CANA, DOMINICAN REPUBLIC — A large crab walked through the kitchen of my rented villa in the Dominican Republic. The luxury resort area of Cap Cana gets its name from the French "cap" meaning cape - referring to the country's location among a chain of Caribbean islands — and 'cana,' due to the large number of cana (or palm) trees growing on the island. Nowhere does it say anything about crabs.

But this is one incredible place; my surprise visitor was at least showing good taste.

Situated on the southeastern tip of the Dominican Republic, just minutes from Punta Cana International Airport, Cap Cana sprawls over a property about twice the size of Manhattan.

The resort area features private homes and condominiums, as well as hotel and villa accommodations, all in close proximity to more than three miles of beautiful white sand beaches, and all luxurious.

Groundbreaking for the resort took place in 2002, and since then, millions have been invested. And the project — the biggest of its kind in the Caribbean — is still a few years from completion. Despite some recent financial setbacks due to the U.S. recession, development continues.

The goal for the companies involved in Cap Cana is to provide a first—class living and vacation experience.

'We integrate here the best of what God and nature can provide,' said Ellis Perez, Cap Cana's president.

When all is said and done, Cap Cana will feature more than 5,000 residential units and at least four hotels on its 46 square miles. A strip of cliff—top acreage has been reserved for a Donald Trump hotel and villas property. Ritz—Carlton plans to develop a 220—room luxury resort and villas at Cap Cana.

Among already complete properties, the Sanctuary Cap Cana Golf & Spa hotel features 176 suites, each with their own view of the Caribbean.

During my visit, I stayed at the Caleton Club & Villas. The villas are extremely private and feature indoor, air-conditioned bedrooms, and an open-air kitchen and dining area. It's Gilligan's Island gone way fancy. The villas look like exotic, yet luxurious huts, the roofs covered in palm fronds. The three-and four-bedroom villas come with a small, private pool and a Jacuzzi.

As part of the package, Caleton villa stays come with butler service each day from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The butlers pretty much carry out whatever day-to-day tasks you may require, whether it's ordering up room service or making an appointment for a massage. What I needed was coffee, breakfast and toothpaste, and my butler provided these while also discussing baseball — it's the national pastime of the Dominican Republic — and he, like the rest of the staff, knew all about Manny Ramirez, David Ortiz and the Red Sox. (Ortiz and Ramirez, both Dominican natives, have been known to visit Cap Cana; Ortiz recently held a celebrity golf tournament at the property).

The first of Cap Cana's five golf courses, Punta Espada, opened for play two years ago. It's the first of three courses at Cap Cana that will bear the signature and design of golf's Golden Bear, Jack Nicklaus. The newly opened Golden Bear Lodge is a Nicklaus—created condominium property.

Cap Cana has a large marina as well, catering to the rich and famous — slip accommodations can handle vessels up to 250 feet in length.

The resort's 12 restaurants feature a wide variety of seafood and local dishes.

Having lunch at the open-air Blue Marlin grill one afternoon, a trio of guitarists performed 'La Bamba' and other selections while my companions and I enjoyed a menu that included catch of the day. The restaurant is built on a pier, and diners enjoy pleasant breezes coming in off the ocean.

Another night we had a nice dinner buffet in my villa — catering services are available — with traditional Dominican dishes including mangu, a recipe that includes fried mashed plantains served with shrimp or chicken, washed down with El Presidente, the popular Dominican beer.

As befits a resort of this kind, a key to a vacation here is relaxation.

For me, that meant swimming every day at my villa pool and at the Caleton Beach Club, where the figure eight-shaped swimming pool with swim-up bar was the largest pool I've ever seen.

During the day, we also lounged in the ocean, just letting the warm waves crash over us.

We went kayaking off the beach one afternoon, and followed up that excursion with a drink and some storytelling at a beachside cafe.

Among other available activities, you can play tennis, go deep—sea fishing or take part in other boat excursions; go snorkeling, ride horses or join a mountain biking tour.

I rarely left the resort — one of the goals of Cap Cana is to offer guests everything they could want in terms of dining, shopping and relaxation. This could be good or bad, depending on your perspective.

What a way to warm February

'Chitty Chitty Bang Bang' will delight the kids

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

British writer Ian Flemng not only created the legendary character of super-suave intelligence agent James Bond, he also wrote the children's story "Chitty Chitty Bang Bang," about a car with its own set of super powers, including the ability to sprout wings and take flight.

When the stage musical "Chitty Chitty Bang Bang" flies into Boston's Wang Theatre next week and the Providence Performing Arts Center next month, some of its famous fantasmagorical magic will be provided by local children. In Boston, the show's producers have selected Zachary Kelley of Norfolk and Serena Vaue of Wrentham as boy and girl alternates. For the March run in Providence, the producers have cast Andrew Purdy of Franklin and Rebekah Philip of Rehoboth as regulars and Daniel Perkins of Bellingham and Maddie Crump of Norfolk as the alternates.

The children came away from the audition and selection process with tremendous enthusiasm about being part of a national tour. "I can't wait to be a part of a real professional show." said Daniel Perkins.

PHOTOS BY IAN IBBETSON

Steve Wilson, Kelly McCormick, Aly Brier, Jeremy Lipton in "Chitty Chitty Bang Bang," playing at the Citi Performing Arts Center Wang Theatre Feb. 4 to 8.

The production features music and lyrics by the Academy Award-winning team of Robert B. and Richard M. Sherman, composers of "Mary Poppins."

The opportunity to work with a professional cast impressed the children, too. "I'm thrilled to be one of the alternates for 'Chitty Chitty Bang Bang.' This should be an amazing experience," said Maddie Crump.

The local children are looking forward to the performances, and some even to the bright lights that just may lie ahead. "Every time I see a show at PPAC, I wish that I am up on that stage. Finally, I will be," said Andrew Purdy. "I'm one step closer to Broadway."

The production features music and lyrics by the Academy Award-winning team of Robert B. and Richard M. Sherman, composers of "Mary Poppins." The national tour features an original script and fresh adaptation directed by Ray Roderick. This stage adaptation of "Chitty Chitty Bang Bang" boasts a score of memorable classics such as "Truly Scrumptious," "Toot Sweets," "Hushabye Mountain" and the Oscar-nominated title song, "Chitty Chitty Bang Bang," from the 1968 film starring Dick Van Dyke.

The Broadway production of "Chitty Chitty Bang Bang" received five Tony Award nominations, 10 Outer Critics Circle Award nominations and four Drama Desk nominations during its Broadway run. The London production was nominated for three Laurence Olivier Awards in 2003, including Best New Musical, and won Best Musical at the Variety Club Awards in 2003. The production opened on April 16, 2002, and continues to tour across the U.K.

"Chitty Chitty Bang Bang" will be at Citi Performing Arts Center Wang Theatre, 270 Tremont St., Boston, Feb. 4 through 8. For tickets, visit the Wang Theatre box office, call 877-348-9738, or go online at citicenter.org.

The show stops at the Providence Performing Arts Center (PPAC), 222 Weybosset St., Providence, R.I., March 19 through 22. For tickets, visit the PPAC box office, call 401-421-2787 or go online at ppacri.org.

Morgan Ritchie and Kate Burton in "The Corn is Green" at the Huntington Theatre Company. Playing now through Feb. 8 at the B.U. Theatre, the Huntington's mainstage.

Mother and son shine in revival of 'The Corn is Green'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Nicholas Martin may have left Boston's Huntington Theatre Company to become artistic director at the Williamstown Theatre Festival, but his current return visit to the Huntington with the beautifully rendered and perfectly cast production of "The Corn is Green" indicates he hasn't forgotten what made him so popular with Boston audiences. Martin once again revives a classic in splendid style with the semi-autobiographical 1938 Emlyn Williams play, set in a working-class Welsh village, about a 19th century schoolteacher whose highly focused tutoring spares a promising student from a life in the coal mines.

As she was in Martin's memorable "Hedda Gabler" and "The Cherry Orchard," both also at the Huntington, Kate Burton is front and center, this time as determined schoolmarm Miss Moffatt. Joining Burton, as he did when this production was first staged in Williamstown in 2007, is her real-life son Morgan Ritchie as the intellectually gifted, if unpolished, student with Oxford potential.

Adding special resonance to their appealingly layered performances are the pair's real, rich connections to the play and playwright. Burton is the daughter, and Ritchie the grandson, of the late Welsh-born actor Richard Burton, who played Morgan Evans in a 1947 BBC radio production. The elder Burton—himself a coal miner's son who made it to Oxford with the help of a dedicated teacher—appeared in several of his fellow Welshman's plays, and chose the writer to be godfather to his daughter Kate upon her birth in September 1957.

Birthrights are on Miss Moffatt's mind from the moment she arrives in the hardscrabble world of rural Wales to take over an inherited homestead. From the outset, she makes it clear that she will have no patience for the existing rules on education and class which has Welsh-speaking miners' sons taken out of school at 12 to work alongside their fathers until they, too, are wizened old men. It takes just a glimpse of the writing of young Morgan Evans to convince the teacher that this is one student who must overcome his lot in life.

Giving strong support to Burton and Ritchie is a talented ensemble that includes Boston theater veterans Will LeBow as the dim-bulb Squire; Bobbie Steinbach in the small role of a small town postmistress, and Middleboro native and 2007 Boston University graduate Jared Craig as sprightly student Idwal Morris. Standouts in the large, strong supporting company are Kristine Nielsen as Miss Moffatt's maid, Mrs.Watty, a not-quite-reformed pickpocket and petty thief who can't resist the glint of a brooch even if it happens to be pinned to a family member, and Mary Faber as her ne'er do well daughter, BessieWatty, who clearly learned to work the angles from an early age.

Director Martin has left none of the wonderful detailing that he is known for to chance here. Veteran Huntington and Broadway scenic designer James Noone ("She Loves Me," "Rabbit Hole," "Les Liaisons Dangereuses") has created a lived-in library setting that provides easy-to-imagine comfort and refuge for the many who visit it. Costume designer Robert Morgan makes sure that the prim Miss Moffatt is buttoned-to-the-neck and covered-to-the-floor in attractive and appropriate period garb and that the schoolboys' puddle-jumper pants reveal authentically broken-in boots.

The Huntington Theatre Company will present "The Corn is Green" at the Boston University Theatre, 264 Huntington Avenue, Boston, through Feb. 8. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-266-0800 or go online at huntingtontheatre.org.

What's haunting Town Hall?

having more to report.

"We looked in all the nooks and crannies for he, she, it, but the ghost has yet to materialize," said Tom Gruber, the town's engineer. Gruber and Mark Brennan's office is located in the old portion of town hall.

During the last weekend in January 2008, a group of paranormal investigators calling themselves Enfield Paranormal Society came to Cohasset Town Hall to see if there really was paranormal activity. After two nights of investigation, the founder of the group, Matt Kondracki, declared the building was haunted. The group used digital cameras, infrared video cameras and digital audio recording devices, and electromagnetic field recorder (K2 meter).

On the second night of the investigation, one of the infrared video cameras positioned on a door in the Board of Health office that leads upstairs to the attic filmed the door mysteriously closing on its own.

When Kondracki and his team couldn't do the same thing again man-made, they believed something strange was going on in the Town Hall. Other strange instances like

The story gathered interest locally, regionally and even nationally. The Mariner's web posting of the story got thousands of hits and was linked to paranormal sites all over the world.

Yet, Tradd has witnessed the door closing on its own any number of times and has always chalked it up to the draft.

"It's definitely something people are interested in," said Tradd, who has given tours to people who want to see the haunted door and fields comments from most that pass by her desk about it.

Retired Recreation Director Jack Worley perhaps has spent more time in the Town Hall than anyone from early morning ski trips to late night Recreation Commission meetings.

"As much as I'd love to tell you I have, I've never had a run in with the ghost," said Worley. He has listened and for over 30 years intimately got to know the creaks and moans an old building typically makes. "Some of these stories come with the territory of being an old, historic building…(but) there's no evidence of anything supernatural going on it."

Pat Martin, who is the co-host of the Our Town cable show, accompanied and video taped Enfield Paranormal Society on their Town Hall investigation last year. She is firm in her belief there are two ghosts — harmless ghosts — haunting town hall.

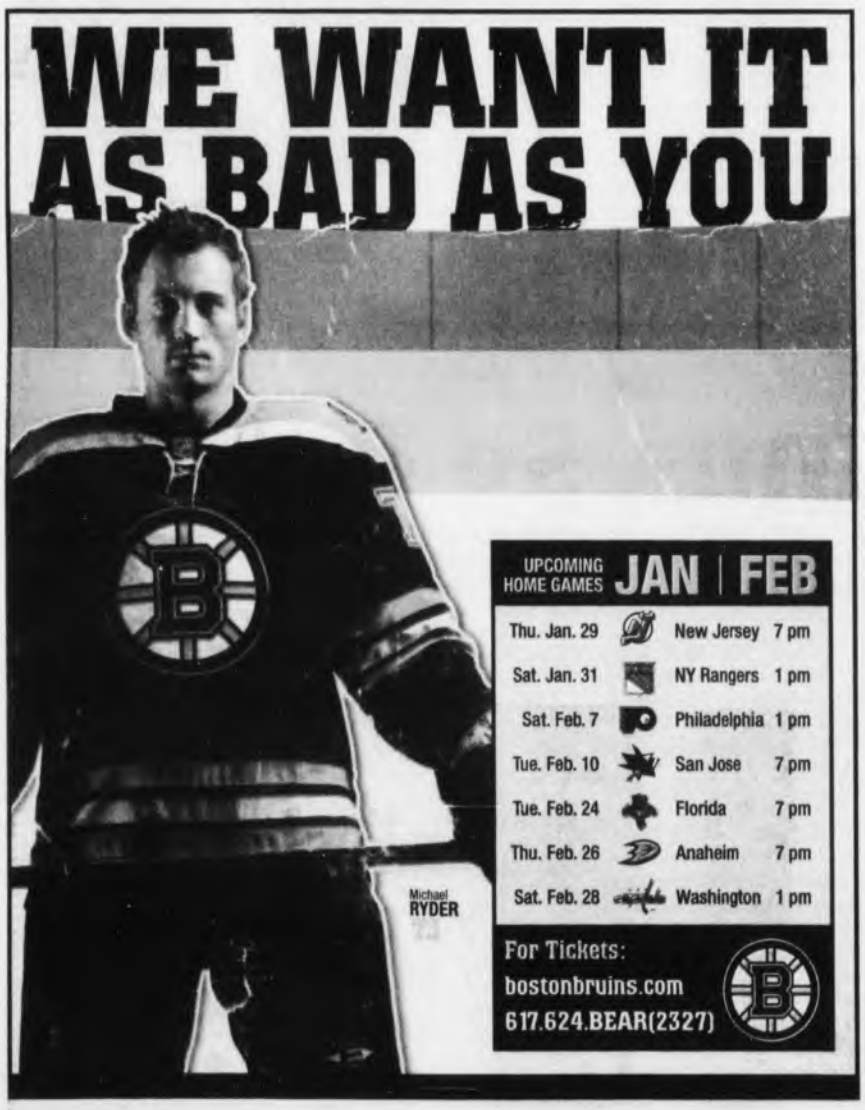
"There are two types of people: some are more sensitive to that kind of (paranormal) stuff and people that aren't," said Martin. After doing the investigation with the Enfield Paranormal Society Martin joined the group as video-documentarian, spokesperson and claircognizant and has since done eight more paranormal investigations in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

"The most haunted place we've been in is Cohasset Town Hall," said Martin.

Another paranormal investigation group, Mass Paranormal, did two nights of investigations during the spring and summer. Although they got some sense of something strange going on, their evidence did not lead them to declare the town hall haunted.

Exploring Historic Cohasset available

The Committee on Town History presented each of the Selectmen and Town Manager Bill Griffin with a copy of their newly minted book "Exploring Historic Cohasset," a guide of 10 tours of historic sites in Cohasset.



Two thousand copies of the book were printed and 200 books were sold over the Christmas holiday.

This is the sixth history book completed and printed by the Committee on Town History.

"Friends, family, guests and visitors have asked for this book and we hope this book will have a nice long life," said Jim Hamilton, a member of the Committee on Town History.

Selectman Karen Quigley said the book will be popular in the summer.

The book is currently available at Buttonwood Books, Town Hall, the Historical Society, Flemings and the committee is looking into other locations. The cost is $15.

Saving time to save lives

Engine 3 supplemented with ALS equipment

"It allows the paramedics to aggressively start treating the patient."
— Fire Lieutenant John Dockray

For very little cost, the Fire Department has been able to supplement its current emergency medical service. Engine 3, which already responds to all medical emergencies, is now outfitted with advanced life support equipment.

That means when Cohasset's sole ambulance, which is licensed for advanced life support services, is out on a call or transporting someone to the hospital, the staff and engine will be able to provide advanced first response care to a medical emergency. Before Engine 3 became permitted as an advanced life support licensed vehicle, in some cases it could take up to 10, or even 15, minutes from when the call is received for a mutual aid ambulance to respond to a medical emergency in Cohasset. Depending on the type of call, basic emergency services may not be enough.

Advanced life support (ALS) services are needed for medical emergencies like cardiac arrests, difficulty breathing, trauma, or seizures.

"It allows the paramedics to aggressively start treating the patient," said

Building a concensus

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Baby steps are an apt way to describe the pursuit of a new senior center. With each meeting, the proposal seems to gel a little bit more.

At the most recent meeting held Tuesday morning it was clear there are a lot of questions that need to be addressed, but some headway was made.

For several months, the Council on Elder Affairs and other interested parties have been working to establish a site for a new full-service senior center for the town's growing senior population. After investigating several parcels of land throughout town, a lot near the Cohasset Swim Center has been identified and is being actively pursued.

The land most suitable for the building because of its grade, proximity to the parking lot and easy access is located to the left of the Swim Center parking lot. The parcel targeted, about two acres, is located mostly on land owned by the Trustees of the Swim Center.

Ulmer sisters start 'green' business

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Ulmer girls are out to make a difference in the world, one bag at a time.

Cohasset natives Ashley and Kimberly Ulmer have fused their love of art and their desire to raise environmental consciousness in a new entrepreneurial venture – Green Eyed Monster.

The company is grounded in it effort to promote the use of re-useable bags in lieu of those polluting, non-biodegradable plastic bags. The way they have crafted the business is a reflection of their shared interests, common goals and unique perspectives.

The young entrepreneurs, Ashley is 25 and Kimberly is 23, combine an element of public art with a message for sustainability in their new venture.

Town Census for 2009

The Town Census for 2009 is being mailed each household. Information obtained from the census is used to prepare the street list, annual registry of voters, school list, dog owner list and jury list. It also establishes eligibility for resident's tuition at state colleges, for veteran reimbursement, for senior citizen programs and other benefits. The census provides information to various departments throughout the town.

Dog forms are on a tear-off portion of the census forms. The licenses are valid through Dec. 31, 2009. Dog forms need to be returned as soon as possible with a current rabies certificate although residents may have recently renewed a 2008 license.

If a census was not received, call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100.

Wind turbine hearing Feb. 23

The next public hearing on the Cohasset Heights wind turbine is Monday, Feb. 23.

According to Planning Board administrator Jo-Ann Pilczak, the postponement to Feb. 23 is to allow the applicant more time to submit the new data and information with adequate time for the consultants to review.

Any questions, please contact the Planning Board office at 781-383-3517.

Town Meeting could be postponed

Because of the late notice of how the state budget would affect local aid, the town's operating budget is a few weeks behind schedule. As town officials are grappling with touch budget choices, a postponement of Town Meeting has been proposed. Annual Town Meeting is currently scheduled for Saturday, March 28. It could be moved to a date in May. The Board of Selectmen will discuss the possibility in the coming weeks.

No takers for one school seat

Fusco will not seek re-election

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

With less than a week to go until the opportunity for candidates to get their name on the official ballot, almost all the available seats have residents ready to fill them. The one exception is an open seat for School Committee.

Steve Fusco, who is finishing out his first term on the School Committee, told the Mariner Wednesday he intends not to seek re-election to the board.

"Work is really taking a priority these days," said Fusco. For his day job Fusco often has to travel out of state and has missed meetings as a result.

Fusco is taking heart though as several residents have approached him in the last month to ask about the School Committee. "I was really encouraged by the people who approached me," said Fusco. Potential candidates have until Feb. 12 to pull nomination papers.

Of those people, one did pull papers — Paul Schubert of 155 Sohier St. Schubert is one of the few frequent attendees of the School Committee meetings.

"The big reason I am running is to see if we can get a handle on how the school is run from a financial standpoint," said Schubert in a phone interview this week. Schubert said he became more actively involved in the goings on of the school committee after the failed override almost three years ago. He is also a member of the Cohasset Education Foundation.

Other nomination papers pulled

- Kathryn Lydon, 23 Forest Ave. for Recreation Commission (five years)
- Margaret Chapman, 25 Virginia Lane, for Board of Health (three years)
- Agnes McCann, 104 Doane St.; Patience Towle, 61 Highland Ave.; Roger Lowe, 100 Beach St., for Board of Library Trustees (three open seats for three years)
- Jean Healey Dippold, 93 South Main St., for Planning Board (five years)
- Michael Patrolia, 15 Cushing Road, for the Board of Assessors (three years)
- John Beck, 44 Nichols Road, for Sewer Commission (three years)
- John McNabb, 53 Pond St., for Water Commission (three years)
- Nancy Barrett, 60 Elm St., for Housing Authority (five years)

"I'd like to find ways to keep what we have and improve a little bit each year."
— Paul Schubert, candidate for School Committee

With long-time member and current chairman Rick Flynn stepping down in April, Schubert figured it was a perfect time "to pick up the mantle and do a little work for the town."

Schubert has two sons in Cohasset Schools, one at the Middle School and the other at Deer Hill. He hopes to bring his business sense and experience to the committee. He is a partner at Harbor Medical Associates, which roughly has the same amount of employees as the Cohasset schools and struggles with the same financial challenges of health insurance costs, salary raises and material costs.

"(Public school) is an institution I feel we really need to support, almost to a fault," said Schubert. "With a good school system everyone (in the community) benefits."

Knowing these upcoming fiscal years could be wrought with challenges, one of Schubert's goals is to ensure Cohasset keeps up its current quality and standards at a reasonable cost.

"I'd like to find ways to keep what we have and improve a little bit each year," said Schubert.

The last day to take out nomination papers is Thursday, Feb. 12. In order to hold a position you must be registered voter of the town. In order to hold an elected office, you must be a registered voter of the town. It is important to note that you are not running for office until you take out papers and the Board of Registrars certifies your signatures. Signed nomination papers must be returned by Feb. 17.

Annual Town Election will be held on Saturday, April 4, 2009.

Exploring Historic Cohasset available

The Committee on Town History presented each of the Selectmen and Town Manager Bill Griffin with a copy of their newly minted book "Exploring Historic Cohasset," a guide of 10 tours of historic sites in Cohasset.

Two thousand copies of the book were printed and 200 books were sold over the Christmas holiday.

This is the sixth history book completed and printed by the Committee on Town History.

"Friends, family, guests and visitors have asked for this book and we hope this book will have a nice long life," said Jim Hamilton, a member of the Committee on Town History.

Selectman Karen Quigley said the book will be popular in the summer.

The book is currently available at Buttonwood Books, Town Hall, the Historical Society, Flemings and the committee is looking into other locations. The cost is $15.

POLICE BEAT

Cars are slipping and sliding all over town

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"We are having an extraordinary winter this year."
— Police Chief James Hussey

It is the weather. But it is also the drivers. That sums up the spate of calls to police about slippery, slick roads and a handful of accidents and mishaps in recent weeks.

"We are having an extraordinary winter this year," Police Chief James Hussey said. "There have been multiple storms, some of which came one right after the other."

Hussey said police are in radio communication with the DPW and therefore, it is OK for residents to call the station with reports about hazardous roads and conditions. However, he said the DPW likely already knows about those spots.

"Generally speaking, the DPW does a fabulous job and is well aware of the locations that need to be done," Hussey said. He also stressed that residents with four-wheel drive vehicles, which are helpful when it comes to traction, should know that it four-wheel drive does not help one stop.

"If you can avoid driving, please do so," Hussey said about conditions during winter storms. "But if you have to be out here, please reduce your speed and keep more than a safe distance between you and the car in front.

"Avoid hitting the brakes suddenly," he said. Hussey said often when a motorist hits the brakes, the car will go into a slide.

Hussey said some residents have unrealistic expectations and expect the roads to be treated immediately.

Here is just a sample of some of last week's calls about the roadways:

- Truck stuck in middle of intersection at Forest and N. Main.
- Caller reports three vehicles stuck, Gammons Road.
- Caller requests DPW to sand Diab Lane, which is impassible.
- Mill Lane caller states road is icy; advised DPW is out.
- 911 caller from Whitehead Lane said road is too icy for motor vehicles to travel; wants emergency order put in and wants sand left at the end of her driveway as she would like to get out of the house;
- Pond Street caller said buses are sliding down the hill and tying up traffic. DPW aware and on the scene.
- Pleasant Street caller wants sand for sidewalks as a lot of kids walk to school
- Marion Way caller says street is a sheet of ice.
- Jerusalem Road caller reports large patch of ice on the road.
- Atlantic Avenue caller wants to log complaint about road conditions – between the sanding and roadwork, there is barely one lane for traffic.

MV crashes/mishaps

- 7:09 a.m. Monday (Jan. 26), King Street (3A). A 2006 Lexus, headed south, had stopped to make a left into a parking lot when a 2004 Hyundai following too closely, hit the rear of the Lexus. The Hyundai, which was driven by a Cohasset woman, had to be towed. There were no injuries; the Cohasset woman was cited for following too close. The operator of the Lexus was from Scituate.
- 3:35 p.m., Monday (Jan. 26), CJC Highway and Beechwood Street. A 2005 Nissan, operated by a Marshfield man, was headed straight through the lights on 3A at Beechwood when a 2007 Toyota, operated by a Scituate man, which was headed south, took a left in front of the Nissan, and the cars collided. The Scituate man was cited for failure to yield. Both cars were towed; no one was transported to the hospital.
- 3:08 p.m., Wednesday (Jan. 28), Norman Todd Road and Beechwood Street. A 2005 Jeep, operated by a Cohasset man, heading west went into a slide and hit a utility pole. There was no damage to the pole. The Jeep was towed by AAA. The man was not transported to the hospital.
- 6:22 p.m., Wednesday (Jan. 28), Beechwood Street. A 1989 Volvo, driven by a Cohasset man that was headed east slid across the road into shrubbery near 40 Beechwood St. There were no injuries but there was some damage to the shrubs. The DPW helped get the car out and it could be driven home. The homeowner was informed about the shrubbery.
- 6:42 p.m., Wednesday (Jan. 28), Pond Street & Lantern Lane. 2000 Buick, operated by a Cohasset man, slid off the road. No damage. Officer stood by while vehicle was removed.
- 9:26 p.m., Wednesday (Jan.2 8), Lamberts Lane, car stuck in snow bank, on ice. DPW responded with sand.
- 7:26 a.m., Thursday (Jan. 29), Jerusalem Road, cruiser assisted with a 2002 Landrover stuck in a snow bank.
- 8:30 a.m., Thursday (Jan. 29), CJC Highway and King Street. A 2006 Jeep, operated by a Cohasset resident, proceeded through the green light at upper King Street to make a left onto King Street (Route 3A). A 1998 brown Nissan,

Engine 3 supplemented with ALS equipment

Lieutenant John Dockray, emergency medical services coordinator. The engine will never be used to transport a patient to the hospital.

The ability to have two ALS-equipped vehicles has been a goal of the Fire Department for nearly a decade. The reason they are able to provide the service now comes down to the staff.

"Because of retirements, we've been able to replace those positions with paramedic firefighters," said Fire Chief Bob Silvia. Today, 15 out of 22 staff members are certified as paramedics. "As long as we're able to maintain the current level of staffing, we'll be able to do this."

With the new advanced life support (ALS) capability on Engine 3, on most shifts, the fire department will have the equipment and paramedic skills to provide life-saving services like IVs and heart monitoring.

Engine 3 serves as the primary lead engine and has always responded to medical emergencies, fires, accidents, and investigations of fallen wires or odors of gas.

"It's not really a new job for the engine because it already goes to everything, but it supplements our ability to provide emergency medical service to calls in the community," said Dockray. Before ALS equipment was added, the engine could provide basic life support services.

ALS equipment allows paramedic to start IVs, administer drugs and narcotics, open constricted airways and monitor heart rates and oxygen levels in the blood. This is on top of the basic life support equipment from bandages, splints and a defibrillator. Most of the equipment is kept immaculately organized in a blue duffel bag. An orange box contains the narcotics and drugs. A defibrillator rounds out the equipments.

Lt. John Dockray opens up the medical kit, which makes Engine 3 an ALS ambulance while Joe Pergola, center, and Kevin Donovan, right, look on.

The ALS equipment is housed in a specially configured locked cabinet recently constructed behind the front cab of the engine. The cost for the additional equipment, drugs and shelving units was approximately $2000.

In 2008, Cohasset Fire Department responded to 967 medical emergencies. A total of 766 of those patients were transported to the hospital; of those 674 were transported by the Cohasset ambulance and the other 91 patients were moved by a mutual aid ambulance or a med-flight.

The Fire Department's medical services are one of the few town services that generate revenue. Each time a patient is taken to the hospital, Cohasset receives money. This past year, $366,500 was earned in ambulance transportation fees (for in town and mutual aid transports).

Right now, the ALS Engine is operating under a temporary license, but passed state inspection by the Office of Emergency Serivce last week and will receive its permanent license shortly.

"The big advantage is patient care…We look forward, even in this budget crisis, to still provide this service in the near and distant future for the community," said Dockray.

Ulmer sisters start 'green' business

"We wanted to start a business focused on environmental activism and the arts," said Ashley. The completely online small business found at www.greeneyed.com is interactive, quirky and accessible.

The business model for Green Eyed Monster starts with a canvas bag made from 100 percent recycled material. The bags are then adorned with one of a kind limited edition artwork generated by eco-inspired design competitions.

As described by Ashley, the bags are an example of how a product can be many things all at once—a form of art, a message about social responsibility and a method for reducing the owner's use of plastic bags.

Both sisters have been (and still very much are) proponents of using re-useable bags for years. Cohasset residents may recall Ashley's earlier business of making stylish tote bags using plastic bags. During summer 2007, Ashley sold the bags at the Cohasset Farmer's Market and online before heading out to California. Because of the time consuming, hand-knitted nature of the process, Ashley eventually abandoned the idea for a full-blown small business. She still occasionally makes the plastic bag bags to order.

After the summer 2007, Ashley and Kimberly went west to soak in the sun and pursue their dreams. They settled in Ventura, California. California had already embraced the idea of re-useable bags and is noted as one of the most environmentally progressive states in the U.S. Shortly before they arrived, San Francisco had banned the use of plastic bags. Later, legislation mandated supermarkets sell re-useable bags and have a recycling bin for plastic bags.

However, Kimberly said the options for reuseable bags were dismal, "they were small, in ugly colors and not made from recyled material."

Inspired by another entrepreneurial web business, threadless.com, that sells t-shirts designed by artists and chosen by web visitors, the Ulmer sisters decided to develop their own business around design competitions, interaction with the consumer and an eco-friendly product.

The sisters searched high and low for a company that shared their ideals of a sturdy construction, made from recycled materials canvas bag. They found what they were looking for in a women-owned company based in New Hampshire, Enviro-Tote. The bags are made from 100 percent post-consumer recycled cotton fabric and recycled plastic bottles. They are bigger than the typical re-useable bags, more akin to department store shopping bags.

"The color is so similar to (painting) canvas it was perfect to display the limited edition artwork," said Kimberly.

Sister entrepreneurs Ashley and Kimberly Ulmer sold their Green Eyed Monster tote bags recently at the Citrus Festival in Ventura, California. Their online venture sells tote bags made from recycled materials and adorned with limited edition eco-inspired artwork.

The focused venture took more than a year to get off the ground. With the help of a web designer, a fun, playful and user-friendly website for their product and competitions was created. Colorful and friendly looking "monsters" welcome you to the site.

"We wanted to make it as fun, interactive and accessible as possible," said Ashley.

Describing their marketing approach as "viral," the sisters are solely using the internet to spread the word about Green Eyed Monster. To solicit designs for their first artwork competition, they sent out e-mails to college art departments anywhere they could think of. They also posted notices about the competition in artist forums on websites like craigslist .com. They opted not to do traditional paper postings in order to keep their carbon footprint down.

"It was slow in the beginning, but I feel like it is really catching on," said Ashley. For their first competition, they received 20 submissions; two were chosen for limited edition bags. In addition to having a product created with their artwork, the winning artist receives a $500 prize.

The second design competition has opened for submissions and is soliciting artwork focused on the broad topic of water. The new set of limited edition bags will be released around Earth Day.

Using the power of social networking sites, like facebook, and tapping into the power of bloggers, the business is gaining no-tice, Ashley said. Last week, Ash-ley said there were several new blog postings found on a google search about Green Eyed Monster.

The bags come in several different designs with more on the way with their second design competition. The designs vary from the minimalist "live enviably" (stress on the "envi" for environment) to the colorful and lighthearted "forest oni," one of the first competition's winning designs.

Although the bags are priced at a higher price point than most reusable bags ($25 plus shipping), the sisters are hoping to attract a certain niche of people who genuinely care about what the bag is made out of, where it came from and are drawn to the limited edition artwork on the bags.

"We hope people see the importance of the choices we made and they make," said Ashley.

Most of all, the Ulmer sisters hope to give customers a fashionable choice to tote along to the grocery store, farmer's market or just around town — and save those plastic bags along the way.

"It's a simple habit, but it is one that makes a difference," said Ashley.

The company is still getting off the ground, but both women have plenty of ideas of how to grow the company. They hope to integrate youtube videos and other multimedia elements to the website. And host art competitions for specialized bags for other earth-friendly companies. Doing something more with those friendly-looking monsters is also on the table such as stuffed animals made from recycled materials or even an environmentally conscious cartoon.

"We like to think big and who knows what the next step will be," said Kimberly.

Ashley agrees, "we don't want to be static, we're trying to be as dynamic as possible."

The ultimate goal for the sisters and the business is to do whatever they can to lower (and eventually eliminate) the use of plastic bags across the country.

In addition to nurturing Green Eyed Monster, both Ashley and Kimberly are pursuing other interests and goals. Ashley, a newlywed, is expecting a daughter in the spring and is pursuing a master's degree in public art at the University of Southern California. Kimberly is currently working in a neuroscience lab at Brown University.

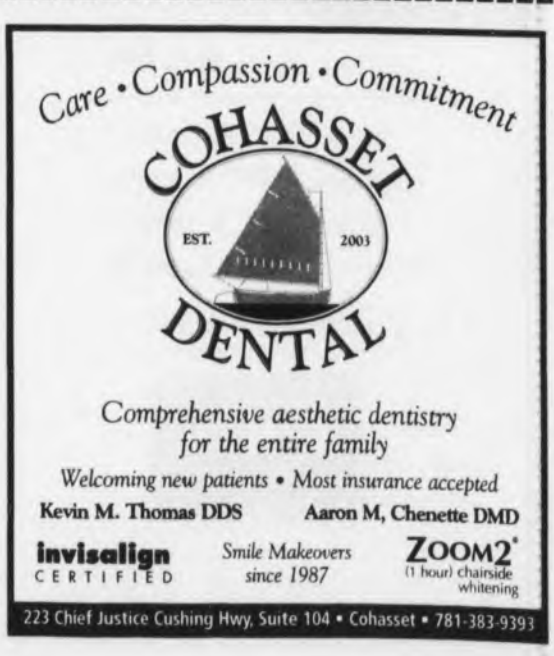
The Green Eyed Monster totes are currently sold exclusively online at www.greeneyed.com.

Stormwater Advisory looking for members

The Board of Selectmen has voted to create a five-member Stormwater Advisory Committee, which among other tasks, will conduct public education activities in support of stormwater remediation, provide opportunities for public participation in stormwater and watershed remediation discussions, conduct an annual inventory of flood prone areas in Cohasset, seek funding sources for stormwater remediation and advise the Board of Selectmen on recommended capital expenditures.

Liaisons from the Board of Selectmen, Board of Health, Conservation Commission, Water Commission, Sewer Commission, Planning Board, School Committee, and Department of Emergency Management are encouraged to participate. Appointments to the Stormwater Advisory Committee will first be made from interested members of the liaison boards and committees listed above, then from volunteers from the community, with preference given to people with relevant professional qualifications, including licensed professional engineers in hydrological or environmental specialties, architects and attorneys specializing in environmental law, and public relations professionals.

Interested candidates are requested to submit a letter of interest and resume by February 20, 2009 to William R. Griffin, Town Manager, Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 or by e-mail to: wgriffin@townofcohasset.org.



State aid dips; projected local receipts down

No projected shortfalls in fiscal 2009

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The budget picture is getting clearer each week, but the challenges facing the budget have been known for quite awhile.

While Cohasset's operational budget relies on state aid for under 10 percent of its revenue, state aid cuts combines with a projected reduction in local receipts could mean some tough decisions are ahead.

In the most immediate future, Cohasset has to deal with a mid-year $62,000 state aid cut. Fortunately for the town and its employees, Town Manager Bill Griffin is not projecting any other revenue shortfalls for the current year (fiscal 2009). However, he is keeping an eye on the motor vehicle excise receipts show in the coming months.

"We will deal with the loss of state aid through turnbacks from budgets, and the building permits for the Avalon project should boost our permit fees on a one time basis," said Griffin. According to a recent interview with the Mariner with Avalon developers they are working toward a July 1 timeframe to begin construction.

With fiscal 2010, Griffin is still working through each department's budget (each department submitted a budget with a 5 percent decrease over the current fiscal). Griffin told the Selectmen he would have more specific recommendations in another week or two.

After hearing from Governor Deval Patrick last week that the chapter 70 state aid for education would be level funded, Griffin began to feel the town as a whole could survive the fiscal year.

With that being said, the town is still facing a significant reduction in revenues almost across the board.

"We are seeing a significant reduction in state aid coupled with reductions in available funds and a decrease in local receipts," said Griffin.

Currently, the town is projecting a $550,000 increase in total new revenue for the coming fiscal year. However, close to half of the new revenues will be consumed by non-departmental related expenses: a 9 percent increase in health insurance ($232,000), a 9 percent increase in pension assessment ($101,322), a 5 percent increase in Medicare assessment ($11,300) and a 7.6 percent increase in other state charges ($25,000).

Several non-departmental expenses are decreasing approximately $96,000 to temper the increases.

All told, the net new revenue available is about $279,000.

At far as local receipts, the town is projecting a 15 percent decrease in motor vehicle excise tax and a 25 percent reduction in investment income. Several categories are projecting an increase: a 20 percent increase from recreation revenue, a 20 percent increase from harbor fees and a 15 percent increase in licenses and fees. Overall, the projection is a three percent reduction in local receipt revenue.

Griffin is still waiting to hear about this year's South Shore Vocational assessment, which can vary greatly from year to year.

The Selectmen asked no specific questions about the budget at the meeting.

Senior Center effort plugs along

The town would have to enter into a land swap, purchase or possibly a gift from the trustees in order to build. There is a five-acre swath of town-owned land formerly used by the Water Department that could be transferred to the Swim Center in some sort of land swap.

Part of the problem Tuesday morning was no representative from Swim Center was in attendance to express that group's position on the project. At a previous meeting in January, Swim Center Trustee Diane Karcher said they were willing to work with the town but did have concerns with liability and other legal considerations.

Preliminary plans propose a 14,000 square foot building with two floors. The first floor would be devoted to the senior center and it was suggested six senior affordable apartments be created on the second floor.

The initial cost estimate for the construction is approximately $2.2 million, unfurnished. It is the Elder Affairs' vision to construct in the most environmentally conscious and energy efficient manner.

One of the key questions answered seemed to be the project and building would be town-owned. There was some talk about the proposed senior center being owned by a private non-profit, the Friends of the Elder Affairs, with a lease to the town, much like the one currently with the South Shore Community Center.

It was clear from all parties representing the town — Town Manager Bill Griffin, Selectman Karen Quigley and Elder Affairs director Linda Elworthy — that they would like to see the project and ultimate building be a town effort.

"I feel very uneasy having a building for the town's seniors being owned by the Friends (of Elder Affairs)," said Quigley. Griffin warned while there was good group in charge of the Friends now, the organization could be very different in a few years.

"The town of Cohasset as a corporation will still be around," said Griffin. He offered an example in Yarmouth where a senior center was privately built and owned, but the private entity did not keep up with the maintenance and the town eventually had to step in to purchase the building.

To further add to the argument of having a town-owned senior center, Social Service League representatives, who have indicated they are looking to contribute a substantial portion of the building cost, said the effort would have a better shot of getting the money if it was a town-owned project.

With that questions somewhat settled, advising engineer John Cavanaro said the next step would be to establish a basic framework for the project. He stressed the town needed to work collaboratively with the Swim Center to resolve the land ownership issues, sewer connections and take into consideration what the Swim Center may have planned for expansion.

"Philosophically, I'd like everyone to become a winner with this project," said Joe Nedrow, chairman of the Council on Elder Affairs. That means he would like to see the swim center get something in return for the land, either through additional parking, a portion of town land, or some other means.

The next meeting for discussion of the proposed senior center will be Feb. 24. In the meantime, Griffin will work with Town Counsel to draft a Town Meeting article that would give the town the authority to accept a gift from the Swim Center.

Briefly

Stormwater bylaw review

It's been nearly a year since the stormwater management bylaw was approved by Town Meeting and Selectman Ralph Dormitzer would like to re-visit it to ensure it is working properly. Three applications have come before the Conservation Commission seeking stormwater permits.

"There's been a fair number of difficulties at the three hearings I've been at…there's some concern on how it is implemented," said Dormitzer.

Stormwater Advisory Committee approved

At long last, the Stormwater Advisory Committee has a name, a charge and a desired five-member composition. After many meetings and discussions to hammer out the committee's charge, the Selectmen unanimously approved a final draft this past Monday night.

The Board of Selectmen will populate the Stormwater Advisory Committee through appointments as applications come in.

The Stormwater Advisory Committee will chiefly be in charge of conducting public education activities in support of stormwater remediation, provide opportunities for public participation in stormwater and watershed remediation discussions, conduct an annual inventory of flood prone areas in Cohasset, seek funding sources for stormwater remediation and advise the Board of Selectmen on recommended capital expenditures.

Myles Garbarini wins Geography Bee at Derby

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

HAPPY FEBRUARY

Happy February 2009 Cohasset! How is everyone doing? The snow this week was pretty organized I think as far as snow goes and this weekend is supposed to be nice and have some melting as well. Spring is coming but I think we still have a few weeks to get through. Oh well, this is New England after all. If you have any fun plans for February vacation please let me know and share some of the stories with Cohasset.

DEAN'S LIST

We have a number of Cohasset students to recognize this week. Congratulations to all of you on your accomplishments.

Kristen Dooley, a sophomore in International Business at Bryant University made the fall semester dean's list at Bryant University.

The dean's list for the Fall 2008 semester from the Wentworth Institute of Technology had Cohasset student, Adrian Batson named to it. Nice work.

Another student, Roger Earl was named to the Fall 2008 dean's list for academic achievement from Champlain College. Roger is majoring in Multimedia and Graphic Design.

Also, Charlie Czerkawski was named to Connecticut College's Fall 2008 dean's list as he earned a grade point average of at least 3.3.

Named to the 2008 fall dean's list at Saint Michael's College are: Michela O. Muir, daughter of Constance Muir, a senior psychology major; and Justin J. Previte, son of Joseph and Marilyn Previte, a senior English literature major.

Students who achieve a grade point average of at least 3.4 at the end of a semester are recognized for their scholarship by inclusion on the dean's list at St. Michael's.

Great job to all of you, keep up the efforts.

GEOGRAPHY BEE

Derby Academy Grade 8 student Myles Garbarini of Cohasset won the school-level competition of the 2009 National Geographic Bee.

The school-level Bee, at which students answered oral questions on geography, was the first round in the 21st annual National Geographic Bee, which is sponsored by the National Geographic Society.

By receiving the highest score from among all his Derby Grade 8 peers, Myles has earned the opportunity to take a written qualifying examination in order to compete at the state level.

The national competition will be held in Washington, D.C. this coming May 19 and 20. The first-place national winner will tour the Galapagos Islands with national finals moderator and "Jeopardy!" host Alex Trebek and will also receive a $25,000 college scholarship.

HOCKEY BOOSTERS

Hey everyone, here is a last-minute reminder of something super fun to do with other adults here in town and guess what, IT IS TONIGHT! The Cohasset Hockey Boosters is holding a Winter Extravaganza Warm Up, their 3rd Annual Dance with all proceeds go to support the CHS Hockey Team. The dance will be held at the Red Lion Inn in Cohasset Village Feb. 6th from 8 pm to midnight. The musical entertainment will be performed by The Gratefuls for everyone to moove and groove to. There will be cash prizes, a Silent Auction with over 30 awesome items to bid on and everyone will be able to witness the "Mystery Event!"

Admission for this great night of fun is $20 per person and will include Hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar will be available for all. So get out your grown up partying outfits and head on down to the Red Lion Inn tonight. Tickets will be able to be purchased at the door.

PASSION PLUNGE

Looking for a great event to take part in or, go and watch and cheer some great people on? Well, Plunges seem to be all the news this week, and here we go announcing the big one the 11th Annual Passion Plunge for Special Olympics Massachusetts. This year's event will be Saturday, Feb. 14th, at noon at Nantasket Beach, one of 4 sites for the Plunge this year. Last year over 900 Plungers raised more than $400,000. Several brave Cohasset supporters have signed on to Plunge already and they are seeking pledges of support for this challenge. Cohasset Special Olympics athletes Jay Nothnagle, Nicholas Sida, and Brook Miele were among the first to sign up and they will be joined by Jeff Nothnagle, Graham and Charlotte Sida, Laurel Hickey, Brendan Michaud, Doug Yeager, Hayes Keniley, Jack DeLorenzo, Connie Afshar, Rich Quebec and Dave Kusek. There is still plenty of time to join the South Shore Mariners Team. If plunging is not for you, please support these brave participants by an online donation at www.passionplunge.org or in person by check or cash to any one of them.

Special Olympics Massachusetts supports 11,680 athletes with intellectual disabilities who train and compete in 26 sports year-round. No athlete is ever charged to participate and the funds raised by our Cohasset Plungers come back to our local programs. The South Shore Mariners is a team of 85 athletes, ages 8 to 65 from seven area towns.

CREATIVE NITES

Creative Nites in Our World are continuing on Friday nights and your kiddos would love to come and enjoy the evening while the grown-ups go out to play as well. The evenings are scheduled to begin at 4:30 and dinner, art-time fun, music and movement, movies, games and more are included in the nite. Pick up time is no later than 9:30 pm and it is for ages 2-10! In addition, registrations are being accepted for February Vacation Creative Kidcamps which are being held at the Museum Tuesday-Friday of that week with morning and afternoon sessions for ages 2-10 with themes in Science, Music, Art, Stuff A Wintertime Friend and so much more.

Also, classes are getting ready to kick off for our Late Winter Wonderland Session for ages 2-10 in a variety of themes and are scheduled to begin after February Vacation Week and we would love to have more kiddos on board. If you would like to reserve some times or, would like more information, please call 781-383-3198 or send an email to ourworldprograms@comcast.net

ANIMAL SHELTER

The Boy Scouts (Bears Den 2) are collecting donations for the Scituate Animal shelter from now until Feb. 24th. If you have anything you would like to donate, please go to the front hall at the Deer Hill School and look for the appropriate boxes to leave your items in. A thank you is being sent in advance to all who donate to this cause.

TALENT SHOW

Here is another Save The Date event to mention to all. The Second Congregational Church's Spring Fling Time and Talent Auction, often described as "the most fun you can have in a church" is an evening of great food, terrific auction items, and fabulous company. The evening begins at 6:30 with gourmet appetizers, and the silent and live auctions begin promptly at 7:00 and continue along with periodic raffles until 9:30. Auction items include sports and theater tickets; vacation homes; private baseball, sailing, and riding lessons; photography and artwork; and gift baskets. The event is taking place on Saturday, March 21 from 6:30 to 9:30 pm and fun will be had by all who attend. No admission fee – but to reserve a table (up to 10 people) and/or tickets, please RSVP to the church office at scc@2ndcc.org or 383-0345.

POST PROM

Families should have received a letter in the mail detailing the reason for a Post Prom event. The event is planned in order to give our kids a fun and safe experience following the prom.

In order to provide this, the committee relies on donations and would appreciate families' contributions.

If they did not receive a letter, they can still contribute by dropping off an envelope addressed to the Post Prom Committee to the high school.

That is all for this week. Send in your news no later than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm for that weeks paper.

CHS debaters are up to the challenge

Team uses format to frame argument

By Emily Toomey
CHS CORRESPONDENT

Resolve: The United States federal government should substantially increase alternative energy incentives in the United States. This statement seems simple enough, but to high school debaters across the South Shore, it means endless research, late nights, and arguments. The Cohasset debate team, coached by Mr. Willis and Mr. Fish, sees it no differently.

If you are unfamiliar with Cohasset's cross-examination debate format, here's an overview:

Each team consists of four members, two negative and two affirmative, in which the pairs never debate against each other. The affirmative team forms a plan to fulfill the year's resolution and it is the negative team's job to find flaws in plans of affirmative teams from other schools. During the debate, each person will have a chance to make an eight-minute speech, a three-minute questioning of an opponent, and a four-minute rebuttal. In order to win, the affirmative team must completely cover all six stock issues: topicality, solvency, workability, inherency, need for change, and advantages over disadvantages. The negative team only needs to show that the plan fails one of the issues to win.

If it sounds complicated, that's because it is. Yet, experienced debaters will testify that the format becomes easier and almost mechanical as years go on, but the competition grows harder. To truly be a good debater, it is vital to perfect public speaking, organization, and a critical eye, not to mention patience while scouring through endless research. In Mr. Fish's opinion, "to be a successful debater, one must research and form a cogent, focused, and rhetorically strong argument rooted in solid support." The judges have a difficult task as well, he says, because they must allow the debaters to make their case and not choose based upon personal bias.

However, debating is not without enjoyment and certainly has benefits. According to Mr. Willis, "The best thing about organized debate for students is that it forces them to organize their thoughts and arguments in a way that prepares them for future academic work, but in a fun and competitive environment." He also insists that debaters consistently become better students, thinkers, writers, and public speakers. This year's topic is a tough one, he says, because students' policy plans have to be new and original, different from those proposed by our government daily. Mr. Fish believes that the topic is beneficial, stating, "In the global context of a recent energy crisis and the clear national interest of alternative energy as a true goal, the topic is relevant and one about which the debaters can truly be passionate." Additionally, Mr. Willis says that Cohasset debaters get the valuable change to meet students from other schools. Cohasset debates against New Bedford, Old Rochester, Bishop Stang, Bishop Connelly, Bishop Feehan, Somerset, West Bridgewater, Hingham, Scituate, and Foxboro. Another advantage to joining the debate team – tie/pen pocket tee-shirts that Mr. Fish jokingly calls "existential beauty in cotton."

Overall, debate entails research, confidence building, and lifelong experience. It enables students to obtain a solid understanding of both the ever-changing world and their own capabilities to affect it. So, if it sounds like a tempting offer, start investigating and grab a podium.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Senior Center

The Cohasset Mariner has been around since the late 1970s. The current editor has been at the helm since March of 1992.

"Seniors" – whom we would define as those 65 and older (although AARP puts seniors at 50 and older) – have, in our experience been both a large and important part of Cohasset.

In fact one of the first editorials we penned in the spring of 1992 after the annual Town Meeting was called "Gray Guards." We talked about how impressed we were as we looked over a sea of "gray-haired" heads at Town Meeting that it was the senior population in this town that made up the majority at Town Meeting, stayed the entire time, spoke about the issues, and cared about our democracy.

Over the years, that has not changed. Our seniors continue to attend Town Meeting – no matter how long it is – and participate in many other town activities. Seniors are indeed a gift and go to the heart of who we are as a community.

As a population, we need the senior perspective, especially now as times get tough. Those who make up the ranks of the "Greatest Generation" (those who lived through the Depression and World War II) are into their 80s and older now. We need them more than ever to share their experiences and show us how, as a nation – and as a world – we can pull together, even when the odds seem to be stacked against us.

As we come to grips with the current local, state, national and global financial crisis – many might think that now is not the time to talk about a new Senior Center.

Plans for a new Senior Center are still in the early stages. A lot of pieces still have to come together.

But one thing is for sure: the current Senior Center has outgrown its home at the South Shore Community Center at 3 N. Main St. Even though activities, such as special luncheons can be held off site at locations like Atlantica – just the day-to-day programs, appointments and meetings have stretched the Community Center space way past its limits.

We also know that in tough times, we need goals and things to look forward to. The early 60s were not the best of times on many levels. We were living through the "hottest" part of the Cold War, for example. Schoolchildren today don't have drills for a nuclear attack – but the children of the early 60s did.

However, President Kennedy knew that sending a man to the moon was important, even though, some could argue that money and scientific expertise could be better spent on other programs.

In times like these, we still need to shoot for the stars. The Senior Center might just be the project that the community could rally around. Over the years, Cohasset has been so fortunate to have many caring people, who have given back to the town. We hope they will rally to the cause.

Those new to Cohasset may not know that the lightkeeper's residence was a derelict building in the early 1990s. Today, with its Bancroft Hall, it is a town gem – with most of the funds for reconstruction donated by Cohasset residents. The building, which was also made possible through work contributions from the South Shore Vocational School and volunteer labor from the Braintree Rehabilitation Center, reopened in 1994.

Whether the economy is good or bad, the time has come for a new Senior Center.

Let's make it happen!

MEETINGS

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:

Advisory Committee, Feb. 17 , 7 p.m.
Alternative Energy Committee, Feb. 17 and March 17, 7:30 p.m.
Board of Health, Feb. 26, 7 p.m.
Cable Advisory Committee, Feb. 12, 7:30 p.m.
Capital Budget Committee, Feb. 24 at 7:30 p.m.
Conservation Commission, Feb. 12, 7 p.m.
Council on Elder Affairs, Feb. 9, 9 a.m. at 3 N. Main St.
Economic Development Committee, Feb. 18 at 7:15 p.m.
Library Trustees, Feb. 10, 7 p.m. at the library.
Recreation Commission, Feb. 4, 6:30 p.m.
School Committee, Feb. 25, 7 p.m. at the high school.
School Improvement, March 4 at 2:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Middle High School.
Selectmen, Feb. 9, 9 a.m., at Senior Center, 3 N. Main St., and 7 p.m. at Town Hall.
Sewer Commission, March 3 at 6 p.m.
Water Commission, Feb. 23, 6 p.m. at the King Street Plant.

All meetings take place at Town Hall unless otherwise noted. Call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100 for updates and additions.

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. We promise to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sandy Cove route supported by a 3-1 vote

TO THE EDITOR:

When the Selectmen discussed the Treat's Pond issue on Jan. 26, they voted 3-1 in favor of a motion to support a route across Sandy Cove. Those in favor were Selectmen Carlson, Koed, and Quigley; Selectman Carr voted against; Selectman Dormitzer, who is recused because of a conflict of interest, did not vote.

This important information was omitted from the Mariner's report of this meeting (Treading Water, Jan. 30, 2009)

Nuclear energy renaissance

TO THE EDITOR:

Although nuclear power has seemed dormant in the U.S., our 104 nuclear-generating plants generate 20 percent of our electricity. Almost all have been, or will be, granted extensions to their operating licenses. There are 17 applications to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to build new plants, and more are planned. Several designs of the nuclear portion of the plants already have been preapproved. The formerly stultifying licensing process (which greatly extended construction schedules at such cost as to discouraged exploitation of nuclear energy) has been drastically changed to be more expeditious without sacrificing rigor. Newer plants are more fuel efficient and more thermally efficient. Waste treatment is essentially a political, but not a technical, problem.

Worldwide, there are 439 plants generating 16 percent of the world's electricity, with 43 under construction, 106 more in planning, and 206 more being considered.

Europe has added little nuclear generation for some years, in part because of slackening electricity demand, in part because of increased output from existing nuclear plants, and because of the emotional response to Chernobyl. However, several new plants now are in the works. (The authoritative report by the international scientific study, 20 years after the accident, revealed that the consequences of the accident were far less significant than the media mill had trumpeted, and it is well-known that the Chernobyl reactor was atypical and lacked many safety features universally applied elsewhere.)

The Asian nations have continually expanded their nuclear generating capacity, and are responsible for most of the 43 plants now under construction. However, the realities of potential fossil fuel supply and of environmental damage, the quantitative limitations of renewable energy sources, and the pressures of demand growth in electricity, are impelling a reawakening and nuclear renaissance in the West. Regrettably, although nuclear energy was pioneered in the U.S., and our reactors and technology exported worldwide, we are no longer the world leader. Reprocessing and breeders (which can multiply our supply of fissile uranium by a factor of 60) probably will be exploited elsewhere before we get on the ball again.

Anyway, the minor squabbling over wind turbines will be small potatoes compared to the ruckus over proposed new nuclear plants. But maybe our elected officials, who often espouse nuclear privately but believe political expediency requires a negative (or equivocal) public stance, will stiffen their spines.

Get your tickets now for the showdown between the naysayers and the far-sighted!

Sharing powerful story

TO THE EDITOR:

Dear Citizens of Cohasset,

I heard Professor David Blight speak at Yale University last May. His eloquent presentation concluded with the information that an escaped slave, John Washington, had spent his last five years in Cohasset, Massachusetts. I almost fell off my chair. I was determined to get him to come to our town and share this powerful story

David Blight will be speaking at Cohasset High School at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 12. Please come and celebrate Abraham Lincoln's two hundredth birthday at this historical event.

HEALTH NOTES

Pediculosis an unpleasant problem!

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Perhaps, the Board of Health should not intervene in a situation which is not strictly a health issue, but information has come to light which may affect the some of our children and, since the Mass Dept. of Public Health has relevant material to which we at the BoH wish to add a few things, the topic seems to be appropriate. Unfortunately, some children at the Deer Hill and Osgood schools have contracted head lice. While posing no health threat they are a nuisance and apt to spread to other children if precautions are not taken. These most common lice, wingless insects that survive by feeding on human blood, cannot jump or fly and don't burrow under the skin. They live mainly on the scalp, at the base of the neck and in eyebrows and eyelashes, laying up to six eggs per day, attaching their eggs (called nits) to strands of hair close to the scalp.

Generally spread through direct, person-to-person contact, children (3 to 12 years old) are more often infested than adults, but anyone is vulnerable. Simply washing with soap and water has little effect. An infested person will continue to spread head lice to other people until receiving a course of treatment that kills all of the head lice and their eggs. Fortunately, pets cannot spread head lice.

Symptoms: Sometimes itching is caused by reaction to saliva and feces, but many children have no symptoms. The best way confirm infestation is to find a living adult louse; difficult to accomplish because they are fast and hide well. Identification is usually made by detecting nits, tiny, grey, oval specks, commonly found behind the ears and near the hairline at the base of the neck. Nits found within one-quarter of an inch from the scalp usually signal that treatment is necessary.

The Remedy: Head lice are a ubiquitous problem in almost all communities. Schoolchildren should be checked regularly and treated when lice are found. Parents

Inside look at steel sheeting

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

More Jerusalem Road Wall – Last week we wrote a small description of the reason that Jerusalem Road is currently closed to traffic and what work workers will be doing in this area. This week we visited that location and thought you'd like to see how the steel sheeting is actually being driven into the ground.

The large steel sheets (about 16 feet long x 27 inches wide) are picked up by a crane and set down so that they are in line with sheeting that has been already placed and the edges are interlocked. The end of the crane in the photo has a hydraulically powered vibrator that is clamped to the steel sheeting and sits on top of the sheeting. When the vibrator is turned on and starts vibrating the steel sheet up and down at a rapid rate, the motion causes the soil to act as a liquid and the sheeting sort of slides into the soil.

In a perfect world, the sheeting driving stops when the sheeting gets to the desired depth. However, this being good old rock-filled Cohasset, the sheeting often comes in contact with rock. Small rocks are usually just pounded to smithereens (a technical term). When, large rocks are encountered, so long as they are far enough below the street, the driving operation will stop and the sheeting will just be cut off so that the tops of all of the sheets are the same height.

The included photo shows the sheeting after the tops have been trimmed to a uniform height that will be just below the surface of the road.

Cohasset and 319 Non-Point Source Pollution Remediation Grants – Cohasset has applied for and has been awarded several Commonwealth funded 319 grants for the remediation of non-point source pollution. Let's first talk about non-point source pollution. This pollution consists of the contaminants that end up in storm water that can't be attributed to a specific source. Thus, the pollution that builds up in storm water on roadways is non-point source pollution. This type of pollution is the opposite of pollution from a specific source, such as a leaky oil tank or a faulty septic system.

These 319 grants, then, can be used to construct systems to clean up the general pollution that collects in the stormwater that washes off our streets. In fact, in this instance one of the grants is specifically intended to clean-up the storm water that drains into Little Harbor. We've talked about various methods of storm water clean-up in the past, so we won't go into the technical side of clean-up here. When the Commonwealth awards grants like these, it is common for the state to require the Town to come up with a portion of the funds ourselves. These funds are called "matching" funds. The interesting thing is that the matching fund contribution from the Town sometimes does not actually have to be in dollars. It can, depending on the grant, be contributed as "in-kind" services. For example, time spent by the DPW can be used as matching funds so long as the activity being done by the DPW is in support of the grant project goals.

Also, at Town Meeting the Town voted separate monies (not a part of the residential sewer project charges borne by the Little Harbor Residents) to be spent as a coincident project with the Little Harbor Project to do storm drainage and storm water clean-up around the Little Harbor basin. And, we also have a 319 grant to do storm-water cleanup as a separate project in the Little Harbor basin. Since these two projects are working to the same end, the monies that the Town is spending on the Little Harbor Project for storm water drainage and clean-up can also be used as matching funds for the 319 grant. We'd say that's being pretty smart — generating a bigger bang for our buck!

Greenbush stuff – From time to time we stop by the Greenbush station parking lot to take a count of cars parked in the lot during mid-day. The rationale early-on was that this would give us a relative count of ridership increase as time progressed. Sure enough, we saw the number of cars increase from 75 on the first day of commercial service, to around 190 in September of 2008. Then, late in 2008, the MBTA doubled the parking fees from $2 per day to $4 per day. Since that time, the number of cars in the lot has declined by about 32% to 130.

Although we have no way of knowing, we don't think that the train ridership has dropped by this rather large percentage. We always knew that there were riders who were dropped off at the station and picked up in the evening. However, we had no way to account for this group of non-parking train riders. What we do suspect, is that the number of "drop-offs" has increased dramatically as a consequence of the parking fee increase. But, that's only speculation on our part. What do you train riders see?

Greenbush Open Items – We routinely pass our list of "open items" on to the Greenbush Project Team just to keep the list of items that need to be completed in their field of vision. When we did that recently, their answer was that work was suspended for the remainder of the winter. The project said that they will return in the spring to address these issues.

Think proposals to put Ronald Reagan's profile on the dime or his face along with George and Abe on Mount Rushmore are ridiculous?

Try the Barack Obama Elementary School on Hempstead, Long Island.

Our 44th president didn't even have time to be inaugurated and upset Rush Limbaugh before the folks who run the Ludlum Elementary School got around to changing the letterhead on their stationery. What's next? Sainthood?

I don't know who Ludlum is or was but I'd say he or she has a good case for discrimination.

I haven't seen such idolatry accorded one man who was alive and kicking since Bobby Orr was on the ice in these parts and, to my knowledge, no one has yet named a school for him and he had to actually play a game before he went into the Hall of Fame.

Principal Jean Bligen said the name change from Ludlum to Obama was proposed by the kids in the fifth grade who were so excited over Barack's win that the folks in charge just couldn't disappoint them.

"This is a trivialization of the serious process of naming," said John Gillis, editor of "Commemorations: The Politics of National Identity." "This is all hope and no memory. It's all anticipation and no looking back."

The usual practice is to wait until the great one is dead or at least out of office ahead of a grand jury indictment, before dedicating a monument to his memory, possibly because he still has time to screw up his legacy. Have you ever seen a Richard M. Nixon Middle School?

Since George died in 1799 and Abe in 1865 there has been time to name a Washington Street and Lincoln Street in just about every city and town in the nation, but how do you explain Barack Obama Street in Opa-Locka, Florida?

Or Barack Obama Boulevard in St. Louis, although the U. S. Post Office still thinks of it as Delmar Boulevard?

The last flurry of emotional name-changing that I recall came after the Kennedy assassination in 1963, when Idlewild International Airport became Kennedy International Airport with the stroke of a pen and Cape Canaveral would have been Cape Kennedy until Floridians protested and suggested that Cape Cod change its name instead.

Canada named one of its lesser peaks in the Rockies Mount Kennedy, but the Caribbean island nation of Antigua went the Canucks one better.

The Antiguans changed the name of their highest mountain, 1,300-foot Boggy Peak, to Mount Obama even before he was inaugurated.

And in Perry County, Alabama, where the shooting of a black man by a white state trooper touched off the Selma-to-Montgomery civil rights marches of 1965, commissioners have designated the second Monday in November as Barack Obama Day, a legal holiday.

What do they do for an encore?

Remembering pioneer of rock 'n' roll

COMMENTARY

PAUL CARLSON

Tuesday, Feb. 3 marked the 50th anniversary of the death of Buddy Holly. Charles Hardin (Buddy) Holly was a pioneering rock artist with a short but highly productive and influential career. Born in 1936 in Lubbock, Texas, to a musical family, he turned to rock and roll after attending an Elvis Presley concert in early 1955 and later that year he opened for Presley and Bill Haley and His Comets. In early 1956 he signed his first professional contract.

With his backup band, the Crickets, he began his recording career with his first #1 hit, "That'll Be The Day." "Peggy Sue" followed shortly and reached #3. In December 1957 he performed both songs on the Ed Sullivan Show. In January, he released "Oh Boy" his third Top-10 hit.

In each of these songs his style was already well established: driving rhythm, solid guitar work and clean lyrics. It was great dance music. In that era, rock was new and fun. This was no pretentious art form, just driving straight ahead music. During 1957 and 1958 he had seven Top 40 hits and numerous other popular hits. Holly and the Crickets were also the first all-white group to play at the Apollo Theater in Harlem.

On Oct. 3, 1958 Holly was in "The Biggest Show of Stars for 1958—The Autumn Edition," which kicked off in Worcester, Massachusetts. Buddy Holly and the Crickets share the bill with Bobby Darin, Dion and the Belmonts, Clyde McPhatter, and the Coasters.

In early 1959 the Crickets broke up and Holly and his new wife, Maria Elena, moved to Greenwich Village where he enjoyed playing in Washington Square and local clubs. Late in January, with a new back up group he began the Winter Dance Party Tour with Richie Valens and J. P. "The Big Bopper" Richardson. Following an initial stop at Green Bay, Wisconsin, the tour performed at Clear Lake, Iowa.

After the show, Holly was eager to get to the next stop on the tour, so he chartered a small plane to take him and his new back up group. Richardson talked Waylon Jennings, one of Holly's back up players, off the plane. Richie Valens and the other back-up man, Tommy Allsup, flipped a coin to decide which one would fly. Valens won and jumped on the plane. The weather was snowy and gusty and the plane crashed a few minutes after take off. All three performers and the pilot died in the crash.

One month later "It Doesn't Matter Anymore," written by Paul Anka and recorded by Buddy Holly at his last studio session, became a posthumous hit. Buddy Holly was so prolific that his record company was still releasing original material 10 years later.

During his very brief career, he created such acclaimed hits as "Peggy Sue," "Lonesome Tears," and "Crying, Waiting, Hoping." Other hits were "Rave On," "You're So Square," and "Maybe Baby." In 1969 the album "The Buddy Holly Story" which has been in print for 50 years reached platinum status.

He has also been identified as an important influence by the Beatles (the group's name was derived from the Crickets,) Bob Dylan, and Paul Simon. In 1976 Paul McCartney purchased the rights to Holly's catalogue and in September of that year on Holly's 40th birthday, he organized a weeklong tribute.

Lastly, in 1986: Buddy Holly was one of the original inductees into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. Holly's widow, Maria Elena, accepted on his behalf. The induction statement stated "Buddy Holly played rock and roll for only two short years, but the wealth of material he recorded in that time made a major and lasting impact on popular music."

Don MacLean's 1971 hit song, "American Pie", related the story of the plane crash in Iowa and immortalized the tag line "the day the music died."

To commemorate the death of Buddy Holly, I fired up my turntable, pulled out my vinyl Holly album "Buddy Holly: A Rock and Roll Collection", turned up the volume and remembered a rock era when the music was truly great fun for listening and dancing.

The music has not died – it is alive and well.

LIBRARY CORNER

David Blight to speak on Feb. 12

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348.

Author Visit – David Blight will speak at 7 p.m., on Thursday, Feb. 12, in the auditorium at Cohasset High School. His book, "A Slave No More," has been selected as one of the books for the library's town-wide reading initiative, Cohasset Reads Together. "A Slave No More," in part, focuses on the memoir of former slave John Washington, who eventually settled in Cohasset. Learn more about Cohasset's history and the story of emancipation fro more of the nation's foremost authorities on the U.S. Civil War and its legacy. Pick up free tickets at the library.

Memoir Writing Workshop, Part II – Attend a free memoir writing workshop with Deb Kurliecz at 2 p.m., on Friday, Feb. 13. Those who missed Part I will still be able to gain an understanding of how to organize ideas and thoughts and get started writing a memoir. Call the library to register for this free workshop. Sponsored by the Friends of the Library for Cohasset Reads Together.

Independent Movie Night – The library will show the independent film "The Trap" at 6 p.m., on Thursday, Feb. 19. Free admission and refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

FOR CHILDREN

MamaSteph – Music will be performed for young children at 10:30 a.m., on Mondays, Feb. 9 and 23, and March 2, 9, 16, 23 and 30. All ages and communities welcome. Sponsored by The Friends of the Cohasset Library.

Drop In Story Time – In the Story Room at 10:30 a.m., on Tuesdays, Feb. 10, 17 and 24, and March 3, 10, 17, 24 and 31. Join other for big book adventures. All ages and communities welcome.

Cohasset Reads Together – The third annual town-wide reading program will take place through Feb. 27. Friends of Cohasset Library have provided copies of the book "Barefoot: Escape on the Underground Railroad" for all classrooms at the Joseph Osgood School and copies of the book "Sweet Clara and the Freedom Quilt" for all classrooms at Deer Hill School. These books are also on display in the Children's Room along with other materials that support the theme of "Freedom." Cohasset Reads Together also supports the PSO annual Read-a-Thon that will begin Friday, Feb. 13. More details will follow.

'Our Town' focuses on turbine opposition

This week on "Our Town," co-hosts, Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin, sit down with members of the Cohasset Wind Advisory Committee. Members, Conrad Langenhagen and Jeffrey Patterson, will speak on the current plan before the Cohasset Planning Board to erect two, 460-foot windmills on the Graham Waste site and the impacts they may have on the surrounding areas as well as the town as a whole.

Bus proposal looked at closely

Maintenance cost a concern

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The town currently operates a fleet of seven full-size buses, one mini bus and two special education vans.

The schools need new buses.

At the Capital Budget Committee Tuesday night no one denied the fact the most aging buses need to be replaced with newer models. However, the proposal brought forth raised a lot of questions of high maintenance costs, the best methods to purchase the vehicle(s) and efficiencies within school transportation and throughout the town.

The school department, represented by Superintendent Denise Walsh and Business Manager Dave DeGennaro, came forth with a 10-year, long-term plan to replace the entire fleet. The vehicles would be purchases on a three-year lease-to-purchase financing plan.

The school department and committee feel strongly about a plan being implemented that they have a back-up plan to include the cost in the school's operating budget. The first choice would be to have the cost come out of the capital stabilization fund because it qualifies as a capital purchase.

School Committee chairman Rick Flynn said while the town seemed to recognize the necessity for the replacement of school buses, their purchase has come and gone depending on the budget in a given year.

"It's been awhile since we had a full scale plan," said Flynn.

The town currently operates a fleet of seven full size buses, one mini bus and two special education vans. The newest full size school bus was purchased in 2005; a special education van was purchased in 2008.

Capital Budget Committee (CBC) chairman Steve Gaumer asked why they were proposing the lease to purchase plan over outright purchase.

Walsh said with the uncertainty of the fiscal picture year-to-year they thought the lease plan made the cost more manageable and consistent. Flynn added the lease plan was a way to "jump start" the replacement schedule and hopefully lower the annual maintenance cost.

Gaumer said while the town views the buses as aging, they are being replaced right around the industry standard for bus replacement – 140,000 miles and roughly 10-to-15 year life.

Above all, the Capital Budget Committee was concerned with the high maintenance costs not only with the older buses, but with the newer buses as well. The two oldest buses racked up a maintenance bill averaging $11,000 over the last three years; a bus purchased in 2004 had $11,000 maintenance bill. The maintenance costs include regular maintenance (oil changes etc.) to repair work from suspensions to transmission work.

In fiscal 2008 alone, three of the older buses, each with over 100,000 on it cost about $19,000 in maintenance cost. For the entire fleet including the special education vans and full size buses had a maintenance cost of $126,000.

The committee asked for more broken out detail of the maintenance costs and for more than a one-year snapshot of the cost. The committee questioned the maintenance contract currently used by the school to keep the buses running, adding the town may do better with a fixed contract.

Capital budget committee member Peter Decaprio said he spoke with Scituate schools about their transportation system. They have more buses in reserve and rotate through the buses in order to lengthen the life of the asset. But, in Cohasset, DeGennaro said the issue became one of cost (additional insurance) and storage space.

According to DeCaprio, Scituate had an interest in finding a way to work with Cohasset on school transportation issues.

The committee asked the school to explore options such as regional sharing of maintenance or hiring a town mechanic for the buses and other town-owned vehicles.

"None of use wants to say (no) to the buses, but we're just looking for ways to provide the service efficiently," said Gaumer, adding he didn't expect all the answers tonight but wanted them to begin thinking of long-term efficiencies.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said a possibility could be the sharing of a bus between multiple towns, similar to what is down in the Fire Department. Scituate, Norwell and Cohasset share the use of an extra ambulance in the case a primary response ambulance is out of service.

The committee was not clear on their decision of how they would handle the buses. How many they will recommend for purchase or how they should be paid for (out of school operational budget or through the capital stabilization fund). For now, the schools will leave the cost in their budget in a special transportation line item.

"We don't want to see it in two separate places, or in neither," said Walsh.

The Capital Budget Committee only makes recommendations to Town Meeting; voters have the final say on how the money gets spent.

After the school representatives left, the committee reverted back to their discussion on the maintenance cost of the buses and a discussion on how many buses should be purchased.

"More questions came out of the maintenance data than answers," said Gaumer. "For the cost of the maintenance alone the town could have bought one and a half buses."

The discussion then moved to the larger question of how to start centralizing services needed across all or most town departments (vehicle maintenance, technology).

"There's so much duplication," said Decaprio.

Police Beat

operated by a Hingham resident, that was headed south on 3A, attempted to stop at the light but slid right through colliding with the Jeep. A registry check on both vehicles revealed the operator of the Nissan had an expired license. He is being summonsed for unlicensed operation. The Nissan was towed; the Jeep was drivable.

• 5:54 p.m., Saturday (Jan. 31), Depot Court. The Cohasset operator of a 2006 Honda, parked on the street, found a note from the motorist of a 2007 Nissan from Hingham, who had hit her car. Police logged the information and the insurance companies will handle the damage.

• 6:17 p.m., Sunday (Feb. 1) a 911 caller from Lamberts Lane reported her neighbor had backed into her car that was parked on the street. Police said damage was minor and the residents exchanged papers.

Banned

A "suspicious" man has been banned from the Cohasset Walgreen's by virtue of a no-trespass order after he asked the clerk if he could use her credit card for some purchases after it was determined he could not use his card, police said.

The incident was reported at 10:21 a.m. on Tuesday (Jan. 27).

Police said the manager talked to the man and the store provided police with the car's registration.

Cohasset police stopped the car at a few minutes past 11 a.m. and advised the subject not to return to Walgreen's.

Vandalism

Police are investigating vandalism to a car parked at the Beechwood Ball Park overnight (Jan. 31-Feb.1). A walk-in to the station reported his windshield had been smashed. No one appeared to be around and the car owner did not know why his car was targeted. It may have been a random act, police said.

Ride home

Cohasset police gave the ex-boyfriend of an employee at a local business a ride home last week after he was apparently dropped off where she worked at about 3:20 a.m.

Police said she called to report her ex-boyfriend was standing outside. There was no restraining order and he apparently wanted to get back together with her. "But she apparently did not want any part of him," Chief Hussey said.

Cohasset police gave him a ride to the Scituate line, where Scituate police picked him up and drove him home.

On the rocks

Police conducted a welfare check on a group of kids climbing on the rocks down by the water off Jerusalem Road, after a concerned resident called, who was worried they might fall in. An officer located the kids and spoke to them; they were OK and not in any danger, but the officer did tell them to be sure to be careful.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives and senators' votes on one roll call from the week of January 26-30.

HOUSE ELECTS DELEO SPEAKER

The House elected Rep. Robert DeLeo (D-Winthrop) as speaker of the 159-member body following the resignation of former Speaker Salvatore DiMasi. DeLeo and Rep. John Rogers (D-Norwood) had been locked in a bitter battle for the post until Rogers dropped out following DeLeo's release of a list of 92 supporters - more than enough to meet the 81-member majority needed for election. DeLeo received the votes of 137 of the chamber's 143 Democrats. Five Democrats were absent and did not vote while Rep. Jennifer Callahan (D-Sutton) voted "present." Rep. Brad Jones (R-North Reading) received the votes of all 16 Republicans and was re-elected GOP minority leader.

INDEPENDENT REDISTRICTING COMMISSION

Senate 7-28, rejected a proposal requiring that the Legislature establish a seven-member independent redistricting commission to draw Massachusetts legislative and congressional districts every ten years. The plan would then be submitted to the Legislature which would vote it up or down. Currently, the Legislature itself draws the districts. The proposal requires the independent commission to follow specific rules including ensuring that districts are compact and contiguous and are not drawn for the purpose of diluting the voting strength of a racial minority, political party or any individual candidate. The commission would also be required to attempt to follow other guidelines including preventing a city or town from being divided into more than one district.

The commission would include a dean or professor of law, political science or government from a Massachusetts institution of higher learning appointed by the governor; a retired judge appointed by the attorney general and an expert in civil rights law appointed by the secretary of state. The other four members would be chosen by the original three members from a list of candidates nominated by the House Speaker, House Minority Leader, Senate President and Senate Minority Leader.

Supporters of the independent commission said that the Legislature has abused its redistricting power and often gerrymanders districts to protect incumbents. They said that this antiquated, partisan system allows the majority party to control the process and permits "legislators to choose their voters." They noted that the independent commission proposal has been endorsed by Gov. Deval Patrick, former Govs. Michael Dukakis and Mitt Romney, the League of Women Voters and Common Cause.

Some opponents of the independent commission said that elected, accountable members of the Legislature, not unknown, unaccountable members of an appointed commission should be responsible for the important job of redistricting. Others said that the independent commission proposal is flawed because the state constitution gives the redistricting power to the Legislature. They argued that it would take a constitutional amendment to give the power to an independent commission. Supporters of the independent commission countered that a constitutional amendment is not necessary. They argued that the Legislature would still have final power to approve or reject a plan proposed by the commission.

The Senate, later on a voice vote without a roll call, approved the establishment of a redistricting commission comprised of 28 legislators that would include 23 Democrats and five Republicans. (A "Yes" vote is for requiring the Legislature to establish an independent redistricting commission. A "No" vote is against an independent redistricting commission).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

$128 MILLION LOCAL AID CUT AND OTHER MEASURES TO BALANCE THE FISCAL 2009 BUDGET - Gov. Deval Patrick unveiled the breakdown of his $128 million local aid cuts and informed cities and towns how much they would each lose. Patrick was given the unilateral power by the Legislature to make local aid cuts in order to help balance the state budget. The governor also used his executive power to help reduce the state's estimated $1 billion plus budget deficit by raising Registry of Motor Vehicle fees and cutting $63 million in the Executive Branch accounts and programs. These cuts ranged from $100,000 for Teenage Pregnancy Prevention Services and $746,002 for Universal Pre-Kindergarten to a $1,318 cut for the state-owned Ponkapoag Golf Course. Patrick also offered several deficit reduction proposals that require legislative approval including using $327 million from the state's Rainy Day Fund; imposing the state's five percent sales tax on some currently exempt items including alcohol purchased at stores, candy and sweetened beverages; a one percent cent increase in the statewide meals and room occupancy taxes; eliminating the current local property tax exemption on above ground poles, wires and switching equipment owned by telecommunications companies and allowing cities and towns to impose an additional one percent local tax on meals and room occupancy.

Treat's Pond documents are in the public domain

COMMENTARY

JIM DRYSDALE

My opinion that the only practical outlet for floodwater is the existing outlet on Sandy Cove is based on a letter (ref 1) from the leader of the Treats Pond Task Force to ACE...

I write to provide further documentation relating to your Mariner report of Jan.30 of my exchange with Mr. Carr on the evolution of the Treats Pond saga. My opinion that the only practical outlet for floodwater is the existing outlet on Sandy Cove is based on a letter (ref 1) from the leader of the Treats Pond Task Force to ACE stating "With your new numbers, the cost of the Army Corps project (for Whale Meadow) will be $2.17 million" and 'With regard to the Atlantic Ave. route, it will, based on declarations by the attorney for Peter Roy, be tied up in litigation indefinitely should we proceed on that assumption' (ref 1).

Regarding pressures to relocate the outlet, the record shows that the only course recommended by experts in 2003-5 was to modify the existing outlet. According to notes from a 2003 meeting with Sandy Cove residents, an expert from NOAA suggested to 'Turn the Treats Pond drain onto Sandy Cove into a more effective, lower maintenance, and invisible outflow by using a field of underground perforated piping on Sandy Cove, similar to what's found in septic system fields. If this approach was implemented, there would be no digging up of the drain outflow (as is done now) or any visible outflow pipe (as it was once before).' (ref 2).

Modifying the present outlet was also the only course pursued for the next 3 years by the Army Corps of Engineers. In a Preliminary Restoration Plan dated July 15, 2004, ACE proposed four alternatives for study - a) no action; b) restoration of an open tidal creek to restore tidal flushing, including options to manage sediment accumulation in the creek; c) constructing a larger, enclosed culvert connecting Treat's Pond to Sandy Cove; and d) measures to restore vegetation communities surrounding the pond. Preliminary estimates of construction cost for this project are based on the enclosed culvert option for 'a 6' by 10' "stop log structure" or a Sagamore Marsh culvert 6' by 6' culvert' (ref 3). On Aug. 17, 2004 a letter from the selectmen's office committed to pay an estimated $532,000 as the town's share of costs for a new pipe on Sandy Cove (ref 4). On Oct. 22 2004, ACE initiated study coordination for the Sandy Cove project with US Environmental Protection Agency (ref 5).

This plan was opposed by some neighbors. In 2006 the leader of the Task Force stated at a meeting with ACE "that there were certain unacceptable outcomes, including any pollution of Sandy Cove; any flooding of properties; any damage to the barrier beach; and any large, visible manmade structures on Sandy Cove"(ref 6). He also stated that "Land Court maps do not show easements for the pipe" (ref 7). These concerns and other incorrect statements about easements from the Task Force (ref 8) led ACE to budget unnecessarily for real estate costs for easements on Sandy Cove. ACE was also told that "resistance to this route from Sandy Cove residents is significant" (ref 9). ACE has stated that "they only wanted to do what was acceptable to the neighbors' (ref 10). They further stated that "When we examined the placement of an outlet at Sandy Cove, members of the Sandy Cove Association expressed concerns about the safety of small children and pets as well as aesthetics" (ref 11).

These many documents support my statements and have been given to the editor. I presented some at the meeting but with the evidence scattered over 400 pages it was not practical to present all in a short period at the end of yet another tortuous session on Treats. However, the complete dossier was displayed at the public forum on Treats Pond organized by the selectmen.

In order that others may form their own opinions, I intend to put the complete dossier of this information obtained by the Freedom of Information Act into the public domain. I have asked the selectmen to make the complete dossier available for public inspection at the Town Hall.

Pediculosis an unpleasant problem!

FROM HEALTH, PAGE 8

should learn to recognize head lice and, as an extra precaution, teach their children not to share hats and scarves or personal hair care items, such as brushes, combs and hair ties.

The Treatment: Treatment consists of shampooing the hair with a medicated shampoo or cream rinse containing one of the following chemicals: pyrethrin, permethrin, lindane or malathion. The chemicals used to kill the head lice and their nits are similar to those used for mosquito protection; may be toxic and should be used with medical advice. Follow label instructions carefully. Removal of all nits after treatment is not necessary to prevent further spread, although some schools and daycare centers may have "no-nits" policies. Finally, check the hair daily for 10 days for more nits or newly hatched head lice. If found, additional treatment may be necessary.

Generally spread through direct, person-to-person contact, children (3 to 12 years old) are more often infested than adults, but anyone is vulnerable

Head lice do not survive for long periods of time off of the scalp, and they do not tolerate common vegetable oils. Control may be accomplished using such substances, but elimination requires a mild pesticide like those mentioned above.

Follow Up: Wash headgear, pillow cases, and towels in hot water and dry in a dryer on the hot cycle. Unwashable headgear should be sealed in a plastic bag for two weeks to kill any lice.

Combs and brushes can be washed with lice-killing shampoos or soaked in hot (>130°F) water for 5 minutes. Thoroughly vacuum rugs, upholstered furniture, and mattresses.

Do not use insecticide sprays to treat infested people!

Reinfection occurs with some regularity and can be frustrating for parents, teachers and children. For more information, contact your doctor, Mary Goodwin the Public Health Nurse, or the Board of Health. It's not a stigma to contact head lice. Most of us have had them one time or another. It's far better to discuss an infestation openly so that those who have had little or no exposure to the condition can learn from those who possess the experience.

Update on federal stimulus

Town Manager Bill Griffin and Selectman Paul Carlson recently attended a meeting hosted by Congressman Bill Delahunt's office about the possibility of money coming to towns from the federal stimulus package.

"There are a lot of different ways money is coming to Massachusetts," said Griffin. "There will be less money for infrastructure improvements than support for programs."

Part of the reason infrastructure improvements are not a priority is this coming year is a renewal year for a bill for highway improvements and funding could come from there.

Educational programs, particularly for special education, make up a large portion of the funding.

Griffin and other town officials relayed concerns about what role the state would play in how the money would be distributed.

At the meeting the towns were directed to narrow their project applications to their top three (Cohasset submitted applications for 18 projects). Griffin said the town would have to strategize a bit to ensure the top three projects meet the criteria — and subsequently have a better chance of receiving funding.

'Healing Field' planned for Memorial Day

The Sons of the American Legion is again planning to install a Healing Field as part of the town's Memorial Day 2009 observances.

The effort should result in hundreds of American flags on eight-foot-tall poles temporarily installed on the town-owned island at the corner of Border and Summer streets. The island faces Veterans Memorial Park where the annual Memorial Day observances are held.

The flags sell for $25 and can be dedicated to anyone. In other words, the purchase of a flag is not limited to those honoring someone who is serving or has served in the Armed Forces. (Those who purchase flags will be able to pick them up after 10 days).

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, please visit www.healingfield.org/cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the post at 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post. All proceeds will go to veterans' projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

All proceeds will go to veterans' projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

Pressing miscues into victory

Cohasset pressure fuels comeback win over Norwell

In the game of basketball, if you don't have height as your advantage, you need to have something else to give you the competitive edge.

On Friday night, in front of a near capacity crowd, Senior co-captain Marcus Charles put on a tremendous display of speed, instinct, athleticism, and pure heart in the fourth quarter to lead his team to a 51-48 victory against the visiting Norwell Clippers .

The Clippers came out strong, looking to even the score after losing to the Skippers in OT on their home court. Although Johnny Maher (12 rebounds, 8 points) controlled the paint, it wasn't enough as the Clippers led 16-11 after the first frame. In the second quarter the Skipper disciplined defense took over and held Norwell to only 5 points in seven minutes, while scoring 15 themselves.

It looked like the Skippers would head into the locker room with a five point edge, but with less than a minute left in the half, Norwell dug deep and scored the points necessary to tie up the ball game.

The Clippers carried that momentum into the third quarter. They built up the lead to seven but with eight seconds left Charles (12 points, 4 steals, 5 assists) nailed a three to cut the lead to four.

Two minutes into the fourth quarter, the Skippers battled back to a tie. It was back and forth for the next several minutes.

Cohasset went up by six with three minutes left to play thanks

CHS skaters face top competition for playoff berth this weekend

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

When is a loss a win?

A) When it is, essentially, a one-goal loss against a team you previously lost to by a seven-goal deficit.

B) When the losing team puts forth an effort/performance that sets the tone for the rest of the season.

The answer could be both, and in fact is.

"It would have been great to take a point or two out of this game, but I'm really pleased with how our guys played from beginning to end," said Cohasset High coach Bob Walsh of last Friday's 5-3 loss to Div. 2 standout Mansfield, the same team that had manhandled his young squad to the tune of 9-2 just five weeks prior.

"We've definitely made strides since the first time we played Mansfield, and that was apparent in this one. This is a game that definitely bodes well for us going forward this season."

Let's hope. The Skippers are fighting an uphill battle at the moment for a postseason berth. With Wednesday's 6-0 victory over winless Hull (0-14), the CHS skaters moved within two games of the all-important .500 mark at 5-7-2.

Of course, the Skippers best shot at qualifying for the tourney could be a second place finish in the South Shore League behind unbeaten Norwell (10-2-2 overall, 9-0 in SSL). This is the position the locals currently hold at 5-2-1 in SSL play by decimal points Abington/East Bridgewater (5-2) and Mashpee (6-4). The bigger factor may be that the Skippers have beaten both chasers in the first of two meetings, so they're in good shape in tiebreaker scenarios.

The matter could well be determined by the end of this weekend, as the Skippers travel to the Rockland Rink to take on Abington/EB tonight (5:40 p.m. start) and to Falmouth Sunday night (6:55 p.m.) to tussle with Mashpee.

The Skippers topped Ab/EB by a 4-0 score the first time around and Mashpee, 7-1. But both those gamed were on Cohasset home Pilgrim Arena ice. Things are different on the road, especially on the other side of the bridge.

Dan Martin
Cohasset Boys' basketball

Dan Martin has been one of Cohasset's biggest reasons that the Skippers will be in the postseason for the first time in several years. Martin is a tenacious scorer, averaging 16.5 points-per-game and rebounder, who has matched up well with other top centers in the league. His leaping steal against Norwell that led to an easy Cohasset bucket was a highlight of the season.

Grapplers warm up winter temps with wins

By Emily Toomey
CHS CORRESPONDENT

This past weekend may have had freezing temperatures, but on Saturday January 31, both the Cohasset wrestlers and fans were fired up. What Coach Sweeney referred to as a "good day in general" involved notable victories and riveting matches.

Cohasset first wrestled against Nauset, who, according to Sweeney, is strong competition. Alex Kinnealey defeated his opponent 9-2, followed by Gus Helbock winning 13-0.

Matt Dooley had a nerve-racking match, gaining three points in the final thirty seconds to win 13-10. Afterwards, Colin Tarpy won by forfeit and Jack Murphy made the first pin of the morning with 32.5 seconds left in the second period. Andrew Littauer also won with eleven points over his competitor, and captains David Toomey and Mike Froio each pinned in the next two weight classes. Thomas Flibotte was successful in the last Nauset match, winning 8-3 and leaving the score 41-30 in Cohasset's favor.

Perhaps the highlight of the day was defeating Scituate 43-27, who Cohasset hadn't beaten in three years. According to Sweeney, both teams were shorthanded, so it made for even competition and a great victory. To start off the matches, Cam Washak pinned in less than thirty seconds and Kinnealey and Graden Foley each won by forfeit.

Dooley triumphed again by points and senior Rudy Helbock carried on the winning streak with his match ending 7-5.

Additionally, Sean MacCarthy won by forfeit and Toomey pinned two weight classes later in 15 seconds. The last two matches were just as successful with Matt Brooks winning by forfeit and Froio pinning with 45.8 seconds left in the first period.

Girls win easily at Winter Carnival

By Susan Franklin

The energy was high in the High School gymnasium as basketball fans lined the bleachers to watch their boys and girls Junior Varsity and Varsity squads battle the Norwell Clippers.

There was a moonwalk to entertain younger fans at halftime breaks and the High School Jazz Band providing music at game breaks. The girls Junior Varsity squad came back strong in a very competitive game to allay an unbalanced loss earlier in the season to the Clippers setting the stage for the Varsity team.

The air was electric with many Norwell fans coming out to cheer on their Clippers. The Varsity Skippers took the floor excited to play.

Coming off commanding wins over East Bridgewater and Harwich, and having defeated a talented Carver team 45-37, Norwell intended to give the undefeated South Shore League leaders a run for their money. It wasn't to be for the Clippers as Cohasset ran away with a 67-40 victory over the Tournament-bound Clippers.

Norwell has a quick players and their aggressive full court man-to-man press on defense challenged the Skippers every move. With passing lanes denied, center Sami Lehr dribbled the court, finding Carly Salerno on who fed her on a give-and-go to put Cohasset ahead 5-3 halfway through the first quarter. Norwell's senior guard proved adept at finding holes in the Cohasset defense driving for two layups.

On the Cohasset end Sami Lehr continued to dominate on the inside and with minutes to play in the quarter, Cohasset held the lead 9-8.

Lindsey Davis sliced through the defense for a layup in the closing minutes and Meredith Kelly joined the scoring ranks with a swish from the corner. Sami Lehr took a turn on the outside feeding the lob to Samantha Crough for two and the quarter ended with Cohasset holding a hard earned 16-8 lead.

Norwell had not presented an outside game so Cohasset col-

Carver's Ali Thatcher drives to the hoop under the close attention of Cohasset's Kayla Farren during Cohasset's recent win at Carver.

Fresh off an historic victory in the Rolex 24 Hours of Daytona, local businessman and racer RJ Valentine (of Hingham) hosted an event at F1 Boston with local racing team, Guardian Angel Motorsports (GAM). GAM drivers, including Cohasset's Dave Quinlan, Bruce Ledoux, Kurt Kossman and Dan Watkins, competed recently in the Rolex race, raising money for Children's Hospital through per lap and single donation pledges. Friends and Children's Hospital representatives gathered at F1 to see Valentine's winning race car and celebrate GAM's efforts in raising nearly $75,000 for Children's Hospital Boston. Oliver Ames 52-21 the meet was speckled with memorable triumphs. Dooley pinned with almost a minute left in the second period, setting his record for that day to 3-0. Murphy followed his lead by making a strong pin in 72.6 seconds into the second period.

Toomey also won all of his matches that day, pinning with 32.2 seconds left in the first period. The most exciting moment on Saturday was undoubtedly Flibotte's victory in overtime, narrowly defeating his opponent 5-3.

The JV wrestlers showed their talent as well on Saturday, starting with MacCarthy's two pins, one of them with 35.2 seconds left in the first period. Billy Mack also pinned twice, the first in 23 seconds into the second period. Finally, Brooks' match resulting in a successful pin with over a minute left in the first period.

Overall, Saturday was victorious and the Cohasset wrestlers revealed both endurance and skill throughout their matches. Evidently, the team wasn't too affected by the glum weather, and with a record of 10-6-1, there's nothing to be grey about.

Hingham introduces new hoops league

The Boys Barker Basketball program in Hingham is pleased to offer a new league for high school boys that are not currently on a high school team.

Registration will be by team only. Each team will require at least 7 players and no more than 10 players. Each team is also required to have a coach that is over age 21. Games will be at the South Shore Sports Center in Hingham. The season will be approximately 8 games, not including playoffs. All teams will make the playoffs. All games will be on Saturday night. Games will be refereed by high school approved refs. The cost will be $875 per team or approximately $125 per player. League games are underway but we are seeking to add teams in-season. Registration will remain open indefinitely until all team slots are filled.

This league is open to all surrounding towns. The league is limited to 8 teams so registration will be on a first come basis. If you are interested, please go to www.hinghambarkerbasketball.com to sign up or call Mark Tyburski at 617-847-1750 x 11 with questions.

Pressing miscues into victory

to two Charles fast break baskets. But Norwell battled back and cut the Skipper lead to three.

Norwell went to the charity stripe and Maher came up with a huge rebound to keep the Skippers on top. Cohasset missed their next shot, Norwell got the board and started the fast break but missed the layup.

Charles came up with the defensive board and the Skippers took some time off the clock, but missed the shot. With 10 seconds left. Cohasset was in full court press. Charles took a foul on the inbound, Cohasset got the ball back, but lost it on their inbounds.

Norwell raced up the court looking for the three to tie, but it didn't happen was as Charles deftly and swiftly poked the ball free and time ran out.

Sr. Danny Martin (14 points, 8 rebounds, 2 steals) had a strong game for the Skippers.

"The huge athletic move Danny made in saving the ball when they threw it out of bounds off the press and passing it to Marcus was just great." said Coach Bo Ruggiero. About a leaping interception that turned into a Charles bucket with just over two minutes left.

"A sweep over a quality team and a quality basketball program like Norwell has is outstanding," said Ruggiero. "I don't know when the last time Cohasset may have swept them in the last ten years. What a great achievement for this group. Coming from behind to win this game shows the pride that is being developed with the team. We were down nine points with four minutes to play and once again, the opponent imploded committing fouls, including a technical and Robert Jones sank 'em both. It was just great discipline on our part."

He continued "Danny and Johnny Maher did a great job on the glass. Danny made some unbelievable blocks and altered some shots. He is really hustling and is a major player right now. Johnny is playing like a veteran. Robbie Mahoney also was very solid in the second half, I needed to give Johnny a few more minutes rest than usual due to his being under the weather and Robbie gave us good minutes going in for both him and Danny. The play of our 'super' sub, Owen Landon was terrific. Not only did he get six points but he played great D. Marcus had some big steals, particularly the one at the end"

Ruggiero said the team earned the win.

"This was a total team effort, everyone had a hand in scoring," he said. "John Sturino had the hot hand in the second half scoring three baskets. Our press is really taking its toll on the opponents as we just wear them down physically and mentally and we get turnovers which are converted into fastbreak points. The boys are really understanding the angles of the press and the nuances of the press and it is a major part of our success, especially with the way they are hustling on it."

Next up was Marian High School, a small Catholic school in Framingham on Super Bowl Sunday. Cohasset eeked out a 46-43 win largely due to Jones' four treys in the game. He led Cohasset scorers with 12 points, 2 steals and 3 assists. It was a scrappy game filled with uncharacteristic turnovers, but the Skippers kept focus and came away with the win.

Seven Skippers contributed to the scoring; Charles (10 points 2 steals and 3 assists.) Martin (9 points, 7 from the free throw line, 16 rebounds and 5 blocked shots), Maher (6 second half points, 5 rebounds, 2 steals, 2 assists), and Mahoney (4 points) Sturino (3 points) and Landon (2 points, 3 rebounds, 2 steals).

Come cheer on the Skippers as they take on the Pirates from Hull tonight at 6:30 pm at the CMHS gym.

Skaters face top competition

"We've seen a lot of strange things on the Cape the last few years," said Walsh, in his third season with the Skippers. "We certainly don't take either Abington or Mashpee for granted at all. There have been a few times this year where we haven't come out firing on all cylinders to start. That's something we can't afford at this point in the season."

Mansfield 5, Skippers 3

This back-and-forth thriller went right down to the wire; the matter finally decided when a weak Mansfield dump-out inside the final minute barely trickled over the goal line of the vacated Cohasset net.

"This was a great high school hockey game to watch," declared Walsh. "The fans got their money's worth. If I'd been just a fan in the stands, I'd have loved it."

Mansfield's first goal touched a Cohasset stick last, a slap shot from the point taking a bad kick off an ill-fated block attempt.

Cohasset's Connor Queenan netted the equalizer late in the opening frame, though, to send it into the break tied at 1-1.

The only goal of the second period came off he stick of Cohasset senior defenseman Ian Lyster. Walsh was about as pleased as a coach could be at that point.

"I'm thinking (Mansfield's) only goal came off a bad bounce, and that we'd played great and bounced back to take the lead with just 15 minutes to go," said Walsh. "Not bad, considering what this (Mansfield) team had done to us the first time."

Unfortunately, the host Hornets potted a pair inside the final stanza's first five minutes to retake the lead.

Unlike the prior meeting, the Skippers would not fold down the stretch. The quickly coming-of-age squad held it together and Andy McKenna netted another equalizer with 4:45 to play, with seniors Andrew Bell and Paul Pozniak each picking up their second assists of the game.

The Hornets would have the final answer with 90 seconds left in regulation, but, as stated on top, Walsh much preferred the "big picture" view.

"Even when we had the lead, we never sat back," said Walsh. "The kids played with confidence and aggressiveness. It was good to see. Mansfield just had a little more than us, at this end, but this performance should definitely be a boost to our team psyche."

Senior goalie Johnny Wade played another strong game in net, stopping 30 shots in the tough luck loss.

Another encouraging sign: the Skippers committed five penalties in the game, but killed off all five, and all four defenseman and top six forwards were mixed in pretty liberally.

"I think all of our top guys have gotten comfortable in the system we put out there," said Walsh. "There have been other times when we've run around a little bit too much in our own end, but tonight I thought all of the guys did a very good job of holding their position and sticking to the system."

Skippers 6, Hull 0

Walsh opened the game skating his entire program against the winless Pirates (0-14), throwing out five forward lines and multiple defensive combos evenly.

When the first period horn sounded with only a Queenan tally recorded on the scoreboard, however, Walsh opted to go with his iron to open the middle frame.

By the time the time clock reached 5:00, Queenan's second tally had been notched on the scoreboard, as had solo scores by defenseman Brian Scott, McKenna and Pozniak.

None of the top defenseman or forwards saw the ice the rest of the way.

Freshman Jamie Faber scored the lone third period goal, his first at the varsity level.

The real highlight of the third, though, was converted sophomore defenseman Jack Nelson manning the net for the first time ever.

The agile sophomore, who has been working closely over the last few weeks with Skippers' goalie coach Cole Clifford, stopped all four shots he saw to preserve the shutout started by Wade.

Next up

The Skippers have two league games left after Sunday's showdown with Mashpee. They'll travel to the Charles Moore Arena (Orleans) on Wednesday to take on Harwich (8 p.m. start) and they'll close out the regular season with a February vacation 8:40 a.m. start at Bridgewater Ice Arena versus Carver on Tuesday, Feb. 17. The Skippers won their home game with Harwich, 8-4, but, again, take nothing on Cape for granted. And they'll most certainly not take Carver lightly after having to settle for a 1-1 tie with the Crusaders in the first go round.

Sandwiched between those two SSL tilts will be non-league tussles with Rockland a week from today (Pilgrim Arena, 3:20 p.m.) and South Shore Voc-Tech on Monday, Feb. 16 (Pilgrim, 10:30 a.m. start). The Skippers will be looking to avenge their season opening 4-2 loss to Rockland and also make amends for their earlier 1-1 tie with SSV.

lapsed their zone defense to discourage drives by quick Norwell players.

The second quarter seemed to belong to Meredith Kelly as she put in three outside shots and three foul shots to push Cohasset ahead 29-10. Carli Haggerty, anticipating the pass from her deep zone position on the full court press, burst ahead to steal the ball and go full court for a layup. She returned next play working the inside for two. In the final two minutes of play, the shot clock almost ran out on Cohasset's offense, when Samantha Crough took a tough pass off balance, recovering to put up a perfect shot from the wing. Norwell succeeded in breaking the press a handful of times tallying six points on layups. At the buzzer, Cohasset had pulled out to a commanding 38-16 lead.

Meredith Kelly recorded Cohasset's first third quarter points on a feed from Sami Lehr on which she drew a foul and made the basket. Norwell answered again with shots on the box created by good ball movement and the score sat at 45-20. Cohasset displayed their diverse skills, shifting from fast break ball to set offense play with ease. Patience on the set offense, they worked the ball around the Norwell zone, freeing Samantha Crough for a 3-pointer from the top of the key that brought the score to 50-22. Carli Haggerty came alive posting two baskets, one on a beautiful spin move with 4 seconds remaining on the shot clock. On defense Cohasset contested every shot. Rachel Fredey foiled a well earned scoring opportunity by stripping the ball out of the shooter's hands from behind. The quarter ended with Cohasset out front 56-28.

Facing a 30-point deficit, the Clippers began to resort to launching 3-point shots. To limit their success, Cohasset set up in a widespread 1-3-1. On offense, under the direction of seasoned point guard Kayla Farren, Cohasset slowed the game down, working the ball around to create openings to exploit. They logged 11 points in the half behind, ending their offensive contribution to this contest with a court long pass from Tori Lehr to Lindsey Davis for a layup. Cohasset took the win 67-40, maintaining their undefeated status. Samantha Crough took top scoring honors with 13, followed by Sami Lehr with 11. More than other games, this one showed the depth of individual talent on this squad and their desire and ability to play as a team.

HINGHAM

The Cohasset Lady Skippers provided sports fans a warm up to Super Bowl XLIII as they hosted the Hingham Harbor women on a 6-47 win on Sunday. Hingham came out in a full court man-to-man and it took a few plays up and down the court for the Skippers to get their bearings. Hingham worked the ball well around the horn and posted 7 quick points. Tori Lehr put Cohasset on the board three minutes in with a signature jumper from mid-key and Meredith Kelly added two with a baseline layup. A block by Samantha Crough underneath and a steal by Rachel Fredey sparked the Cohasset defense. Defense was the name of the game in the first quarter which ended with Division 2 Hingham hanging onto a one point lead 11-12.

Cohasset came out on fire in the second quarter, putting in an immediate basket from a sideline inbound play. Meredith Kelly got that look in her eye and the crowd knew that a steal was on the horizon. She delivered two steals in fact, turning one into a layup and a trip to the foul line. Two minutes expired in the quarter, Cohasset pulled out 22-14. Playing with tenacity, Carli Haggerty earned a tough shot under the basket, grabbing her own rebound and dropping it in for two. Meredith Kelly and Tori Lehr had their radar working connecting for another Cohasset basket. Hingham's points came only from the foul line until they hit a three from the corner. The quarter closed with Cohasset taking a 29-25 lead to the locker room.

Cohasset's inside game came to life at the start of the third quarter with three plays propelling the score forward 35-29. Hingham struggled to get their offense going until their off ball guard drilled an NBA distance 3-pointer. A couple of interesting calls positioned Hingham to cut the lead to three with two minutes to play in the quarter. Hingham's defense was a challenge but Cohasset stayed patient, moving the ball around until they had a good shot. With seconds on the clock, Carli Haggerty got the ball underneath. Facing a wall of Hingham players, Haggerty did a step through, slicing the defense and icing the basket. The quarter ended with Cohasset out front 42-35.

Cohasset's starting five stepped on to the court in the fourth quarter after chanting a mantra of "defense" in their huddle. And it was defense that sparked the offense. Halfway into the quarter, Lindsey Davis worked the ball inside to Sami Lehr to bring Cohasset to 52. Hingham called a timeout at the 4-minute mark to regroup. With minutes to go and a lead of twelve, Cohasset used the clock on offense. Hingham had to test Cohasset's ability from the foul line to hopefully gain possession of the ball. Carly Salerno hit two from the line bringing the score to 58-45. A series of fouls slowed down play but the Cohasset victory train rolled on taking this game away from Division 2 Hingham 60-47.

With four games left to play in the regular season, Cohasset has moved up in the Globe top 20 to number 10, becoming the solo squad representing the South Shore league. Junior Meredith Kelly remains the league's leading scorer with 202 points, averaging 13.5 per game. According to HighSchoolSports.net, Cohasset now has a Massey rating of 1.80 placing them fifth in Massachusetts and 567th nationally. The JV and Varsity squads face Mashpee next before traveling to Hull on Friday night to take on the Pirates. Game time in Hull is 6:30PM.

Spelling Bee fundraiser

Cohasset Education Foundation will offer its second Children's Spelling Bee fundraiser on Sunday, Feb. 8. All children in grades two through five are welcome to participate in this fun, community event. Each team is made up of three children in the same grade. Team members could be from class, a sports team or a Cohasset resident in another school.

Registration, which includes a T-shirt, is $25 per speller. Forms can be downloaded at the Web site at cohasseteducation.org.

Kindergarten registration at Osgood School

Kindergarten registration for the 2009-2010 school year takes place daily, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., at Osgood School. Parents will be asked to indicate interest in full-day kindergarten or half-day kindergarten at the time of registration. Parents are encouraged to register early to facilitate planning for the program.

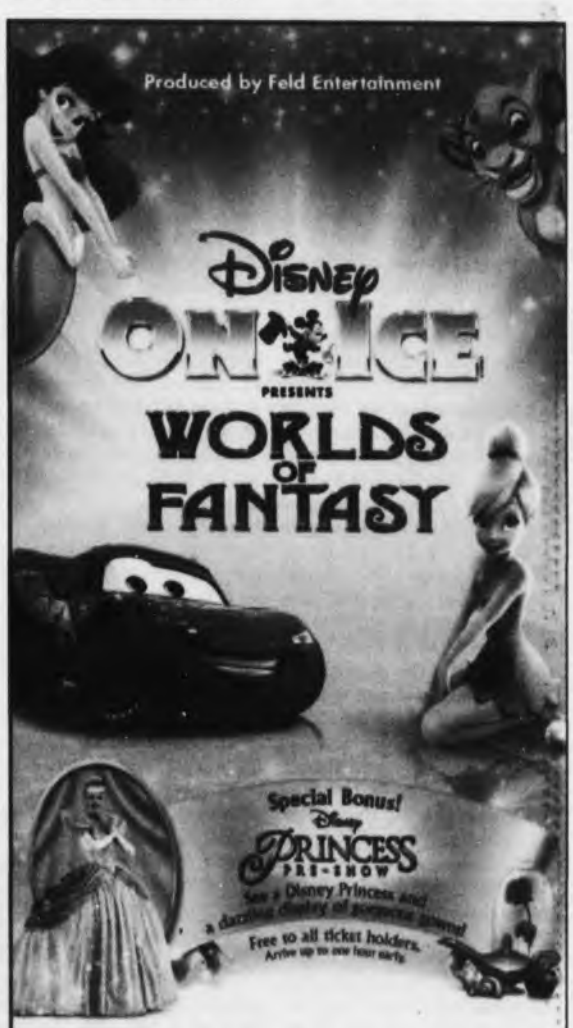
Children who turn 5 on or before Sept. 1, 2009, are eligible to attend kindergarten. A birth certificate and proof of residency are required in order to register.

Call Osgood School at 781-383-6117 for more information.

Welcome to February!

LIFE AT CHS

LAUREN MACK



However, with the end of the semester come report cards, which for some may be great new but for others, maybe not so much...

Hello everyone, and welcome to February! The year seems to be flying by so fast: the first semester has already ended and we are now a little over halfway through the school year. Crazy, right? However, with the end of the semester come report cards, which for some may be great new but for others, maybe not so much. But for all those who are "conscientious and diligent", or a "pleasure to have in class", or perhaps even "talented in subject", hopefully you got a personalized signature from Mr. Joel Antolini himself congratulating you on making honor roll.

The semi this past weekend was a great success, for all those who were wondering. It was a wonderful night full of beautiful people, balloons, and lots of loud music — all the ingredients for a good time! Hopefully the tradition of the Junior-Senior semi will be continued on for years to come.

All of our winter sports teams seem to be doing very well this season. I witnessed my very first wrestling match this past week and am pleased to say that it was a victory, the Sci-Coh swim team seems to be unstoppable (or unsinkable, rather), and both basketball teams have been successful thus far. Needless to say, I'm sensing some league titles in the future. And of course, the student council is still hosting a food drive at the school, so any donations in the form of non-perishable food items may be dropped off at the box in the front office and are very much appreciated. And with that, I leave you all to a wonderful weekend! Sayonara!

Lauren Mack is a senior at CHS. Her column appears weekly during the school year.

A healthy breakfast that will keep away the hunger pains consists of carbohydrates (such as whole-grain toast), healthy fats (such as nuts) and lean protein (such as egg whites).

Lose weight, not breakfast

With the holiday food-fest, you may be looking for ways to get back on track with your weight. You might be tempted to skip breakfast as a way to save calories, but this plan usually backfires. Bypass breakfast and you'll end up being ravenous and unable to make smart eating decisions at lunch.

"Skipping breakfast only delays hunger and often leads to overeating later in the day," says Bob Greene, an exercise physiologist, personal trainer to Oprah Winfrey and author of "The Best Life Diet Cookbook." "But not just any breakfast will do. Some standard options like Danishes or doughnuts are simply empty calories. Instead, choose a balanced, nutritious dish."

Bob Greene is an exercise physiologist, personal trainer to Oprah Winfrey and author of "The Best Life Diet Cookbook."

That means your breakfast should include all three "macronutrients": carbohydrates, such as whole-grain toast; healthy fats like nuts or nut butters; and lean protein (such as egg whites and nonfat or 1 percent dairy). This combination offers a wealth of nutritious ingredients, but it is also the most satisfying for the calories and will keep your hunger in check until lunch, Greene explains.

Protein – especially high-quality protein, such as eggs – helps quell appetite. Greene recommends Crystal Farms All- Whites and Better'n Eggs as a convenient way to add lean, high-quality protein to your morning meal. Made from real eggs – but with no fat, no cholesterol and half the calories – AllWhites and Better'n Eggs come in easy-to-pour cartons and can be found in the dairy case of your local grocery store.

"We all have busy lives, but it couldn't be easier to add lean protein to your breakfast," Greene says.

For an on-the-go breakfast option packed with protein, Greene recommends this makeover of the traditional greasy breakfast sandwich. Prepared in just 10 minutes, the Spicy Bacon and Cheese Eggwich combines high-protein egg substitutes with cheddar cheese and lean turkey bacon in a whole-wheat English muffin. With 17 grams of protein, this sandwich also includes good sources of fiber and calcium – two other essential nutrients that are often lacking from morning meals.

Courtesy of ARA

Spicy Bacon and Cheese Eggwich

- 1 cup (8 ounces) Better'n Eggs
- 1/4 teaspoon cayenne hot pepper sauce
- 1/8 cup (1/2 ounce) shredded Cheddar cheese
- 2 slices turkey bacon, cut in half crosswise
- 2 whole-wheat English muffins, split

Spray 10-inch nonstick skillet with nonstick cooking spray. Heat over medium heat. Add Better'n Eggs and stir in hot pepper sauce. As egg substitute starts to set use spatula to lift edge of eggs, letting uncooked eggs flow to bottom of skillet. Cook until egg substitute is set but still moist. Sprinkle shredded cheese on top and then fold over the egg substitute so the cheese melts in the middle. Place turkey bacon on microwave safe plate. Cover with paper towel. Microwave on high for 30 to 40 seconds or until warmed. Toast each half English muffin in toaster. Spoon about 1/2 cup mixture on top of two toasted muffins. Top each with one piece cooked bacon. Top with remaining toasted muffins. Makes two servings.

SAVOR NEW TASTY COUPLES

Experts name the next big flavor pairing

By Kathryn Rem
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Potatoes and cheese. Apples and pork. Chocolate and mint. Some flavors are commonly paired in recipes because they have a natural affinity. But what is the next tomato and basil? To find out, spice company McCormick surveyed chefs, cookbook authors and celebrity cooks to find flavor pairings you're likely to see in 2009. Although professional chefs will take the lead in using the spice duos, home cooks don't have to wait to taste them in a restaurant meal. Here are the flavor pairings in McCormick's 2009 Flavor Forecast, with ideas for incorporating these newest combos into your own cooking.

TOASTED SESAME AND ROOT BEER

Make a yellow cake with root beer instead of water, and add toasted sesame seeds. Drizzle with a root beer reduction glaze.

Sesame seeds go great with root beer.

CAYENNE AND TART CHERRY

For a new taste on spoon bread, season a cornmeal batter with cayenne, rosemary and dry sherry. Fold in Manchego cheese and dried tart cherries before baking.

Smoked paprika will spice up a margarita.

TARRAGON AND BEETROOT (BEETS)

On a bed of mixed lettuces, arrange slices of roasted beets, fennel, orange slices and red onion. Drizzle with a tarragon vinaigrette flavored with vanilla.

GARAM MASALA AND PEPITAS

Make a snack mix by tossing two cups of pepitas (shelled pumpkin seeds), one cup of almonds, two teaspoons garam masala (a blend of Indian spices), a little sea salt and a drizzle of olive oil. Bake at 350 degrees until lightly browned, then add a handful of dried cranberries.

PEPPERCORN MELANGE AND SAKE

Try marinating steaks in a blend of sake (rice wine), miso (bean paste), a medley of different peppercorns and sesame oil. Serve with a sake-peppercorn dipping sauce, enhanced with honey and slices of green onion.

ROSEMARY AND FRUIT PRESERVES

For a twist on Black Forest cake, fill dark chocolate cupcakes with blackberry preserves, rosemary and black pepper. Top with a rich chocolate ganache.

DILL AND AVOCADO OIL

Add dill and avocado oil to shrimp scampi.

SMOKED PAPRIKA AND AGAVE NECTAR

Try a smoky margarita. Combine one part tequila, two parts fresh lime juice, two parts agave nectar (the syrup of the agave plant) and an eighth of a teaspoon of smoked paprika. Serve in glasses rimmed with sea salt and smoked paprika.

Try rosemary with your fruit preserves.

Hot chocolate grows UP

By Jennifer Mastroianni
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

When the weather outside is frightful, nothing warms the body and soothes the spirit like a steaming cup of hot cocoa. This year more than ever, hot chocolate has grown up and gone gourmet. Hot cocoa lovers can look forward to an increasing variety of exotic flavors, as well as creative interpretations of the favorite winter beverage. One of the hottest trends is cocoa and coffee combined. Paris After Dark is such a creation.

"This gloriously rich drink doesn't force you to choose," say Mary Lou Heiss and Robert J. Heiss, authors of "Hot Drinks." "Inspired by Parisians, who enjoy their after-dinner coffee with small pieces of dark chocolate, this sophisticated, continental-style brew combines both beloved flavors."

White hot chocolate is all the rage as well. We found several on the market, including World Market's gourmet variety called Dulce De Leche. The 1-pound can of just-add-water powder makes a sweet and creamy drink with rich caramel flavor. Hershey's offers white hot chocolate in instant packet form, called Goodnight Hugs. It is 99.9 percent caffeine free, which makes it perfect for a pre-bedtime treat that won't keep you up all night. Dunkin Donuts' version of white hot chocolate is thick and sweet and is reminiscent of soy latte. Celebrity cook Sandra Lee's recipe includes peppermint.

Mexican hot chocolate is another inviting flavor sensation. From Nestlé comes Abuelita, which is the Spanish translation for "little grandmother." The cinnamon-scented cocoa is somewhat like a blend of hot cocoa and chai, and t is a delight not to e missed.

PARIS AFTER DARK

4 teaspoons sugar
4 teaspoons Dutch process n cocoa powder
4 teaspoons heavy cream
1 1/2 cups strong coffee, freshly brewed
1/2 cup heavy cream, firmly whipped with 1 teaspoon sugar, for garnish
Pinch of fleur de sel or other sea salt for garnish

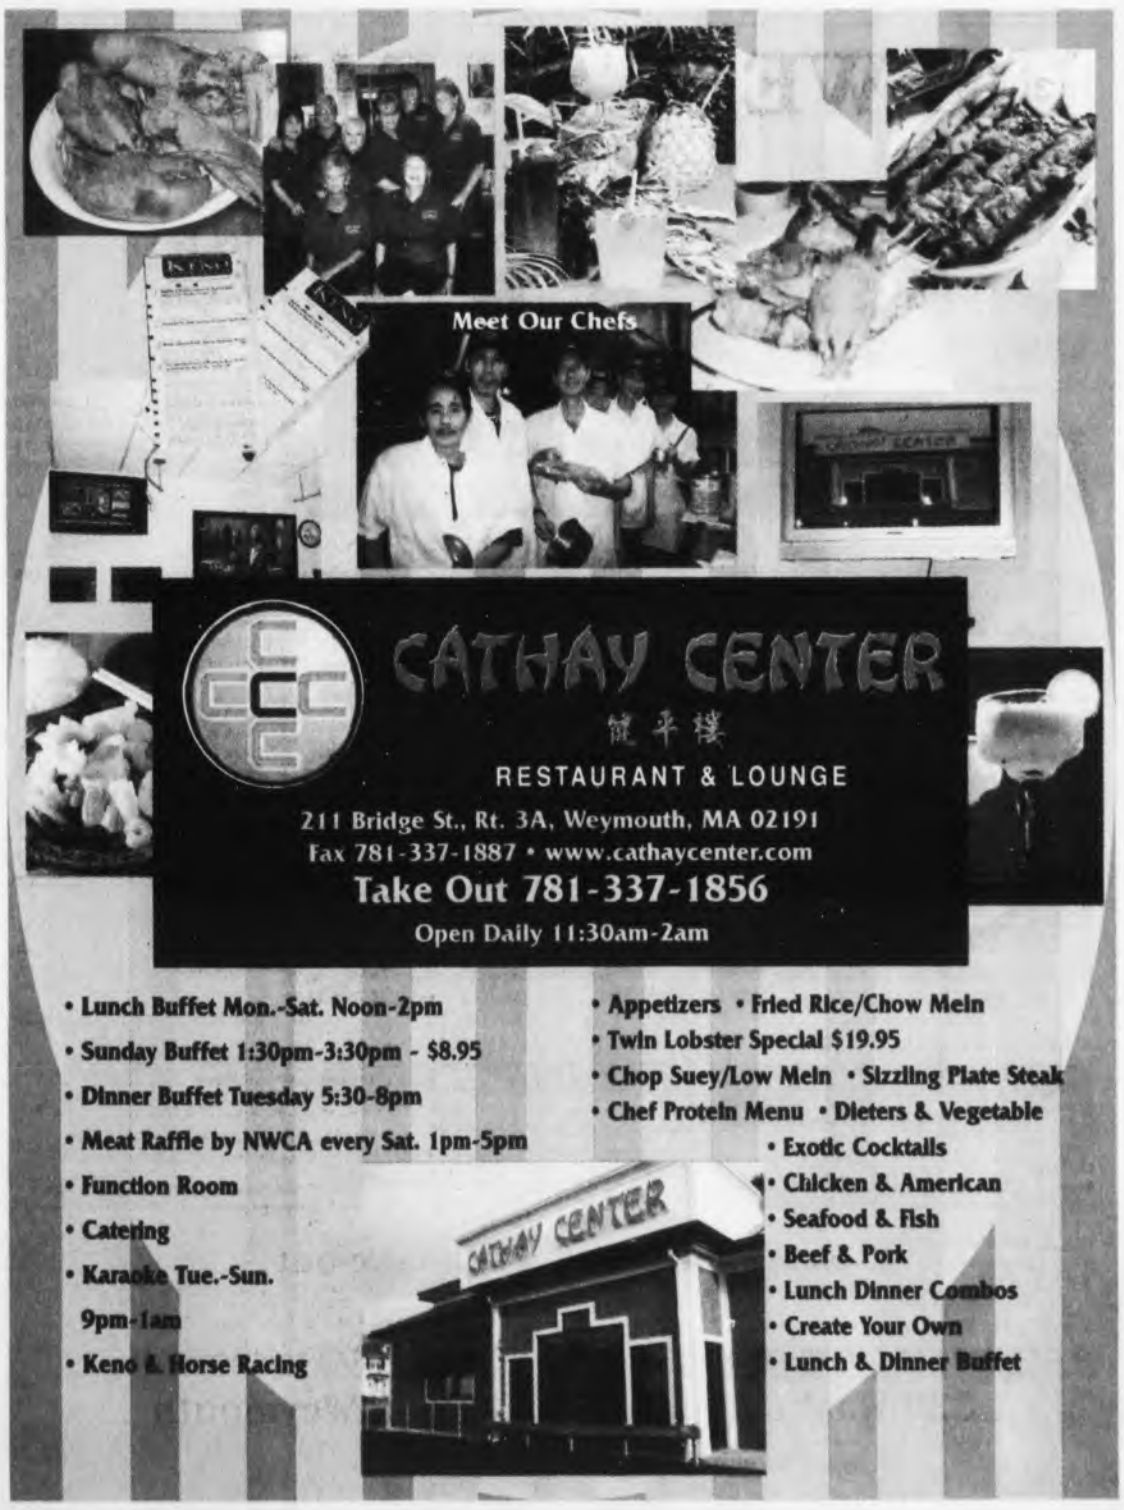
In each of two mugs, mix 2 teaspoons of the sugar and 2 teaspoons of the cocoa until well-blended and lump free. Add 2 teaspoons of the cream to each and stir until thoroughly combined into a light paste. Add 3/4 cup of the coffee to each and stir again until thoroughly mixed. Top each with a dollop of whipped cream. Roll the dollop over to stain it with the coffee, then sprinkle a few grains of sea salt atop the whipped cream. From "Hot Drinks," by Mary Lou Heiss and Robert J. Heiss.

SANDRA LEE'S WHITE HOT CHOCOLATE

1 cup white chocolate chips
1 cup heavy cream n 4 cups half-and-half
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1/4 teaspoon peppermint extract
Vanilla whipped topping, for garnish
Candy cane, crushed or whole, for garnish
Peppermint liqueur, optional
White chocolate liqueur, optional

In a medium saucepan over medium heat, combine white chocolate chips and heavy cream. Stir continuously until white chocolate chips have completely melted. Stir in the half-and-half, vanilla extract and peppermint extract. Stir occasionally until heated through. Pour into mugs and top with a dollop of vanilla whipped topping and a candy cane.

Cook's note: For a tasty adult drink, add desired amounts of peppermint and white chocolate liqueurs. Recipe by Sandra Lee



GROWNUP HOT CHOCOLATE

4 ounces Ghirardelli 60% Cacao Bittersweet Chocolate Chips
1 cup half-and-half
1 tablespoon Amaretto (almond liqueur)
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1/2 cup whipped cream

In saucepan over low heat, bring chocolate and half-and-half to simmer, whisking constantly. Simmer 1 minute or until mixture thickens slightly. Remove from heat; whisk in liqueur and vanilla. Pour into four 1/2-cup demitasse or coffee cups. Top each serving with 2 tablespoons whipped cream; dust with Ghirardelli Unsweetened Cocoa (if desired). Serve immediately.

Tip: Instead of Amaretto, use 1 tablespoon hazelnut, coffee or orange liqueur or peppermint schnapps, or 1/2 teaspoon almond or peppermint extract.

Come learn about part of Cohasset history

Professor to discuss 'A Slave No More'

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Professor Blight will explain the broad implications of American history of slavery, and bring it home to us in Cohasset by recounting the story of John Washington.

Residents of Cohasset and the entire South Shore are invited to come learn about a part of Cohasset history that extends beyond tales of the sea and shipwrecks and lighthouses…come learn the history of John Washington, an escaped slave who retired to our town in the early 20th century. Washington's memoirs and those of another former slave, Wallace Turnage, comprise the 2009 Cohasset Reads Together selection, A Slave No More, written by David Blight, Professor of American History at Yale University.

Prof. Blight will present a much anticipated talk in Cohasset on Thursday evening, Feb. 12th at Cohasset High School Auditorium, 7 p.m. The 12th also marks the occasion of Abraham Lincoln's 200th birthday — commemorate this occasion by bringing your family, your book club, your co-workers and your neighbors to this not to be missed event. A speaker like this does not come to our town very often. Admission is free.

According to the Slave No More website…there were only 55 post-Civil War slave narratives in existence at the time that historian David W. Blight was contacted about the discovery of two unedited narratives. The handwritten journals of John Washington and Wallace Turnage have been lovingly preserved by generations of family and friends., and now they are presented in A Slave No More: Two Men Who Escaped to Freedom, Including Their Own Narratives of Emancipation.

Professor Blight will explain the broad implications of American history of slavery, and bring it home to us in Cohasset by recounting the story of John Washington.

Washington's Memories of the past moves from his most pleasant early childhood through the many trials of slavery and the disruptions of the Civil War, ending with his successful escape in 1862. As Blight observes, it's very much a coming of age story, offering a unique window on life (learning to read, falling in love, finding religious faith) in a slave society. Blight provides an accessible historical and literary context for the manuscripts and explores, as fully as possible, the men's lives not covered in their manuscripts

Author Julian Houston who wrote "New Boy," the other Cohasset Reads Together book selection, was the owner of Washington's manuscripts, which he presented to Blight in the hopes of his writing a book about them. The connections between these two book selections and Cohasset, at a time when we have elected the first African American President into office make this year's town-wide reading selections especially poignant. The White House is a house built by slaves, a house whose early residents were slaveholders, and a house where Abraham Lincoln wrote the Emancipation Proclamation.

Come join us this Thursday at 7 p.m. for this incredible evening of history during which we will be reminded of the power of memory and how that memory creates meaning for us today. For an entire calendar of Cohasset Reads Together events visit www.cohassetlibrary.org

Bodhran classes at Aisling

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
FEB. 2, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Seeing the silly side of some really ridiculous situations helps give the Lamb a new perspective on how to handle them. Some important contacts can be made this weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Try to complete your outstanding tasks by midweek. This leaves you free to take advantage of new possibilities — both professional and personal — opening up by week's end.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) With both your creative side and your energy levels rising this week, you should be able to tackle that too-long-neglected project again. A family member might have important news.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) An explanation you requested seems to be more confusing than enlightening. You should insist on clarifications now, rather than deal with problems that might arise later.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your energy levels might be ebbing a bit. But that's no excuse for taking catnaps when you could be working on those unfinished tasks. There'll be time to curl up and relax by week's end.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) It's a good time to get those ideas out of your head and into a readable format if you hope to have them turned into something doable. A good friend is ready with worthwhile advice.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Careful — you might be stepping into dangerous territory if you decide to "exaggerate" the facts too much. Remember: The truth speaks for itself and needs no embellishment.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Although your workplace successes have earned you many admirers, there are some colleagues who are not among them. Be careful how you proceed with your new project.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might have to go into great detail to explain why you're currently reluctant to make changes to an already prepared plan. Be sure you have all the facts to back yourself up.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Travel plans might still be uncertain. But instead of getting upset about the delay, open yourself up to other possibilities, and begin checking out some alternative destinations.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Changing conditions might require you to alter some of your plans. While you might be agreeable to this, be prepared with explanations for those who do not want changes made.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Although you might have to deal with some detractors who aren't too kind in their critiques, you gain points when you're willing to stand up and defend your work.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for creating a warm and loving environment between yourself and others.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

RESIDENT/OVERNIGHT/SLEEPAWAY CAMP:
EXPERIENCE EVERY CHILD DESERVES

By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

Sending your child to a residential camp for the first time can be difficult but the benefits can be immense and long-lasting. While each family has their own reasons for choosing an overnight camp, the following benefits should be considered:

• Group Living: Campers sleep in a bunk or cabin with other kids their own age. Kids quickly learn to share not only their possessions, but their talents and experiences.

• Trying New Things: Overnight camp can be a great place for first attempts. Nearly all camps – even those with a particular focus – encourage their campers to try activities that will stretch them and broaden their interests.

• Structure: The people who run our ACA-accredited camps are educators and professionals, and they know that structure, balanced with time for free play, is essential for kids. Knowing what to expect throughout the day provides a sense of security and comfort.

• A Fresh Start: Even for kids who are successful in school and happy at home, resident camp can provide a welcome, new perspective.

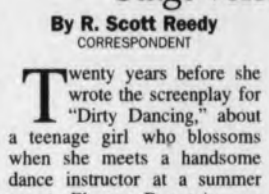
Never enough 'Dirty Dancing'

Stage version choreographed by 'high priestess of dance'



By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Twenty years before she wrote the screenplay for "Dirty Dancing," about a teenage girl who blossoms when she meets a handsome dance instructor at a summer resort, Eleanor Bergstein was living the life — make that lives — so vividly depicted in the low-budget movie that became one of the biggest box office hits of 1987.

"All the characters in the story are a composite of who I was and who I am. I traveled to the Catskills from Brooklyn each year for vacation, and my father was a doctor. I wanted to save the world, but I wanted to do it in a matching sweater-set. I loved to dance and often competed in dance contests," recalled Bergstein, 70, by telephone recently while discussing "Dirty Dancing: The Classic Story on Stage," which begins a 10-week run at Boston's Opera House on Saturday. "At one point, I was even named 'Teen Mambo Queen,' but my sister, Frances, who is now a mathematician, was just the opposite. She would sooner walk down the street naked than try dirty dancing."

Moviegoers didn't just try "Dirty Dancing," they fell in love with the independent film, starring then unknowns Patrick Swayze and Jennifer Grey. Not only has the movie earned well more than $300 million worldwide, but it was also the first film to sell more than a million copies on home video, and its soundtrack went multi-platinum with multiple singles, including "(I've Had) The Time of My Life," which won both the Golden Globe and Academy Award for Best Original Song, and a Grammy Award for best duet for Bill Medley and Jennifer Warnes. While grateful for the movie's success, Bergstein resisted attempts to bring it to the stage for a long time.

"I thought the movie stood on its own. I was totally against doing a stage adaptation for almost 20 years. I just wouldn't do it just for the money, which I thought be an affront to what the film meant to so many people. The stage version just wasn't going to happen if it wasn't going to move people or be transforming," says novelist and screenwriter Bergstein, who was always mindful of the movie's impact.

Eleanor Bergstein

DAVID SCHEINMANN

Amanda Leigh Cobb as Baby, and Ben Mingay as Billy, perform in 'Dirty Dancing.'

"The figures on how many people watched the movie all over the world were amazing. I've always believed that was because it told a story that really meant something. Even with that, however, the truth is simply that I did not want to just do the movie on stage."

Bergstein began to think differently after the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001. "It was a year or so later, when I went with some friends to see Bruce Springsteen's 'The Rising' tour at Shea Stadium. It was raining, but Springsteen did an encore that made everyone cry, because of a shared sense of hope described in the music. Springsteen's expressive face just looked out at all of us and the moment became a very communal experience. I realized right then and there that 'Dirty Dancing' on stage would have to combine the emotional, personal story of the characters with the feeling you get at a rock concert."

It was while attending another performance in New York that Bergstein decided what she would do next.

"I went to see the Sydney Dance Company and I felt a huge wave of testosterone coming from the stage. I decided right then that I wanted to do this show in Australia." Before long, Bergstein was headed down under to put together a team for new project.

"I can't say enough fabulous things about our choreographer, Kate Champion. She is the high priestess of dance in Australia. Kate and I believe every moment has meaning. We also have world class dancers in this company, including Josef Brown, a leading dancer with Sydney Dance Company, who was our Johnny when we opened in Australia and who will play the same role in Boston," Bergstein said.

With James Powell on board as director, the stage show opened in Australia in 2004 and moved from there to London. It had its U.S. debut in Chicago last fall. Boston marks its East Coast premiere in what is being described as a pre-Broadway engagement. Although no details have been confirmed, the show is rumored to be headed to Broadway's Neil Simon Theatre this fall after a summer stopover in Los Angeles.

While the movie's familiar songs – including "Hungry Eyes" and "Do You Love Me" – have made the move to screen, the moves that surround them are very different, according to Bergstein.

"This is not a traditional musical. People do not sing to one another. We do the music the way it happens in real life. It is all from the heart," she said.

While a summer romance is at the heart of the story, devout fans of the film will also tell you that the story of Frances "Baby" Houseman and Johnny Castle is set during the same week in 1963 that Martin Luther King Jr. gave his "I Have a Dream" speech at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C. Bergstein believes that the election of Barack Obama as America's first African-American President has given contemporary resonance to "Dirty Dancing."

"This is essentially an American story of hope. The civil rights movement and the hope it represented is all in our show. When I started all this six years ago, that just seemed like history. With the election of Barack Obama, the world's hope for America has been restored, and our story is topical again. We were performing in Chicago on Election Night last November and the audience just wept when word spread that Obama had won. Thanks to Obama, hope is once again a part of now and the future."

"Dirty Dancing – The Classic Story on Stage" will be at the Opera House, 539 Washington St., Boston, Feb. 7 through April 12. Quincy Dinner Theatre ready for a big re-opening

More oldies in store for audiences Feb. 13

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Quincy Dinner Theatre (QDT) will celebrate its grand reopening in its new home at Braintree's Emerald Hall on Friday, Feb. 13 with an updated version of the most popular show in the company's long history.

"The single most successful musical comedy in South Shore history is a show called 'Solid Gold Oldies,' which we did for the first time in 1997 when we were still in Quincy," said QDT producer George Stevens by telephone last week. "We debuted 'Solid Gold Oldies II' in 2000, a 'Best of Solid Gold Oldies' in 2002, a new version last year, and now we're ready with an even more exciting 2009 edition, 'The Best is Yet to Come,' to mark our move to Emerald Hall."

Most people dread the idea of moving, but Stevens, who co-founded QDT's umbrella organization Darling Productions with Molly Hochkeppel in 1980, said he is delighted with his theatre company's newest home.

"Lisa Mastrangelo and Mastrangelo Family Catering have made us feel very welcome at Emerald Hall, which is a beautiful smoke-free facility. All food is cooked on the premises and the family is even planning to build us a permanent stage where we'll be able to do book shows again," Stevens said.

In the meantime, Stevens predicts audiences will enjoy a brand new Oldies show.

"Rob Bezubka, the musical genius behind our holiday shows for the past decade, is directing a nine-member cast of singers, dancers, and comics in this show, including Greg Warwick, a national seniors ballroom dance champion, and Totie Fields look-and-sound-alike Sandy Strate, who is a veteran of all our Solid Gold Oldies shows.

"We won't just have great dance and comedy, however. We'll also have plenty of wonderful music, including songs made famous by the Bee Gees, Donna Summer, Jay & The Americans, and Whitney Houston," he said.

On Feb. 20, QDT will present "Ooh! Ooh! Ooh! What a Night" — a musical revue starring the seven-member Mixed Emotions vocal group — at the Canoe Club in West Bridgewater. "There probably isn't a bigger hit on Broadway right now than 'Jersey Boys,' and it is sold out almost every night, so we've asked Mixed Emotions to not only do the great Frankie Valli and the Four Seasons songs from that show, but also music from 'Smokey Joe's Cafe,' including 'Stand By Me,'" said Stevens.

The very next night, QDT will be back in Braintree to present "Best of the Superstar Legends on Tour," which Stevens describes as "perhaps the greatest tribute show ever." As Neil Diamond, Paul Grassia has performed 'Sweet Caroline' no fewer than seven times at Fenway Park. On Feb. 21, Paul will be back with us to do that Neil Diamond hit and many more. Joining Grassia will be Wayne Miller, lead singer of Herb Reed & The Platters, as Stevie Wonder; Angela Kay as Whitney Houston; Jami Smith as Tina Turner; and, fresh from the Tropicana in Atlantic City, Russ Perterson as both Buddy Holly and Engelbert Humperdinck."

All Quincy Dinner Theatre shows include a four-course meal and free parking. Emerald Hall is at 120 Bay State Drive in Braintree; the Canoe Club is at 2 South Street in West Bridgewater. For tickets and more information, visit the Quincy Dinner Theatre box office in person at 654 Washington St., Braintree, or call 781-843-5862.

Top 10 romantic ski resorts in the Northeast

Heather Burke
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Let's face it. Skiing is a romantic activity. There's you and your significant other and snow - and that need for warmth at the end of the day.

You don't have to look far to find nooks with the right dose of downhill skiing and apres ski ambiance for a romantic getaway. Book a trip for you and your sweetheart at one of these charming spots just a Cupid's arrowshot from the slopes. Your winter resort rendezvous will have you looking like a Harlequin novel hero or heroine.

Vermont

Stowe

Stowe is known as "The Ski Capital of the East," for its history (dating back to the 1930s) and heralded Front Four trails. But Vermont's highest ski peak could also be cast as "romance resort of the East," for its softer side - snow covered sidewalks in the shadows of the church steeple, outstanding eateries and abundant apres ski pubs. Stowe has an alpine elegance that you just don't find in most New England ski towns. Splurge on a slope-view room, and spa treatments at the new Stowe Mountain Lodge (www.stowemountainlodge.com; 802-253-3560). The Alpine Concierge will fetch your skis, wine and cheese or just about anything you please.

Sugarbush

The Mad River Valley has those magic romance factors - covered bridges, cutesy Vermont shops and rolling hills blanketed in sparkling snow. Add to the mix two ski mountains at Sugarbush and you have yourself a winter winner. In fact, the Slide Brook Express swiftly carries skiers between Sugarbush's separate slopes over bear-mating territory - which has been subject to debate by environmentalists. This could make for an interesting chairlift chat. Stay slopeside at the new Clay Brook Inn. Or head to The Pitcher Inn in Warren (www.pitcherinn.com; 802-496-6350), a lovely Relais and Chateaux property where no two rooms are alike. Enjoy an elegant candlelit dinner at the inn, followed by a Jacuzzi and a crackling fireplace upstairs in your room.

Sugarbush in the Mad River Valley provides the scenery part of a magic of a mountain getaway.

Woodstock

The scenic, historic hamlet of Woodstock is a super setting for a winter romantic weekend. The Woodstock Inn (www.woodstockinn.com; 802-457-1100) is the place to stay - the inn owns the Suicide Six alpine ski area (dating back to 1934) and its own Nordic facility (plus, you're just a 20-mile drive to Killington's lifts). Staying at the Woodstock Inn, you'll enjoy four-diamond lodging, four-star dining and live jazz in the 1793 replica tavern. Relax by the 20-foot fireplace, and read up on the love story of Laurence S. Rockefeller and Mary Billings French, founders of the nearby Marsh-Billings-Rockefeller National Historical Park, Vermont's only National Park.

Okemo

Okemo has great groomers, delicious on-mountain food and a regal "castle" to cap off your day of downhill. The Castle Hill Resort and Spa (www.castlehillresort.com; 888-764-6836) is a gorgeous 1905 stone mansion built for the wealthy Vermont Gov. Allen Fletcher as his turn-of-the-century arty palace. Castle Hill is richly decorated and perfectly preserved with a mahogany-paneled library, private dining room and wine cellar, plus sumptuous guestrooms upstairs. Ski-and-stay packages at the Castle Hill Resort and Spa include champagne and Belgian chocolates in your room, a four-course dinner and breakfast, and use of the Aveda Spa facilities with outdoor heated pool and hot tub.

New Hampshire

Jackson

Jackson is a postcard perfect kind of place in the White Mountains. Ski the quaint slopes of Black Mountain or take in the extraordinary scenery at Wildcat by day. Then stay nearby at the lovely Wentworth Inn (www.thewentworth.com; 603-383-9700) by night. After a delicious breakfast at the opulent inn, you'll find you're only 15 minutes from ski areas that also include Attitash and Cranmore. A sumptuous setting and fireside dinner at the inn await your return from outdoor exhilaration.

North Conway

If shopping and skiing is the way to your significant other's heart, then get thee to North Conway. Be sure to make ski tracks in the great outdoors at Cranmore or Attitash in the morning. Save the outlet shopping for the afternoon, followed by drinks and dinner at one of many fun establishments like the Shovel Handle Pub at Whitney's Inn in nearby Jackson. There are oodles of inns to choose from that ooze romance, many offer ski and stay packages. The Kearsarge Inn in North Conway (www.kearsargeinn.com; 603-356-8700) has a package that also includes massages.

Bretton Woods

Bretton Woods, New Hampshire's largest ski area, is a treat for the eyes and the skis, featuring well-groomed snow, a good variety of gentle glades and dramatic views of the highest peak on the Eastern Seaboard, Mount Washington at 6,288 feet. After schussing the slopes, stay at the spectacular century-old Mount Washington Hotel (www.mountwashingtonresort.com; 603-278-1000). Watch the Alpenglow over cocktails, succumb to treatments at the new Presidential Spa, then savor dinner and dancing in the ballroom followed by nightlife in the Cave. You'll feel like a prince and princess in a snow-covered castle.

Maine

Sugarloaf

Book a room in the Sugarloaf Mountain Hotel (www.sugarloaf.com, 800-THELOAF) so you and your sugar-pie can hang out slopeside. You're also walking distance to Sugarloaf's famed apres ski and nightlife including at Widowmaker (a great dance spot with live music despite the name). Sugarloaf's lift rides can be cozy as you snuggle up together at this typically chilly Maine mountain. A romantic Snow Cat ride takes you to dinner at mid-mountain Bullwinkle's making for a dreamy day at the Loaf.

Quebec, Canada

Quebec City

Quebec City is like a European city, sans jetlag. The romantic French "joie de vivre" is in the air along the cobblestone streets and cafes of Old Quebec and on the scenic snowy slopes of Mont Sainte Anne, about 40 minutes from the city. Stay at the landmark Chateau Frontenac (www.fairmont.com; 800-257-7544) and savor apres ski in this legendary city or stay slopeside at the Chateau Mont Sainte Anne (www.fairmont.com; 800-257-7544) for first tracks, dog sledding and fondue dinners by the mountain.

Tremblant

Mont Tremblant Ski Resort (www.tremblant.ca; 514-876-7273) is a Eu-romantic ski spot - the perfectly planned ski village seems plucked from the snowy Alps. Stay on property and you can walk to the ski lifts, boutiques, gourmet bistros and bars that rock till late. Tremblant is a happening ski place, busy during weekends and holidays but wonderfully romantic if you can steal your little bon bon away midweek.

Library use up in a down economy

But budget cuts may force Sunday closings

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When times get tough, residents turn to the library for books, movies and internet. Across the nation and at the corner of Ripley Road and Sohier Street, library use is on the rise.

"We are certainly very busy, and we've noticed an increase in the number of people taking advantage of our wireless environment," said Library Director Jackie Rafferty.

The entire library is completely wireless capable and Rafferty said the staff has noticed an up tick in the last year in the amount of people set up with laptop computers.

Each month the library compares its monthly circulation statistics with the same month of the previous year and as an overall trend the numbers are up, said Rafferty. The exception was this January, which was down significantly from January 2008, but the staff chalks it up to the numerous snowstorms.

As more people stay at home as a cost saving measure they may turn to the libraries for entertainment. Instead of Blockbuster or a monthly Netflix subscription, residents can get free movie rentals at the library. Instead of spending $14.95 on a paperback novel at

Graham Sinclaire designs pamphlet

Those who make the weekly (or more) trips to the Recycling Transfer Facility may now have a more pleasant trip, thanks to an Eagle Scout candidate.

Graham Sinclaire, a senior at Cohasset High, made a presentation to Selectmen to let them know of his efforts to beautify and increase recycling at the Recycling Transfer Facility.

"Those who already use the RTF, we want them to recycle more," said Sinclaire. In 2008, he set out on a

Technology plan needed

$35,000 article could go to Town Meeting

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"We need some kind of plan so we don't keep doing this in a piecemeal fashion."
— Selectman Karen Quigley

Over the past few years it has become increasingly evident that the town needs to think more broadly about its use, maintenance and purchase of technology.

On the table at Town Meeting could be a request to hire an outside consultant to develop a town-wide plan for technology, including hardware and software replacement policies, system maintenance and future enhancements.

Currently, computer maintenance is highly individualized by department. The police have an outside contract for maintenance of their servers and computers. The library has another contract. Computer replacement is done at an irregular pace, often when the need is dire.

In recent meetings, the Capital Budget Committee has expressed frustration in the lack of vision when it comes to technology. A few years ago, a volunteer Technology Committee was working through these issues in order to develop a town-wide plan, but a final product or recommendation was never officially produced.

"I believe it is now time to have an independent, outside consultant prepare an information technology master plan for all town departments and the school department rather than leaving that task to a town committee," wrote Town Manager Bill Griffin in a memo to the Selectmen. At the meeting, Griffin said the town has been "sputtering along" when it came to technology, adding it was "embarrassing."

One of the primary drivers to get some outside help is the possibility of seeing some cost savings in establishing a consistent plan and going out to bid as a large unit for maintenance and technology infrastructure.

"We're an awful lot like a college campus," said Griffin with many departments that use computers, different software and various technologies in different ways.

Selectman Karen Quigley has been sitting in on most of the Capital Budget Committee meetings said there is a sense the town needs to get a handle on

PICTURE THIS/Graham Sinclaire

This week the Mariner caught up with Eagle Scout candidate Graham Sinclaire following his presentation to the Board of Selectmen. He has created a pamphlet full of helpful information about how to best utilize the Recycling Transfer Facility.

Name: Graham Sinclaire.

Occupation: Student.

Best day of your life: I haven't been around long enough to have had one yet, but I'm thinking it'll be one of the best days if (or, hopefully, when) I get a letter of acceptance from a college I want to go to.

Best vacation: A 16-day trip to Europe when I was 14.

Favorite season: Summer.

Favorite junk food: Popcorn.

Best book: "The Andromeda Strain" by Michael Crichton.

Best movie (or actor): "Airplane."

Best TV show: "The Venture Brothers."

Favorite music, song, group or artist: Audioslave.

Fun fact about yourself: I joined Scouting as a Tiger Cub when I was 7 years old and have been active ever since.

Pet peeve: When someone refuses to do something really simple (for example, reading a short article for a homework assignment) just because they are lazy.

Goal: To get my Eagle Project completed by February 24th, my 18th birthday (the day I must complete it by to become an Eagle).

Person you'd most like to meet: My grandfather on my mother's side, whom I did meet once, but was too young at the time for me to have any memory of him now.

Biggest worry: That one day I'll become so overburdened with responsibility that I won't have any free time to myself.

Best part of Cohasset: The beach.

BRIEFLY

Cohasset Mariner 'drop box'

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter near the magazines in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Free legal clinics

The Bar Association of Norfolk County will sponsor free evening legal clinics as a public service to the community. A panel of attorneys experienced in all areas of the law will be available for a one-on-one consultation to discuss legal questions. All consultations are confidential.

Legal clinics will take place from 6 to 8 p.m., on Tuesday evenings, in Quincy District Court as follows: April 7, May 19, June 2, July 7 and Aug. 4.

For more information, call Adrienne C. Clark, Bar Association of Norfolk County, at 617-471-9693.

POLICE BEAT

Pedestrian hit at plaza entrance

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 66-year-old Cohasset woman was hit by a Nissan Pathfinder driven by a 77-year-old Scituate woman when the Cohasset woman was walking across the entrance road to Shaw's Plaza between Rockland Trust and Bank of America, police said.

The incident took place at 3:18 p.m. on Thursday (Feb. 5).

The operator of the Nissan was driving into the plaza and may have been blinded by the glare of the sun when the incident occurred. The driver's side exterior mirror of the Nissan hit the pedestrian.

The operator of the Nissan did not see the pedestrian, who also said she did not see the Nissan.

A witness who was driving out of the plaza said the Nissan had not been speeding or driving recklessly and that the sun could have played a role.

The pedestrian was transported to the hospital with minor injuries, police said.

Dog fines

The dog is a big, friendly and a familiar figure in the village. But the owner of the unleashed and unsupervised wandering dog is now being summonsed to court for not paying more than six citations for allowing her dog to roam free in town.

Chief James Hussey said Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy has warned the dog's owner on several occasions, verbal warnings that were ignored. He then issued citations but still did not receive any cooperation. Now police are going through the court process to get resolution to the leash-law violations.

Jeep crash

A 42-year-old Cohasset woman is being summonsed to court for negligent operation of a motor vehicle, failure to stop at a stop sign and speeding after a single-car crash last Monday (Feb. 2) at 7:08 p.m.

The fire department had to use the Jaws of Life to extricate the woman who had slid through the stop sign at the top of Beechwood Street and across South Main Street into a fence. The 2003 Jeep Liberty she was driving hit at least one tree, police said.

An off-duty Cohasset dispatcher driving by the scene called the accident in.

Initially police thought there might have been another occupant in the Jeep, called the K-9 unit from Scituate, which was subsequently cancelled.

The woman, who had visible injuries, was transported to the hospital.

Further investigation revealed she had to be traveling at an unreasonable speed to cause the accident.

Larceny report

The owner of the Red Lion Inn reported to police that items placed in buildings that are part of the inn complex are missing. The items, which belong to the inn and included some personal property being stored for a friend of the owner since last August include an $8,000 wall tapestry, $3,000 television, $400 stereo, $250 radio, $1200 laptop and other items.

The apparent larceny was discovered last week, it is not clear when the items were taken. The larceny is under investigation.

ID thefts

Two incidents of identity theft were reported last week. In the first instance a Cohasset resident said a credit card had been opened using her name and address. She has a similar card but with a different account number. Fraudulent, out-of-state purchases on the "new" card were in excess of $900. The credit card company was notified and the victim cancelled her card.

In the second incident, a another woman came to the station after finding out that her credit card had been denied. As it turned out the credit card company had put a hold on card purchases after discovering activity on her account that was inconsistent with her use of the card. As it turned out the woman had not made those purchases.

The incidents are being investigated.

Brazilian license

Police responded to a call from a concerned resident about a suspicious car in which the operator was driving up and down the road writing things down. Police determined the man was scouting out a newspaper delivery route. But a further check revealed he did not have a Massachusetts driver's license and the Brazilian license he was using was fraudulent, police said. The car was towed and the 36-year-old man, who lives in Weymouth, is being summonsed to court for operating without a license.

Sinkhole

A couple in their 80s who live on Atlantic Avenue, got stuck in a sinkhole off Hobart Street last week. Police said the hole emerged near some steel plates near construction work along the street. A concerned caller reported the large sinkholes at 4:22 p.m., Sunday (Feb. 8). At 5:34 another call came in reporting the elderly couple's 2005 Toyota was stuck in the mud. The caller took the couple home. There was damage to the front end of the car and undercarriage, police said. A wrecker was called and the area was cordoned off until the construction company repaired the road. The couple was not injured.

Hit & run

A walk-in to the police station on Monday (Feb. 2) to report that someone had left a note on her car stating he or she had witnessed another vehicle hit hers and leave. Unfortunately the note did not contain any other information such as a description of the vehicle, plate number or even the name and phone number of the witness, who left the note, police said.

"There was no information for us to follow up on," Chief Hussey said. He urged witnesses to leave contact information so police can follow up.

Tire in road

Police responded to a complaint last Monday (Feb. 2), about a tire that had fallen off a truck carrying a load of tires. The responding officer moved the tire off the road for the DPW to pick up, police said. Chief Hussey said police did not have any other information about the truck. He explained that operators of vehicles with unsecured cargo could be cited.

Cracked windshield

A walk-in to the police station on Tuesday (Feb. 3) told police while she came out of Stop & Shop and saw that her windshield had been cracked. The investigating officer reported that the crack was likely initially caused by rock that bounced up from the street. The crack had apparently expanded when the motorist noticed it and became alarmed.

Police said the motorist was satisfied with the explanation.

Harassment

A woman went to the police station last Wednesday (Feb. 4) to report that someone she had dated in the past was making phone calls to her. While the calls did not rise to the level of a crime, police assisted her in explaining how to work with the telephone company to determine where the calls were coming from. If they persist, the caller could be charged with making annoying phone calls, police said.

Tired deflated

An initial report about tires being slashed by the manager of a local business in the village turned out to be that the tires had all been deflated. The caps had been removed, police said. Police are working with the victim to determine what the motivation might have been and identify potential suspects. One of the employees at the establishment had recently been let go, police said.

BB shot

A business off King Street (Route 3A) reported last Thursday (Feb. 5) that a BB had been sot through the window of the establishment sometime the night before. Police determined a BB or a pellet gun could have caused the damage. The incident is under investigation.

Lieb to run for School Committee

No races shape up

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

As the Mariner went to press there was still a narrow window in which potential candidates could take out papers, but as of Thursday morning someone had pulled papers for all available seats but no more. That means it looks like there will be no contested seats in the 2009 Town Election.

The second seat on the School Committee at last got a candidate in Helene Lieb of 18 Deep Run, a 27-year resident of Cohasset and no stranger to the Cohasset Public Schools. Paul Schubert of 155 Sohier Street took out papers the other three-year School Committee seat last week.

"I've always been very passionate about public education and in particular Cohasset public schools," said Lieb in a phone interview Wednesday. Her two kids are both graduates of Cohasset High.

"I think it is very important to have a strong public school system because it benefits the whole community and the student contribute to that community," said Lieb.

Lieb co-founded Family Math Nights at Osgood, was the treasure of the PSO for a time and served on the high school School Council.

"In this economically difficult time, I think the town needs someone who has been around and has had kids in the school system," said Lieb. The challenging fiscal time call for "outside the box thinking" and describes herself as a creative thinker and a worker bee.

Lieb holds a doctorate in psychology and was an undergraduate math major. She hopes to bring her listening skills and number sense to the School Committee.

Her primary goal if elected is to keep the education system very strong, despite the fiscal difficulties.

"The system is only as strong as the weakest student," said Lieb.

The last day to take out nomination papers was yesterday, Thursday, Feb. 12. Nomination papers have to be returned to the Town Clerk's office and the signatures certified by Tuesday, February 17 at 7p.m.

In order to hold an elected office, you must be a registered voter of the town. It is important to note that you are not running for office until nomination papers are returned and the Board of Registrars certifies your signatures.

Annual Town Election will be held on Saturday, April 4, 2009.

Other nomination papers pulled

- Paul Schubert, 155 Sohier St., for School Committee (three years)
- Kathryn Lydon, 23 Forest Ave. for Recreation Commission (five years)
- Margaret Chapman, 25 Virginia Lane, for Board of Health (three years)
- Agnes McCann, 104 Doane St.; Patience Towle, 61 Highland Ave.; Roger Lowe, 100 Beach St., for Board of Library Trustees (three open seats for three years)
- Jean Healey Dippold, 93 South Main St., for Planning Board (five years)
- Michael Patrolia, 15 Cushing Road, for the Board of Assessors (three years)
- John Beck, 44 Nichols Road, for Sewer Commission (three years)
- John McNabb, 53 Pond St., for Water Commission (three years)
- Nancy Barrett, 60 Elm St., for Housing Authority (five years)

Town Meeting set for March 28

Timing of election complicated a postponement

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Town Meeting has been set for Saturday, March 28 since the first day of December.

It was no surprise either, in recent memory Town Meeting has been held on the last weekend of March and the town election following a week later.

But since mid-January there were rumblings Town Meeting could be postponed to a later spring date. That discussion came to a head on Monday night when Town Manager Bill Griffin broached the subject with the Board of Selectmen.

Town Manager Bill Griffin originally proposed the change of date at a budget summit meeting between the Selectmen, the School Committee and Advisory Committee in January. Typically by mid-January the town has a pretty good idea of where it stands with state aid, yet funding numbers were still largely uncertain putting the entire budget process behind schedule.

"Given the magnitude of the financial situation, more time is needed," said Griffin on Monday night. In a fiscal year where most departments are looking at cuts, the extra time would allow for a more thoughtful product. He proposed a Saturday, May 9 date for Town Meeting.

Yet, changing the date of Town Meeting was complicated by the town election. Although there is no override proposed that would require a ballot question after town meeting, there was some concern about the change over in the School Committee. Two seats are up for election this week and both members up for re-election, Rick Flynn and Steve Fusco, have said they are not seeking re-election to the board.

Town bylaws mandate the town election be held within 35 days of the opening of Town Meeting, which in all scenarios was the March 28 date. That means the latest date the town election could be held is Saturday, May 2.

Further complicating the election issue — and making a decision more urgent — is the deadline to pull and return nomination papers was this week. Nomination papers had to be taken out by Wednesday and returned by today, Friday. If the town election date is changed to a later date, then the nomination period may have to be re-opened or extended. Nomination papers have to be available up to 51 days before the town election.

In an e-mail on Tuesday afternoon to town officials, Griffin said the original reason for postponing action on the budget was the lack of information on the status of state aid. A month later, the town has that information (at least as proposed by the Governor) and Griffin said he wasn't sure the town would know anymore in mid-April or early May.

As a second reason, Griffin said the desire of many to hold off on the town election until after the adjourned session of town meeting created several problems with the election, including a change in the date to take out nomination papers.

"I believe it best to leave the deadlines as they originally stood and avoid any confusion that might results if we were to 'restart' the election process based on a later date for Town Meeting," wrote Griffin.

Now, with the date of Town Meeting settled in stone (again), Griffin said he would complete the review of the fiscal 2010 by the middle of next week and present his budget recommendations to the Selectmen and the Advisory Committee the week of Feb. 23.

Griffin proposed having a second joint meeting of the Selectmen, School Committee and Advisory Committee during the week of March 3 to see where the town is in respect to the budget as a whole.

Technology plan needed

what technology there is in town and what are the needs for the future.

"We need some kind of plan so we don't keep doing this in a piecemeal fashion," said Quigley.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer has a slightly different take on what's needed.

"Technology works faster than anyone can predict," said Dormitzer, explaining five years ago no one knew how ubiquitous blogs, ipods and facebook would be.

Dormitzer said he wanted to be clear what the town would be getting for $35,000.

Further, Dormitzer was concerned the town was not using resources it has already to its full advantage.

"There's someone at the high school with a salary over $100,000 that's supposed to be do this…I don't know what we're getting out of it," said Dormitzer. According to the fiscal 2009 budget, the schools' technology coordinator was slated for a $94,000 salary.

Selectman Fred Koed agreed with Dormitzer in that more specifics about what the consultant would be providing for $35,000 was needed. Griffin said he would get the information and report back to the board.

three-part project in order to earn the highest honor in Boy Scouts. The performance-based achievement requires qualifying for 21 merit badges and undertaking a project of more than 100 hours that will to benefit the community.

Over the past few months, Sinclaire has beautified the entranceway and although covered with snow right now, flowers are expected to pop up in the spring. A new sign donated by Hassan Sign will be erected shortly.

The focal point of the project is a two-sided, three-fold pamphlet outlining everything residents need to know about the RTF. A map shows where any and every item can be recycled from tin to paint to glass to cardboard.

"I wanted to make it as easy as possible to find where to go and what can be recycled."

— Graham Sinclaire, Eagle Scout candidate

"I wanted to make it as easy as possible to find where to go and what can be recycled," said Sinclaire.

The pamphlet will be distributed to all Cohasset residents inside the Cohasset Rotary Phonebook this spring. The pamphlet includes information about the importance of recycling and the how to organize your household so they are recycling more. It includes guidelines for the popular "boutique" and how to dispose of unique items like tires to clothes to fluorescent lights.

Sinclaire is a bit in a time crunch, as all Eagle Scout projects need to be completed before the boy's 18th birthday. Sinclaire turns 18 on Feb. 24.

The Board of Selectmen applauded and thanked Sinclaire for his efforts and wished him luck.

Federal Census takers sought

Multiple opportunities and positions are available for taking the 2010 census. To apply, call toll free 866-861-2010 to sign up for a written multiple-choice test or additional information and practice test available at the Web site at www.2010censusjobs.gov.

By working the 2010 federal census, people will help the federal government to apportion the seats in the House of Representatives, draw state legislative districts and distribute more the $300 billion annually in federal, state, local and tribal funds.

Census positions are temporary and pay competitive wages. A wide variety of jobs are available with the greatest need for census takers. Census takers work in their own communities updating address lists and interviewing household members. People may qualify if:

- They are a U.S. citizen.
- They are not a U.S. citizen, and only if no U.S. citizens are available, especially in areas where bilingual ability is a necessary qualification.
- At least 18 years old.
- Have a valid Social Security number.
- Take a written test of basic skills.
- Pass a background check.
- Have a valid driver's license – for field jobs only.
- Commit to 3-1/2 days of paid training.

Filing for real estate tax exemptions

The Board of Assessors is accepting applications for FY 2009 real estate tax exemptions. The qualification date is July 1, 2008. Applicants who have filed tax exemption forms since July 1, 2008 are not required to file again. The deadline for filing is March 29. The following exemptions are available:

Persons Over 70 Years Of Age – $2,000 off: Clause 41C – if annual income is less that $18,000 (single person) or $23,000 (married couple), and the value of your assets, excluding your home, is less than $33,000 (single person) or $35,000 (married couple) and must own and occupy for previous 10 years.

Surviving Spouse (no age requirement) – $350 off: Clause 17D – also minors of deceased parents and persons over 70 years of age. There is no limit on income, but the value of your assets, excluding your home, must not exceed $40,000 and must own and occupy for previous five years.

Disabled Veterans – $800 Off: Clause 22 – At least 10 percent disabled as determined by the Veterans Administration. Purple Heart Award recipients qualify, as well as Congressional Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service Cross, Air Force Cross, Navy Cross. Other exemptions are available for more seriously disabled veterans and paraplegic veterans. Veteran must have been a Mass resident six months prior to enlisting OR live in Massachusetts for five consecutive years.

Blind Persons – $875 Off: Clause 37 – Must be registered with Massachusetts Commission for the Blind.

Tax Deferral – All or part of the tax: Clause 41A - Applicant must be 65 years of age as of July 1, 2008 with income less than $40,000 and must have resided in Massachusetts for the preceding 10 years. All or part of the tax may be deferred. (Effective 2007 the interest rate has been reduced to 4 percent)

Exemption forms are available at the Assessors' Office at Town Hall. Assessors' Office can be reached at 781-383-4114.

SENIORS

Senior Center headed to Town Meeting

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Do you think the time is right for a new Senior Center?
Take our poll at www.wickedlocalcohasset.com!

The proposal for the new Senior Center is picking up momentum.

The Board of Selectmen took its first official action on the project by unanimously voting to place three articles on the Town Meeting warrant concerning the land targeted for the building.

If approved by Town Meeting, the articles give the Selectmen authorization to acquire a piece of the Cohasset Swim Center land by several different methods, depending on how future discussions pan out.

"We want to show progress and give ourselves some flexibility," said Town Manager Bill Griffin. Progress needs to be made in acquiring the site in order to trigger a significant private donation from the Social Service League of Cohasset. Without these preliminary steps made at Annual Town Meeting, the town could be at a standstill until Special Town Meeting in the fall.

The first article has to do with a five-acre parcel of land abutting the Swim Center property currently under the jurisdiction of the Water Commission. The land is the site of a former water supply well that was discontinued with the construction of the Greenbush commuter rail. The article authorizes the Water Commission to transfer the land (or a portion of) to the Board of Selectmen.

The second article gives the Selectmen the authority to acquire by purchase or gift a piece of the Swim Center property for the construction of a senior center facility. However, in early talks with the Swim Center might be willing to donate a portion of the property in exchange for other considerations like maintenance of what would be a shared parking lot.

A third article would allow for the conveyance of land, if the Swim Center wishes to exchange some of its land for the Water Commission land.

Despite a unanimous vote to place the articles on the warrant, the response to the project wasn't all warm and fuzzy.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said there were two critical questions he would like answered before the project moved much further. First, what at the new Senior Center will attract a large population of seniors? What will be the programs and services? And second, how the building will be paid for initially and what will be the annual maintenance?

"We need to be fair on the town on this one," said Dormitzer. "It is a pretty big obligation to the town to take on, especially now."

The fiscal 2009 budget for the Department of Elder Affair is about $192,000. The town pays $14,000 a year for the use of the space at the South Shore Community Center.

Joe Nedrow, chairman of Selectmen-appointed Elder Affairs board, said he expects the bulk of the new building's construction cost to come from the Willcutt Fund, a trust controlled by the Social Service League of Cohasset.

Preliminary plans for the senior center include a fitness center, a large meeting room, a kitchen, a craft room are included as amenities. Yet to be determined is whether the town will pursue a handful of affordable senior apartments on the second floor of the proposed building.

"Socialization is a big thing for seniors...we want to create something that will be a real asset to the town," said Nedrow. In regards to financing, Nedrow said he has been in communication with Library Trustees about how they were able to successfully and privately raise the funds to renovate the former Osgood School for the current Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The answer still didn't satisfy Dormitzer, "we have an obligation to let people know the cost and what will be the benefits."

Nedrow responded Dormitzer was asking for a lot of specificity that they don't have yet.

Meeting with Swim Center positive

A meeting was held on Tuesday morning with representatives from Elder Affairs and town officials with a representative from the Cohasset Swim Center, Diane Karcher. In order to build the Senior Center in the most ideal place (adjacent to the large Swim Center parking lot), the Swim Center needs to transfer a 13,000 square foot parcel the town.

"It was a wonderful meeting, there was a lot of great ideas and people getting involved. People were giving wonderful advice and they are excited about this project and want to see it go forward," said Linda Elworthy, director of Elder Affairs.

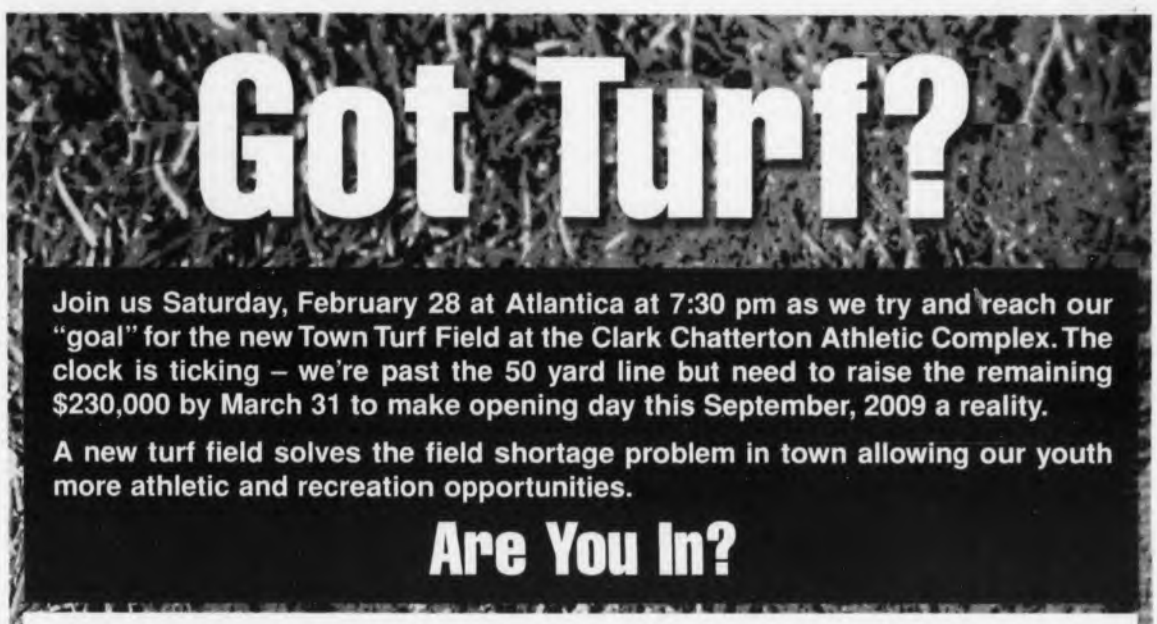
As a result of the meeting, Karcher was going to bring the proposal to the trust and the next likely step would be to draft a written memo of agreement between the town and Swim Center, said Elworthy.

Poll results

As of Thursday morning, 93 people had participated in an on-line survey about the proposed senior center project. The question was: Given the current economic climate for the town, state and country, is this the right time to be talking about a new senior center?

There's still time to cast your vote at www.wickedlocalcohasset.com

Here are the results so far:



1) Yes, our senior population is growing and demand is high for increased services and space – 53 percent (49 votes).

2) If a substantial amount of funding is raised privately or provided through grants – 31 percent (29 votes).

3) No, the town is already strapped for cash to pay for existing buildings and services – 16 percent (15 votes).

4) Undecided – 0 percent (0 votes).

Many thanks to those who have already pledged and contributed their support!

VACATION WEEK

Hello Cohasset! Well, today I guess we don't say Happy Friday the 13th but do try to stay safe on this questionable day of "bad luck!" Then, when you wake up tomorrow, make sure to have a sweet, happy and yes, even Romantic Valentines Day. If you are looking for something to do with the kids while you and your honey are out sharing some time alone, give the Our World Museum a call at 781-383-3198 or send them an email at ourworldprograms@comcast.net to sign up for a Creative Nite "Valentines Style with Kitchen Kids and Miss Sandy" on Saturday, Feb 14th from 4-9 pm. I also want to wish everyone who is getting ready to enjoy this upcoming February Vacation a fun-filled week full of travel, family and friends. Make sure to let us know some of the stories and adventures that you enjoyed.

BOURNEDALE

Get your grills ready!! Spring is right around the corner and to herald in the season for your first cookout, the 5th Grade is pleased to announce that their annual Camp Bournedale Kinnealey Meats Fundraiser kicks off today, Friday, Feb. 13th. The selling period will continue until March 18th with product being delivered just in time for a spring cookout on April 4th. If you're a fan of the Kinnealey Meats great products and are interested in purchasing some but don't know a 5th grader, we can certainly accommodate you and your purchase will go directly to support the total amount needed to be raised to send the 5th grade class to Camp Bournedale in Plymouth in September of their sixth-grade year. So please support your 5th-grade family or friends or contact Jody Golden at 383-2685 s.shaungolden@comcast.net or Lisa Pratt at 383-1387 lisa.pratt@comcast.net if you don't know a 5th grader and would like to place an order and support this wonderful program for our Deer Hill 5th grade students!

PASSION PLUNGE

Tomorrow, Valentine's Day, looks like a terrific day for the "cool" Passion Plunge fundraiser for Special Olympics Massachusetts. Come to Nantasket Beach and support the 400 plus plungers who are raising money to help the 11,600 athletes of Special Olympics. Remember you can donate online at www.passionplunge.org and click on South Shore Mariners team and pick any individual plunger. The costume parade starts at 11:15 and the Plunge is at noon - join the fun and support your local Team. Better yet join us in the Plunge! Onsite registration starts at 10 a.m.

SPRING FLING

Here is another date to save as springtime gets closer and closer and the calendars get booked. The Second Congregational Church's Spring Fling Time and Talent Auction, often described as "the most fun you can have in a church" is an evening of great food, terrific auction items, and fabulous company. The evening begins at 6:30 with gourmet appetizers, and the silent and live auctions begin promptly at 7:00 and continue along with periodic raffles until 9:30. Auction items include sports and theater tickets; vacation homes; private baseball, sailing, and riding lessons; photography and artwork; and gift baskets. The event is taking place on Saturday, March 21 from 6:30 pm-9:30 pm and fun will be had by all who attend. No admission fee – but to reserve a table (up to 10 people) and/or tickets, please RSVP to the church office at scc@2ndcc.org or 383-0345.

TOP STUDENTS

We have a number of Cohasset students to recognize and honor this week. Nice work to all of you and remember parents, friends and students to make sure to spread and share the good news about your favorite students!

Stephanie Fewsmith is currently studying abroad through the Boston University International Programs office.

• Congratulations to Emily St. John, grade 11, who earned First Honors on Fontbonne Academy 's Second Quarter Honor Roll.

• Jennifer Roche, an equestrian studies major, has been awarded the University of Findlay Award from the University of Findlay in Ohio, a merit scholarship.

• Stephanie Fewsmith is currently studying abroad through the Boston University International Programs office. A French Language and Literature major at BU's College of Arts and Science, Stephanie is currently enrolled in the Grenoble Language and Liberal Arts Programs Level 2 through the end of the Spring 2009 semester. Stephanie is scheduled to graduate from BU in 2011. Congratulations to you Stephanie!

• Kyle DeSisto, a senior at Boston College High School, was recently inducted into the Robert Fulton Chapter of the National Honor Society. Kyle is the captain of the B.C. High tennis team as well as a nationally ranked USTA tennis player. He will attend Bates College next fall where he will play for the men's tennis team. Keep up the great work Kyle, I know we will hear more great things about you in the future!

THANK YOU

A giant thank you is being sent out to everyone who helped out and made donations to help Peter Kurtz and his family at a benefit recently held for him at the American Legion. A super special thank you goes out to Ricky and Ann Marie Goff for all their hard work. This is what communities, friends and families are truly all about!

HANLON BROTHERS

The Cohasset Historical Society will present its Spring Wednesday Night Lecture Series beginning on Feb. 18th with speaker, Tom Gruber, talking about one aspect of Cohasset's theatrical past. "The Hanlon Brothers" and their circus troop made Cohasset their summer home in the late 1800's. Here they developed new acts and perfected them prior to heading out on the road for the next season of performances. Tom, the historical society's vice-president, will tell us about this colorful family and their contribution to our town's history.

The program will be held at the Society's headquarters in the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St., at 7:30 p.m.. All are welcome to attend and light refreshment will be served.

That is all for this week. Send in all of your news to me no later than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm.

Syncopation to perform Feb. 15 at First Parish Cohasset.

Jazz quartet Sunday at First Parish

They are the winners of the 2008 annual Boston Harmony Sweepstakes A Cappella Festival. Syncopation's style reflects bebop, Latin and pop influences.

Syncopation, an award-winning vocal jazz quartet based in Boston, will perform with pianist Mark Shilansky at First Parish Cohasset at 4 p.m., on Sunday, Feb. 15. First Parish is on the green at North Main Street. Admission is $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

The four singer/musicians have performed across the United States at events including the Tanglewood Jazz Festival, Tri-C Vocal Jazz Festival, Boston Globe Jazz Festival and Meihou Music Festival. The group regularly tours Japan. They are the winners of the 2008 annual Boston Harmony Sweepstakes A Cappella Festival. Syncopation's style reflects bebop, Latin and pop influences. The group usually performs with a band, but their a cappella performances are equally exhilarating. Each of the four singers is also an instrumentalist and occasionally featured playing trumpet, trombone, piano and percussion. They were formed in Boston in January 2002 and mentored by Cheryl Bentyne of Manhattan Transfer.

Syncopation includes: soprano Aubrey Logan, who also doubles on trombone; alto Christine Fawson, who doubles on trumpet; tenor David Thorne Scott; and bass Tsunenori "Lee" Abe, who also is the group's arranger/composer.

For more information about the concert, call Allegra Martin at 617-872-0461. For more information about the group, visit the Web site at jazzsyncopation.com.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Election season

An outsider might think there is apathy in Cohasset.

The reason being that for the past two years seats on the School Committee, Board of Selectmen, and positions on other elected boards, like the Planning Board, have gone uncontested.

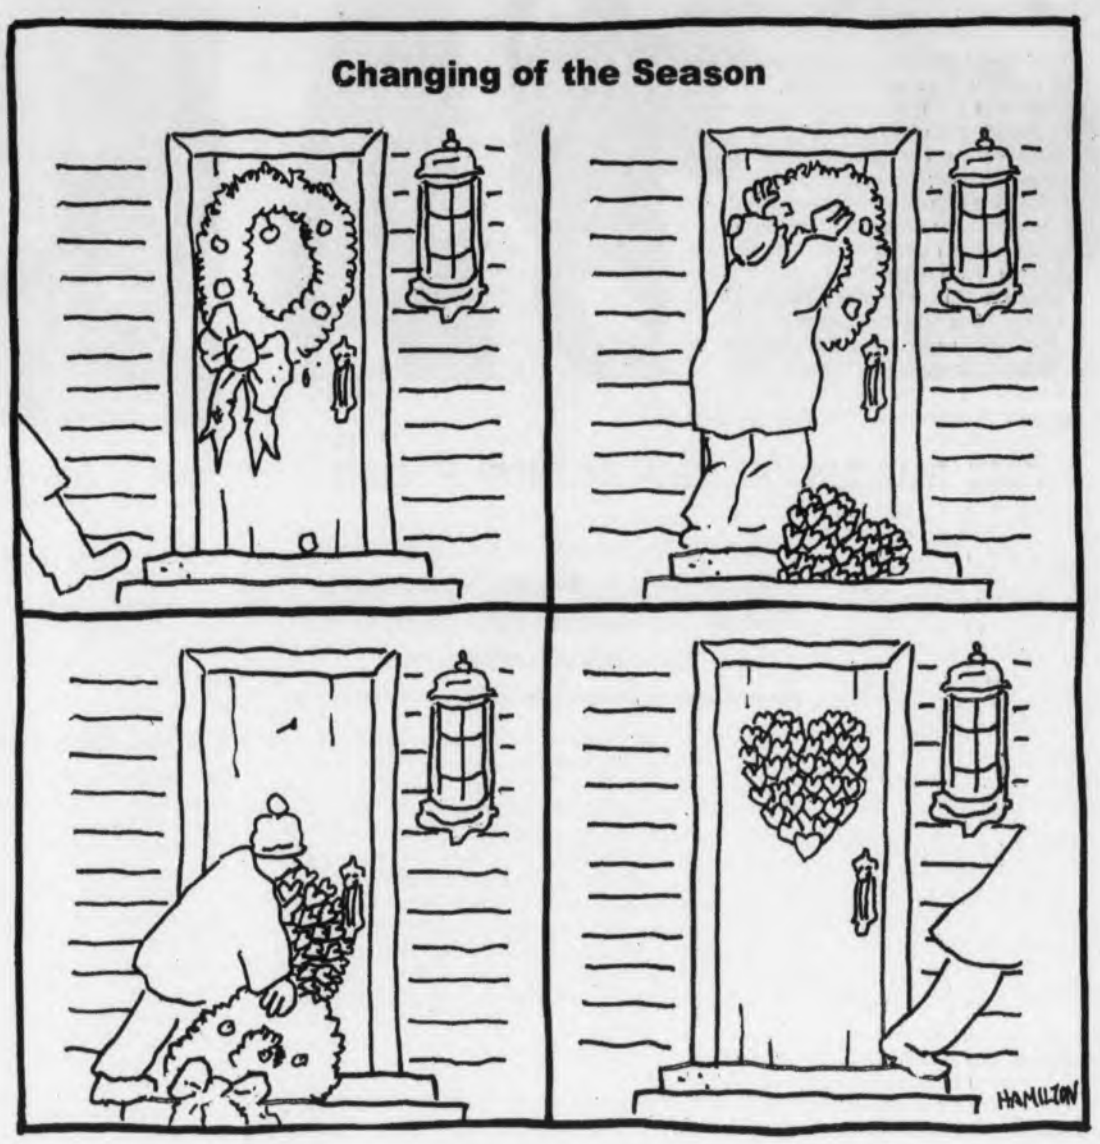
However, we know that residents do care and follow the issues closely. Treat's Pond and the proposed wind turbines are just two examples. Both issues can pack a room.

With that being said, however, we are disappointed when there are no races on the ballot.

Contests always provide a better forum for debate. We will, as always, go forward with our Question of the Week (details soon) with at the least the candidates for School Committee and for Ted Carr, who is seeking reelection to the Board of Selectmen, being asked to participate.

We certainly understand why potential candidates out there might not want to run. Holding an elected – or an appointed post for that matter – requires a real commitment of time and energy. We do not think an individual should run if he or she could not make the commitment to attend meetings and do the necessary homework.

Cohasset has myriad appointed committees that are all well populated with citizens willing to serve. Some committees are appointed by Selectmen and others by the Troika (Town Moderator, Advisory Committee Chairman and Selectmen Chairman).



Those under the selectmen's jurisdiction will be reviewed at three-year intervals. The process will entail a review of the committee's charge, composition and re-authorization (or sunset). And as Selectman Paul Carlson said last week, those committees are welcome to visit selectmen at any time.

It is a good idea to conduct a periodic review. It would be a shame to waste energy and talent on a committee whose purpose may no longer be needed.

In years past, we recall the Government Island Study Committee, Hagerty Committee, Private Ways Study Committee, Drainage Study Committee, and Mosquito Control Committee – as all having gone off into the sunset. Some of the committees' charges were fulfilled while others just seemed to fade away.

Some of the newer committees, like the Economic Development Committee, are full of enthusiasm and ideas.

Here at the Mariner, we cannot cover every meeting held by every committee. However, we welcome hearing from the different committees if they think there is a story that we could tell. Also, the committees are welcome to contribute regular updates in the form of stories or columns for the Mariner.

MEETINGS

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:

Advisory Committee, Feb. 17 , 7 p.m.
Alternative Energy Committee, Feb. 17 and March 17, 7:30 p.m.
Board of Health, Feb. 26, 7 p.m. and March 3, 7 p.m.

Harbor Committee, Feb. 24 & March 10, 7 p.m.
Planning Board, Feb. 23, 7 p.m.
Recreation Commission, Feb. 23, 6 p.m.
Selectmen, Feb. 23, 7 p.m.
School Committee, Feb. 25, 7 p.m. at the high school.
School Improvement, March 4 and April 1 at 2:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Middle High School.
Sewer Commission, March 3 at 6 p.m.
Water Commission, Feb. 17, 6 p.m. at Town Hall, and Feb. 23, 6 p.m. at the King Street Plant.
Zoning Board of Appeals, March 3, 7:30 p.m.

All meetings take place at Town Hall unless otherwise noted. Call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100 for updates and additions.

Blood drive is Feb. 20

A Red Cross blood drive will take place from 1 to 7 p.m., on Friday, Feb. 20, at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, 10 Summer St., Cohasset. Childcare will be available while donating between 3 and 5 p.m. In order to give blood, potential donors must be at least 16 years of age, weigh at least 110 pounds and be in good health. Most medications and medical conditions do not prohibit a person from being a blood donor. To make an appointment to donate at this blood drive or for more information, call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 781-383-1290, Red Cross Blood Services at 800-448-3543 or visit the Web site at givelife.org.

All presenting donors at the Feb. 20 blood drive will receive a free ticket to the New England Home Show at the Seaport World Trade Center in Boston from Feb. 26 through March 1.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Charitable contributions and professional fundraisers

TO THE EDITOR:

A recent Boston Globe article stated "Of every charitable dollar raised in Massachusetts in 2007, the average solicitor kept 65 cents — with 35 cents left for the charity."

It is important that potential donors understand that the news in the Globe article cannot be applied to gifts to the Cohasset Library — past, present or future. In fact, of the $1.7 million raised to help build our new library in the old Osgood School, less than 2 cents of each dollar went for necessary expenses.

Creation of the new Paul Pratt Memorial Library was heavily dependent on the private funds raised by the Cohasset Library Building Fund, Inc., a non-profit created for that purpose. Similarly, the future of the Library will be dramatically affected by the success of the Cohasset Library Trust, Inc., a non-profit created to increase the size of the Library's endowment and to manage those funds prudently. The expense ratio for the Cohasset Library Trust also will be minimal.

The large expenses described in the Globe article went to professional fundraisers hired by charities. Thank goodness Cohasset is blessed with many good citizens who love Cohasset and its institutions and give their time and money to insure their quality.

Community support for CEF

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Cohasset Education Foundation, we would like to express our sincere gratitude at the generosity the community has shown in response to our most recent Annual Appeal Campaign. While the campaign is ongoing, we at the CEF have been very encouraged that despite the economic conditions, it is clear that excellence in our Cohasset schools remains a priority for the Cohasset community.

We are also pleased to report that because of your generosity, we have recently awarded two new grants to the Schools; Phase II of the STEM Lab at the Deer Hill School, and a Literacy Library, also for the Deer Hill School. Your continued support will enable us to continue to support excellence in the Cohasset Public Schools today and in the future.

ACE and Water Management

TO THE EDITOR:

As a member of the National Wildlife Federation, I receive their magazine National Wildlife. An article in the latest issue (vol. 47(1) p.8, 2009) begins with the sentence: "In Washington, you can bet that bad ideas from powerful special interests take a long time to kill." It describes a protracted, but ultimately successful, struggle to prevent the Army Corps of Engineers (ACE) from devastating the wetlands of the lower Mississippi Delta with a flood-control program known as the Yazoo Pumps. According to the article, "all this stupidity was planned primarily for the private financial benefit of a few dozen influential landowners."

Sounds a bit like the Treat's Pond project, doesn't it?

HEALTH NOTES

Board of Health Annual Report

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

We actually found a condition in one patient which when treated may have saved a life.

Each year, the Board of Health (BoH) submits a report to the Town which lists accomplishments and gives statistics involving the health of our citizens. It's well for the Town to know how its population is faring healthwise, what services are available and what we consider important developments. Here are the highlights:

Each year citizens elect a board member for a three-year term. Annually the Board elects a Chair and Clerk. Peggy S. Chapman, RN is Chair, the undersigned, Clerk and Robin Lawrence, member. Joseph R. Godzik, VMD, is the Health Agent and Tara N. Tradd, Health Inspector and General Administrator. This year, Mary Goodwin, RN, replaced Judy Fitzsimmons, our previous Public Health Nurse (PHN) who was hired several years ago when the Board created the position. To give you a feeling for the work carried out by the PHN, here is a listing of services provided in 2008:

Keep Well Clinics (169), PSA Testing (22), Communicable Disease Follow Up (16), Adult Immunization (900+), Home Nursing Visits (192), Diabetic / Cholesterol Screening (62), Office Nursing Visits (1031), and Health Fair Participants (102+).

Mary Goodwin has vastly improved communications within the Board and with many citizens by use of email and other computer enhancements, allowing many more office calls as well as increasing the number of home visits.

This year, working with the Paul Pratt Library we initiated a first ever BoH sponsored Brain Fitness Program. Brain plasticity is a new field of neuroscience and we found a software program, which seeks to improve cognitive capabilities of individuals. Some 20 citizens have signed up for the course on four of the Library's computers.

Guardrail has to be moved

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Greenbush Project – As you can probably gather, there is not much happening on the Greenbush Project these days. We do have a list of Open Items that we routinely send to the MBTA as a reminder of things they need to complete. Recently, we added a new item to the list for them to correct. Some of you may be familiar with the fact that the Town received a grant from the Commonwealth to put a sidewalk along Route 3A from Lower King Street to the new Greenbush station. The reason that construction has not started is that the MBTA had a considerable amount of construction to do to add a left-turn lane for the southbound traffic on Route 3A at Lower King Street Now that that work is completed, we can think about building our sidewalk. But, here's the rub — the MBTA placed the guardrail in the wrong spot. So, we can't construct a sidewalk until they move the guardrail. "A fine kettle of fish they've gotten us into!" (…words loosely attributed to Laurel and Hardy, for those of you old enough to remember them.) This past week, we initiated contact with both Scituate and Hingham to compare our Open Items lists. We'll have to see if there are any common issues that we can possibly solve on a collective basis.

Jerusalem Road Wall – As we write this, the road is still closed and things are pretty quiet at the work site. On Monday of this past week, the contractor undertook the interesting task of driving rebar in the ground near the sheeting. (Rebar is a steel rod that is usually embedded in concrete as reinforcing material.) The reason is rather interesting. Let us explain.

Before the sheeting was driven down, the engineering firm, Coughlin Environmental Services (CES), had test borings drilled all along the wall to determine the depth of the underlying ledge at various points along the wall. Using these test borings, CES could determine how far down the sheeting could be driven along the length of the wall repair area. However, as luck would have it, sometimes the sheeting could not be driven down as far as the borings indicated it should go. If the sheeting was not driven down far enough to contact the underlying ledge, there was a concern that the bottom of the sheeting, over time, might be pushed outward by the loading imposed by the road and its traffic. This could ultimately affect the stability of the road. The one-inch diameter rebar rods were driven down at the base of the sheeting so that they engaged the ledge solidly. Thus, the rods end up pinning the bottom of the sheeting to the ledge, solidifying the sheeting and the road.

The next order of business on Jerusalem Road is the completion of the necessary work alongside of the road. On the hill-side, the hill will be cut away a little bit to make the road a bit wider. On the marsh side, the road needs to be leveled, paved and guardrail and pedestrian rails installed. On Wednesday of this past week, National Grid restrung the high voltage wires on the power poles alongside the road so that the one remaining pole guy wire attached to a tree can be removed. Now, the project can remove the tree stub that was in the way of road widening. As you can imagine, a lot of the remaining work is weather dependent. We'll keep you posted as the work progresses.

Other digging in town – We happened to notice some digging going on at four locations around Town. Whenever we see digging we thought you might like to know why the work is being done. Well, in this case, it was the Water Department having the work done. It seems that the Commonwealth Department of Environmental Protection has required that the Water Department install sampling stations to enable to sampling of our water at certain points around our water distribution system.

The Water Department installed modular water sampling stations at the following points: Deep Run and Jerusalem Road area, Kendall Village area, Whitehead Road area and Elm Street near the fire station. You may notice these sampling stations as you drive by these places. A photo of the Deep Run installation is included for your viewing pleasure.

In the Deep Run photo, the sampling faucet is in the dark vertical enclosure that you can see on the round concrete slab. A second photo shows the inside of the station with its door open and the sampling faucet is quite visible.

Since the sampling station is above ground and subject to freezing in cold weather, each station has a provision where the water can be drained from the lines after the samples have been taken.

Lincoln trivia on his 200th

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Before he became commander-in-chief during America's bloodiest conflict, the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln's military service consisted of 30 days as a captain of volunteers and 50 days as a private in a little noted Indian war.

The man who is often nominated as our greatest president, whose 200th birthdate we celebrate this week, entered the fight against Chief Black Hawk's Sac and Fox Indian tribe as an elected captain of volunteers under General Zachary Taylor.

Records show he wasn't a very effective leader of men, having been reprimanded twice, once for failing to stop his men from stealing Army booze and getting drunk and again for shooting off their weapons in camp.

When his 30-day hitch as an officer was up, he signed over as a private in an Independent Ranger company, and when that was over, in 20 days, he reupped for 30 more in an Independent Spy Corps.

The future president saw no action and later joked that the only blood he lost was to mosquitoes as he chased Chief Black Hawk around Illinois and Wisconsin for the princely sum of $124 for his 80 days of active service.

It's doubtful that Honest Abe's military career is going to get much notice in all the hullabaloo surrounding his 200th, and neither is the hint of scandal, much like the recurring canard that Barack Obama is a Muslim persists today.

Here is a bit of trivia you may not read anywhere else in the next few days:

A tale current at the time, worthy of a talk show host, was that Thomas Lincoln was not Abe's father, but that the youngster was the offspring of a little hanky panky between Nancy Hanks and a neighbor named Abraham Enloe.

Tom Lincoln, incidentally, once was paid six cents an hour for "catching and whipping recalcitrant slaves" at a public whipping post specifically set up for that that purpose in Elizabethtown, Kentucky.

To advance the Union cause, Lincoln took several measures of doubtful constitutionality. He suspended the writ of habeas corpus and permitted military courts martial of civilians for anti-war activities, including Congressman Clement Vallandigham of Ohio.

Abe was issued patent #6469 for the inventing a gadget for lifting boats over sandbars, an idea growing out of his experience operating a ferry across the Sangamion River in Indiana and running produce on a flatboat down the Mississippi to New Orleans.

It was never manufactured.

Mary Todd Lincoln's brother and three of her half-brothers fought for the South in the Civil War and the president's wife herself was accused in Congress of spying, or at least sympathizing, with the Confederacy.

Lincoln served in Congress as a member of the Whig party from 1847 to 1849 and when he declined to run for another term, he was offered the post of governor of the Oregon Territory by President Zachary Taylor. He turned that down too.

His grandfather, also named Abraham, a captain in the Virginia militia during the Revolution, followed Daniel Boone to Kentucky after the war, where he was killed by Indians while tilling his fields.

What is love?

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

For years you receive little Valentines Day cards from each of your classmates and they mean nothing. Because they're inane. And the cards are stupid too. "Valentine, you make my heart go Mach Five!" says Speed Racer. "Valentine, you make my heart sticky!" says Spider Man. "Valentine, you give me congestive heart failure!" says Chris Farley. Then one February you get a Scooby Doo Valentine from Lena McHugh that says, "Valentine, you make my heart Shaggy!" Your friends all got the same card, except inside yours she has written "xoxoxo." Looking at that card makes your face hot and gives you chest pains, and it suddenly dawns on you what all the heart references are about.

What happened that day? Was it hormones? Egoism? A delusion? I don't think so.

For years you've been blissfully, intimately involved with one person — someone who wasn't happy before she met you — someone who attracts you so powerfully and constantly that the idea that you aren't meant to be together makes no sense. She has insights into you that no one else has. You make her laugh in a way that surely no one else can. Then one day, seemingly out of the blue, she tells you she would rather be with someone else.

You protest, earnestly and with increasing urgency. But you soon learn that the matter is entirely out of your hands. Your chest hurts for a long time after that. What was it you lost? A person? A future? A past? No. It was love.

For years you've essentially focused on yourself: your opportunities and challenges, your triumphs and failures. Your health. Your relationships. Even your generosity and compassion — even love itself has a source you've followed upstream and found somewhere inside you. Your death would mean the end of all these things. So you press on and press on, fearful of ends.

Then one day you hold the baton of life in your arms. This baton glows and hums with energy and warmth, like something you've never seen yet somehow remember from eons ago. You have a revelation: this is the end. Your life is over. It proceeds, but isn't yours anymore, and in giving it away you've become immortal. It's too wonderful to handle, this sudden understanding that your path isn't flat, but round, with no precipice to fall off. You look at the newborn in your hands and you see all these truths, and for the first time you feel the source and purpose of your life being gently plucked from its nest and placed outside of you. You get that pain in your chest again. Is it an instinct? A feeling of belonging? Simple pride in what you've created? No. This is something more.

For years I've focused on myself, my wife, and our children, taking my own parents largely for granted while they have kept me near the center of their thoughts. They give to me and ask very little in return. A drop of cynicism is all it would take for them to see me for the self-centered person I am, but they don't. Something has blinded them, and freed me, and kept the circle going round and round. Is it a sense of duty? Denial? Dementia?

Well, it's a bit of all three, in fact.

It is love.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset and would like to wish a very happy 50th wedding anniversary to his parents, who made it possible for him to recognize love when he saw it.

LIBRARY CORNER

Library closed on President's Day

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348.

Independent Movie Night – The library will show the independent film "The Trap" at 6 p.m., on Thursday, Feb. 19. Free admission and refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Holiday Closing – The library will be closed on Monday, Feb. 16, for Presidents Day. Library materials may be returned using the 24-hour book drop by the front door.

Library Book Group – Join others for coffee and discussion of David Blight's book "A Slave No More" at 10 a.m., on Wednesday, Feb. 25. Blight's book compiles two former slave memoirs and sheds light on the story of emancipation. One former slave, John Washington, lived the last years of his life in Cohasset and is buried in Cohasset's Woodside Cemetery. The event is free and alll are welcome.

Snowflake Coloring/Decorating Contest – Create a unique snowflake by decorating templates found on Mrs. Moody's desk. Markers, glitter, beads, etc. can be used to create a snowflake that reflects one's personality. Winners will be chosen in all age groups. The contest ends Friday, Feb. 27, at 4:30 p.m. All winners will be called.

FOR CHILDREN

Vacation Activities – Tuesday, Feb. 17, 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., drop-in crafts will take place in the Story Room. Three crafts will be ready for children to make. Children must be accompanied by an adult. Wednesday, Feb. 18, 2:30 to 4 p.m., the film "Kung Fu Panda" will be shown in the Meeting Room. It is rated PG. Children must be accompanied by an adult. Thursday, Feb. 19, 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., drop-in crafts will take place in the Story Room. Three different crafts will be ready for children to make. Children must be accompanied by an adult.

Cohasset Reads Together – The third annual town-wide reading program will take place through Feb. 27. Friends of Cohasset Library have provided copies of the book "Barefoot: Escape on the Underground Railroad" for all classrooms at the Joseph Osgood School and copies of the book "Sweet Clara and the Freedom Quilt" for all classrooms at Deer Hill School. These books are also on display in the Children's Room at the library along with other materials that support the theme of "Freedom." Cohasset Reads Together also supports the PSO annual Read-a-Thon that will begin Friday, Feb. 13. Students are encouraged to help make the third annual Cohasset Reads Together and the PSO Read-A-Thon a positive experience for all. See Mrs. Moody for assistance in selecting and obtaining books for the Read-A-Thon.

Check out 'Free Lunch with Rich Ofsthun'

In a new occasional series, Cohasset resident and funny man Rich Ofsthun visits local lunch hot spots in search of a free meal. Thinking outside the water bottle

COMMENTARY

GAIL COLLINS

Attendees at the February Cohasset Political Forum, "Think Outside the Bottle," took part in a blind taste test of local and bottled waters. The source of the four samples, unknown to the tasters, were Dasani Water (Coke), Aquafina (Pepsi), Cohasset and Boston tap water. To the surprise of some, the two waters deemed best tasting by all who took part were Cohasset and Boston's tap water. Equally surprising was the comparison of the cost of bottled water, which on average is $1.50 for a 20-ounce bottle, to the cost of the often less preferred tap water which, given an equal amount of water, averages around six-tenths of a cent. Many of those in attendance, after hearing the presentation by Corporate Accountability International, took the pledge to refrain from using bottled water.

The bottled water forum, which was a combined effort of the Cohasset Political Forum and Corporate Accountability International (CAI), whose campaign, "Think Outside the Bottle" provided an interested audience with information about the various impacts of the bottled water industry on local and international economies, as well as on the availability, worldwide, of clean, safe water. CAI is a nonprofit, grass roots organization that focuses on social and political effects of corporate behaviors and policies on societies around the world. One of CAI's most well known successes, when they were known in the '70s as Infact (Infant Formula Action Coalition), was to focus attention on Nestle Corporation's marketing of baby formula to mothers in the developing world. Babies were dying due to Nestle's baby formula being mixed with unsafe, local water and in some cases diluted to unhealthy levels due to cost. Infact's campaign began in 1976 and by 1984, thanks to the organization's efforts, Nestle executives signed a code of conduct to stop deleterious marketing of its infant formula. A more recent success of CAI's "Think Outside the Bottle" campaign was to get Nestle Corporation to provide the source of its' Perrier Water, which in many cases is tap water. Up to 40 percent of all bottled water is actually tap water, according to CAI.

CAI's bottled water campaign attempts to inform people of the effects of corporations such as, Coke, Pepsi and Nestle (Perrier Water) in producing and marketing bottled water. The marketing campaigns of these and other bottled water corporations has produced the high demand for bottled water while reducing the drinking of well regulated, local tap water. Some lab tests of bottled water have been found to contain arsenic and organic chemicals and other potentially harmful contaminants. One third of bottled water tested has been found to contain bacteria. Adding to these negative aspects of bottled water, which is a $15 billion business in the U.S. alone, is the 80 percent of empty plastic bottles, which are not recycled. The costs in oil used to produce and distribute each bottle of water would fill one fourth of that same water bottle.

According to CAI, the U.N. predicts that if current water scarcity trends and increasing corporate control of water continues, two-in-three people will soon lack access to enough clean water. The presenter of the forum, Gigi Kellett, gave as a local example Atlanta's recent problem with their water supply. During the summer and fall of 2007 Atlanta, among other southeastern U.S. communities, faced drought conditions. Yet, Coke and its competitors continued to bottle water from Atlanta's water system and other nearby communities to sell back to the people in the community. At the same time the people were asked to reduce their water usage. Water, according to CAI, is turning into commodity, while the marketing of bottled water has caused the public to lose confidence in tap water.

The World Bank, according to CAI, is one of the engines driving the corporate water grab. Though its stated aim is to reduce global water poverty and improve living standards in the world's poorest countries, the World Bank often requires that governments privatize their water systems as conditions of receiving loans even when public water systems could better meet the needs of the poor. For example, several years ago, the Colombian government, strapped for cash, accepted a World Bank loan on the condition that it contract out water services for the seaside communities of Santa Marta and Taganga to Metroagua, a subsidiary of the transnational corporation Suez. Since then, the poorer residents of Taganga, a small fishing village, still don't have running water and are forced to buy high-priced water from vendors. Meanwhile, the resort town of Santa Marta has gotten a new sanitation system installed, whose pipes run straight into the bay off Taganga's shore, polluting the water and exposing townspeople to contaminated water and water-borne disease."

CAI is working to convince local governments in cities around the U.S. to phase out bottled water and call for more public funding for public water systems. Public water systems in the U.S., according to CAI, are facing a $22 billion funding deficit. In the last 30 years the U.S. government investments in water systems have gone from covering 78 percent of the cost of new water infrastructure down to an investment of 3 percent per year. Locally there is an effort to encourage Massachusetts Governor Deval Patrick to phase out the state government's use of bottled water. San Francisco, for example, saved $500,000 the first year after cancellation of its bottled water contract. These savings are being put back into San Francisco's public water system and things like water fountains across the city.

The Cohasset Political Forum will continue its education and information on the subject of the worldwide water crisis with a documentary presented on movie night, which is sponsored by the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee. "Flow" will be shown on Friday, Feb. 27, at 7 p.m., at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset.

Library use up in a down economy

The library is a comfortable home for both new technologies like laptops which can take advantage of the wireless hotspot at the library and older forms of communications like the written word, as Shannon Whalen, 12, reads her book, "The Pearl" by John Steinbeck.

Barnes & Nobles, the library has hundreds of options with no cost, as long as you return them on time.

"There is no doubt that public libraries in Massachusetts and all across the nation are extremely busy right now as more and more people rely on library resources to use job seeking resources, use the internet and technology, and save money by checking out books and DVDs," said Rafferty.

Rafferty said computer use at the library is constant. The library has a total of 22 computers, seven PCs in the children's rooms, three in the young adult room and 12 in the reference/study area. There is no way for the library to track wireless users, but there is anecdotal evidence of an increase.

"I think due to the economic downturn, people are letting go of their internet subscriptions and using the library computers and internet," said Rafferty. "Our public computers are always busy."

In the last year, the library was able to replace some of the aging public computers with new models with a combination of $10,000 in town capital funding and $10,000 from a net lender grant awarded to the town for being a "net lender," a library that loans out more materials from Cohasset to other southeastern Massachusetts libraries than they borrow.

Cohasset is part of the Old Colony Library Network and has one of the highest rates of books lent per person. In 2006, according to information compiled by the Mass Board of Library Commissioners, Cohasset had by far the highest number of books and magazines lent by public libraries per person — 14.6 percent — when compared to 18 other South Shore communities. The town nearest that number was Hingham, which hovered just over 12 books/magazines per person.

Circulation

A policy decision was put into place in the past year to restrict more of the library's materials for Cohasset use during the first six months due to increased local demand for the materials. Prior to that decision, Rafferty said, Cohasset library materials were going out through the Old Colony Library Network. The result was increased circulation numbers, but negatively impacted local customer satisfaction.

In addition, another policy keeps the latest edition of magazines in-house. This had the same effect: reduced circulation statistics, but increased user satisfaction for patrons reading the magazines at the library.

Still, the circulation totals for the first half of fiscal 2009 (July through December) are up over the same time period the year before. In fiscal 2008: 76,987 loans were made, in fiscal 2009: 79,939.

Budget

Amidst the growing need and demand for services, the library, like other town departments, is facing budget cuts.

"The timing couldn't be worse for a cut in the library budget," said Rafferty. As a result of the cuts, the library will have to close on Sundays beginning over the summer, which is typically a very busy day at the library.

"It is ironic and disappointing that at a time when we should be open more, we are being forced to reduce hours and reduce our materials budget," said Rafferty.

Despite increased use over the past few years particularly since the library moved to its new location at the former Osgood School (circulation has grown by 50 percent) the library's percentage of the total town budget has decreased. In fiscal 1988, 2.2 percent of the budget was devoted to the library. In fiscal 1998, it was 1.94 percent. In fiscal 2002, it hit a low of 1.45 percent (it was 1.45 percent again in fiscal 2005) and in fiscal 2007 the library budget was 1.54 percent of the total town budget.

Charles Darwin's 200th birthday: Feb. 12

COMMENTARY

MARY KENNEDY

Like most young boys, Charles Darwin was more interested in birds and bugs than Latin and Greek.

...On returning home I found a letter informing me that Captain FitzRoy was willing to give up part of his own cabin to any young man who would volunteer to go with him without pay as naturalist to the voyage of the Beagle.

Like most young boys, Charles Darwin was more interested in birds and bugs than Latin and Greek. The headmaster once shamed him before the entire school by announcing "Here's a boy who plays around with his gases and the rest of his rubbish and works at nothing useful."

A medical school dropout, a frivolous undergraduate at Cambridge University, destined – his father hoped – for a career in the Church of England, Darwin's fascination with collecting beetles led to an interest in geology. At that time, the 1820s, science was considered the pursuit of amateurs. Even the word "scientist" had not yet come into common use.

...Could you tell me, Professor Sedgwick, how a large tropical seashell dug out of a gravel pit could have gotten to the center of England, thousands of miles from tropical seas?

The HMS Beagle was bound on a voyage that would include a survey of the southern coast of South America: Tierra del Fuego, Patagonia, the Falkland Islands in the Atlantic and the Galapagos Islands in the Pacific. The sturdy little brig was 235 tons, 90 feet long and 24 feet in the beam. On Dec. 27, 1831, she sailed – with 22-year old Charles Darwin onboard – out of Plymouth Harbor and into history.

...My principal occupation at sea is the "enjoyment" of seasickness.

As a university student, Darwin had accepted the popular theory that all animals and plants were much as they had been when they were first created several thousand years ago. One strongly held belief was that certain animals had become extinct because Noah had refused them passage on the Ark. In the Falkland Islands, however, Darwin came to realize that foxes, once prolific, were slowly dying off. Why? It was one of the problems that would absorb him for the rest of his life. Another was natural selection: just what is the nature of the process by which species evolve over time?

On the southern shore of Tierra del Fuego, they found natives dressed in animal skins, seemingly oblivious to the cold, snow or sleet. Constantly in search of food, they slept on the bare ground, barely sheltered by grass or hides stretched over branches. And yet, they thrived. Why? In his writings Darwin later noted that all living things, in order to survive, have a unique way of adapting to the most difficult circumstances.

...With still a hundred miles to go and with the miseries of constant wet and cold and hardly an hour free of sea-sickness, my spirits, temper and stomach will not hold out much longer.

Almost a year after sailing, in November 1832, the Beagle reached the east coast of Tierra del Fuego and anchored in the Bay of Good Success. For three months, in great discomfort from violent winds, turbulent water, and cold, they waited, finally managing to round Cape Horn after 24 hours of battling a southwest gale. Moving west, they surveyed the whole length of the Beagle Channel (named during Captain FitzRoy's earlier exploration), a distance of 120 miles to the Pacific.

...The archipelago (Galapagos Islands) is remarkable, a little world within itself. We seem to be brought somewhat near to that great fact – that mystery of mysteries – the first appearance of new beings on this earth.

Where did those insects, birds, tortoises, come from? In the mid 1800s the answer seemed fairly obvious. God, of course, created them and they remained from the moment of creation just as He had made them.

...I have returned a millionaire in odd and curious facts.

What Charles Darwin gained from his five-year voyage were questions and more questions and the realization that the usual answers of learned philosophers and theologians could not possibly be valid. The facts and the conclusions that he drew from his observations on that voyage later appeared in "The Origin of Species," a book which has profoundly influenced almost every branch of human thinking.

...I see no good reason why the views given in this volume should shock the religious feelings of anyone. The greatest discovery ever made (Newton's law of universal gravitation) was also attacked as subversive of religion.

Board of Health Annual Report

FROM HEALTH, PAGE 8

(CSCR) provide the BoH with an assessment of the environmental health of the Town. This year they continued to monitor water quality in Cohasset Harbor and the surrounding area. Enterococci bacteria levels continue to be high especially in the area of the so-called "Parker Avenue Cut". The US Environmental Protection Agency also concluded their water quality investigation of Cohasset Harbor. Their report is available in the Board of Health Office.

The Board continues to monitor water quality at the beaches around town and in Cohasset Harbor. Samples are collected weekly from mid-June to Labor Day at Bassing Beach, Cohasset Harbor at the Yacht Club, Sandy Cove, Sandy Beach, Black Rock Beach and Little Harbor near Cunningham Bridge. This year Health Inspector Tradd was assisted by CSCR Student Marcus Charles. Marcus ran split lab samples of the Beach waters all season long. Marcus's lab results were outstandingly consistent with professional test lab results thereby saving the Town considerable laboratory analysis expense.

Emergency Preparedness planning continues. We hosted several Emergency Preparedness training exercises and continue to recruit for the Medical Reserve Corps (MRC). Persons who have no medical training are needed for support roles. Applications for both medical and support staff are available at the Board of Health Office or the town website www.townofcohasset.org. This year plans are being made to upgrade the emergency communication system to make our emergency systems even more responsive.

The annual Health Fair was held at the Second Congregational Church on Sept. 16, 2008. More than 100 residents participated. Free screenings for cholesterol (total and HDL) blood glucose, bone density, oral cancer, glaucoma, and skin cancers were offered as well as nutrition, mental health evaluations and bike and car seat safety promotions. New this year was PSA testing for prostate cancer with 22 people screened. We actually found a condition in one patient which when treated may have saved a life.

Two Flu clinics for senior citizens and high-risk adults were held at the Town Hall as well as a town wide flu clinic including children over the age of nine. Clinics were also held at Harborview Housing and Sunrise Assisted Living Center. 840 doses of flu vaccine were administered. Many volunteers assisted with the paperwork, directing patient flow and administration of vaccine at the flu clinics.

The Board supported Jim Hamilton and many students of Cohasset High who organized and volunteered for the annual Earth Day Cleanup. Tara Tradd is coordinator of the Adopt a Street Program. Seven areas in town have been adopted by various groups in a partnership between the Town and community minded businesses, organizations and citizens. By working together we can continue to provide a beautiful environment for all. This program also educates and encourages people to stop littering and take pride in their community. To become part of this new program contact: tarat@townofcohasset.org.

This year, the Board will be updating our Drinking and Irrigation Well Regulation and changes to regulations for decommissioning septic and holding tanks — needed to support the ongoing sewer and water system upgrade now disrupting streets. It's been said that Cohasset is the only Town in the Commonwealth where the trails are better than the roads; a condition we hope to correct by summer '09.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Commercial permit fees timely topic

Commercial enterprises can purchase three all facility stickers for $125. For those same stickers, residents pay $150 ($50 each). In order to address this inconsistency, Town Manager Bill Griffin sought input from the Board of Selectmen.

Town Manager Bill Griffin, Finance Director Mike Buckley and the Town Clerk's office proposed two solutions: providing commercial enterprises with two stickers for $125 or increase the cost for three stickers to $175.

The Selectmen didn't like either choice.

Vice Chairman Paul Carlson said he didn't feel a change in the pricing structure was necessary because residents are getting access to Sandy Beach with their sticker.

"I don't know if it is really necessary," said Carlson.

Chairman Ted Carr asked how many commercial stickers are purchased each year. Griffin was not sure of the number.

The Selectmen wanted a little more information and will take up the discussion again at a future meeting.

It's do or die time

CHS skaters must win three of final four to earn tourney berth

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

It comes down to this: the Cohasset High hockey team must win three of its final four games to qualify for the state tourney.

Of course, if the Skippers play like they did over the back end of Saturday night's 6-3 win over South Shore League rival Mashpee, Coach Bob Walsh feels that is eminently doable.

"I think we saw in that stretch what our guys are capable of when they're playing with confidence," said the Skippers third year head coach. "The talent is there. We can be a very dangerous team, but we're young. There are times I think these guys forget how skilled they are. It's my job to make sure they don't lose sight of that."

The Skippers fell behind by a 2-0 score on the road Saturday night in a game that was, for all intents and purposes, a do or die affair. They turned it around in a big way down the stretch, though, to outscore the host Falcons by a 6-1 margin to take a 6-3 decision that really was not as close as that score might indicate.

"I think we saw in that stretch what our guys are capable of when they're playing with confidence."
Cohasset coach Bob Walsh

Juniors Andy McKenna and Brendan Doonan scored two goals apiece and the third member of that line, sophomore Anders Goetz, netted a pair of assists. Senior Paul Pozniak netted a solo tally, but it was freshman Alex Evans who got the Skippers going.

The Skippers got sloppy in their own end to surrender the only goal of the first period 2:05 in, then let Mashpee captain Liam Sullivan go end-to-end on the first shift of the second period to double their deficit.

Evans finally got the Skippers off the schneid, as he trailed a charge to the net by junior Conor Queenan and ripped home a wrister from just inside the left dot, beating the Falcons goalie top far-side.

It took the Skippers only 57 second more to climb all the way back, as McKenna kept pounding away off the rebound of a slapper from the right point by kid brother Sean, and finally poked it home. Goetz set the play with some great digging in the right corner and a nice feed back to the point.

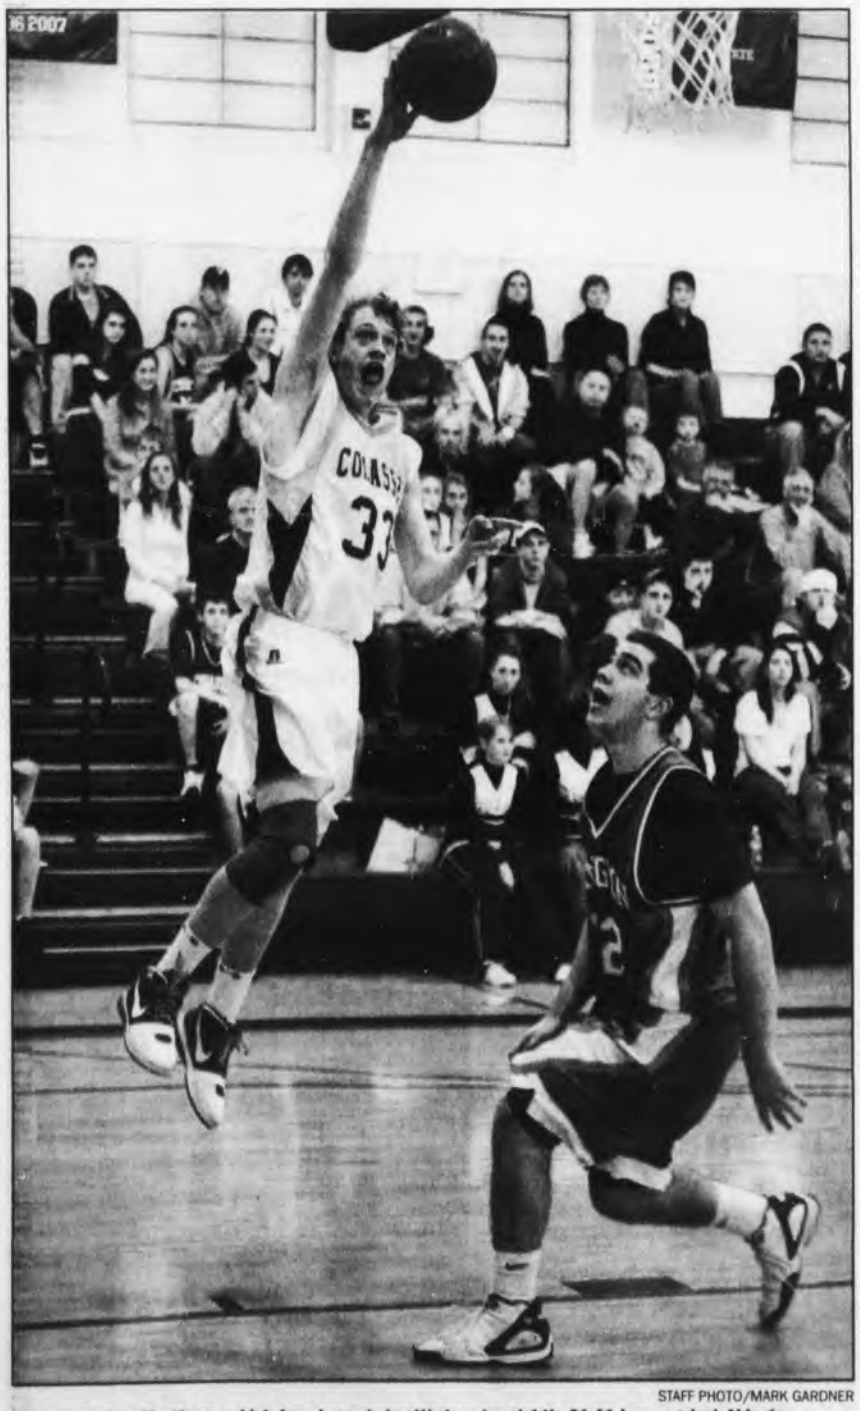
Just 1:01 after the equalizer, though, the Skippers defense let a Mashpee forward slip behind them and walk in all alone, wrapping it around goalie Johnny Wade on the forehand after a nifty deke to the backhand to get him down.

No one would have been able to blame Coach Walsh if he'd thrown a full-blown nutty at this point, considering he'd seen his defense give up three clean breakaway goals in the final 3:30 just 72 hours earlier in a heartbreaking 6-5 loss to Abington, a loss which may well have cost the Skippers second place in the South Shore League and the automatic tourney berth that goes along with it. And also considering he'd had a meeting with the defensemen prior to Saturday's game to forewarn them that Mashpee employed the same "sneakaway forward" attack.

Aside from instantly switching out his blue line duo, however, the veteran coach responded surprisingly calmly, and his players followed suit by maintaining their composure and proceeding to dominate the remainder of the game.

The goal that knocked Mashpee out of the lead for good was also the prettiest of the game. It came at 1:17 of the third period. After making a steal in the neutral zone, Goetz gained the blue line quickly along the left wing boards and fed into the near circle to McKenna, who moved toward net to draw in the lone defenseman back, then feathered a perfect cross-ice pass to the wide open Doonan sliding into the slot. Doonan got the Mashpee goalie down with a nice fake to the forehand then tucked it around him on the backhand to tie the game.

Pozniak gave the Skippers their first lead less than a minute later, as he collected a loose puck behind Cohasset's net, saw an opening up the left boards and turned on the jets. The senior beat the final defender back with a nice move to the outside, then cut it back into the left circle before unloading with a rearing back to unleash a blistering wrister that snuck just inside the near post.



Doonan scored on a similar rush four minutes later, with 9:10 to play, on a brilliant end-to-end charge that culminated with a nifty bank pass to himself as he gained the blue line along the left boards and a quick, low snapper

Heartbreak followed by elation for boys

Boys basketball team loses heartbreaker, wins grudge match

The Skippers had an exciting week of league play, losing at the buzzer to Mashpee 61-62 and devastating the Pirates from Hull 65-50 in front of a great hometown crowd.

The Skippers traveled to Mashpee and both teams came out ready to go.

The Coho press was quickly dismantled by Mashpee in the first quarter and Cohasset retreated to it's zone defense. The first quarter ended at 17-17.

First quarter Cohasset scoring was provided by Danny Martin (16 points, 15 rebounds), Johnny Maher (9 points, 7 rebounds) and Robert Jones (14 points, 5 assists), each scoring including buckets off offensive boards.

In the second frame, Mashpee dominated scoring 17 points again, while holding Cohasset to 10.

Mashpee smothered the Skippers with great defense forcing turnovers. The third quarter saw the Skippers battle back to a 47 all tie.

John Sturino (6 points) had the hot hand in the third, hitting the jumper and putting back missed shots from underneath. Marcus Charles (13 points, 4 rebounds, 2 steals) also ramped up the Coho energy with his quick hands forcing turnovers and his lightening speed getting open for the fastbreak buckets.

Owen Landon did his usual defensive magic forcing Mashpee into turnovers, one of which led to a Charles fastbreak bucket.

The Skippers took the lead in the fourth, playing calm and sophisticated basketball. They came out strong and scored seven unanswered points. The game came down to the final 2.5 seconds, with the Skippers up by three. Mashpee had the ball out of bounds, launched a trey that missed but a Mashpee player put

Lady Skippers streak busted at 39 games

By Susan Franklin

Last week the Cohasset Lady Skippers outplayed Mashpee 57-35 and conquered Hull 68-49, clinching the South Shore League Title and extending their winning streak to 39 games.

However, with just two games remaining in the regular season, the tournament bound Skippers were handed their first loss in two seasons by the Abington Waves, 45-38.

In order to make it to the playoff round, Abington had to win and they executed their game plan well enough to come out on top.

A tightly packed zone silenced Cohasset's inside game.

This strategy had been employed by other teams unsuccessfully, as Cohasset's versatile squad simply answered with a barrage of points from the outside.

Unfortunately, in Abington this was not the case.

Cold from outside the paint, Cohasset could not overcome a flawless performance by Abington.

Last Tuesday, the team hosted Mashpee.

Less than four minutes into the first quarter, Cohasset's starters jumped out to a 10-4 lead.

Cohasset brought in fresh legs who continued to produce results. Sophomores Rachel Fredey, Carli Haggerty, Lindsey Davis and freshman Anna Seraikas kept Cohasset ahead and at the close of the quarter the score stood at 16-6.

Cohasset put in 20 points in the second quarter with just about everyone whose sneaker touched the pine contributing to the tally. The quarter started out with a beautiful play by Cohasset juniors Tori Lehr and Meredith Kelly. From the wing, Lehr tossed a picture perfect pass to Kelly on a trip back door and she iced the reverse layup. Haggerty

Seniors Carly Salerno, Kayla Farren and Sammi Lehr pose with their parents on Senior Night, Tuesday.

Senior girls honored at Senior Night

The last regular season home game against Mashpee was on senior night where graduating co-captains Carly Salerno, Kayla Farren and Sammi Lehr were honored in a pre-game ceremony.

The backbone of this young team for the past two seasons, these seniors have competed at the varsity level since their freshman year.

The players were introduced and joined at center court by their parents.

"Time has gone by so quickly", said Coach John LeVangie. "I have been honored to have been able to spend two hours a day the past four years in the company of these talented players - they are great girls".

Co-captains as juniors and seniors, these young women are well liked by their teammates and respected by their coaches. It is hard not to like players with such character. They have strong work ethics; they play 110 percent every game; they respect their coaches; they encourage their teammates, and they appreciate their fans.

The senior girls had some comments about the night and their time at Cohasset.

"This team has been such a big part of my life the past four years and it has taught me so much. Tonight is one of the nights you always think about but never think will actually come," senior Carly Salerno said. "But even next year when I'm not playing, I'll still love basketball and this team. It will most definitely be one of the highlights of my life."

Kayla Farren also spoke.

"It has been a great four years for Cohasset Girls Basketball," Farren said. "I'll always remember winning the state championship and all the great games our team, coaches and fans have been involved with. I hope the excitement continues and the Cohasset gyms are always full of girls playing basketball."

"When Kayla, Carly and I began playing on varsity our freshman year, I don't think any of us anticipated how much it would impact our lives. To see two other senior nights come and go, I never expected it would be so emotional," Sammi Lehr said. "It has been very exciting to be a part of the Cohasset Girls Basketball Team, winning the state title, and being a team that everyone in town knows. I hope that the younger girls in town persist in playing with determination and a love for the game."

Cohasset's Bell hits NCAA diving marks

CAMBRIDGE — The Tufts University women's swimming & diving team competed at the MIT/Middlebury Invitational on Friday night and Saturday at MIT. The competition was the last of the regular-season for the Jumbos.

"It is really a meet for our non-NESCAC championship team kids to have a shave and taper end-of-the-season meet," Tufts coach Nancy Bigelow said. "They all did super."

The Tufts diving tandem of senior Lindsay Gardel (Wayland, MA) and junior Kelsey Bell (Cohasset, MA) both posted national qualifying scores on the one- and three-meter boards. Gardel won both events with scores of 470.90 in one-meter and 485.35 in three-meter. Bell scored 441.4 in one-meter and 416.55 in three-meter. By virtue of her scores for 11 dives in both events, Bell is now eligible to submit a tape for NCAA Championships consideration. Gardel qualified to do so earlier in the season.

The Jumbos were first in two other events at the meet, which included competitors from eight teams overall and was non-scoring.

Up next for the team is the NESCAC Championship meet at Bowdoin College February 20-22.

Seventh grade hoopsters still holding playoff hope

Cohasset's seventh Grade Boys Patriot League Travel Basketball Team faced off against last year's champions from Silver Lake, as the Boys in Blue continued in their fight to a playoff berth. After a heartbreaking two point loss to Abington on February 1, Cohasset needed a win to stay in the playoff hunt.

This game lived up to its advance billing, as both teams pressed the entire game, and the up-tempo game energized the gym. Cohasset broke to an early lead, keyed by Mark "Skywalker" Rattenbury's and Rocco Laugelle's aggressive drives to the hoop after Cohasset's press forced Silver Lake turnovers, Joe "Buck" Buckley's inside play on both ends of the court, Henry "Chopper" Brown's jumper, and Dakota "D-Train" Achin's three point play. Midway through the first half, Cohasset had made mini runs, with Silver Lake narrowing the margin to a single bucket on several occasions, and Cohasset stretching the lead to six on three occasions. Liam "LB, but it should be Sir Charles, as in Barkley" Burke and Mark "the Eraser" Brown did a spectacular job on the boards, with each netting key hoops on the inside.

Guards Laugelle "the X-Factor", Mark McKenna and Jack "Magnet" Conte, came up big on the defensive end, creating havoc as the wing men on Cohasset's press, with McKenna driving to the hoop and dropping a key free throw. In the last three minutes, Cohasset's sweet built a nine point lead.

But Silver Lake, as defending Patriot league champions, showed their mettle, and narrowed the gap to three at half, keyed by their quicksilver guards.

The second half was a stirring tussle, as both teams shooting guard trio of Doug "the Professor" Fitzgerald, Chris "Hoops" Haggerty and Brendan "the General" O'Connell played to their monikers, as "the Professor" taught an age old hoop lesson - never leave a sweet shooter alone, and canned a monster jumper after Silver Lake had closed to within two; "Hoops" played to his name, as he lead the team in second half scoring, and knocked down two critical jumpers, and a put back under the hoop; and "the General" directed the troops home from the point, and swished two pressure free throws in the final minute. In the end, the Boys in Blue walked off with a hard earned and well deserved 42-37 win, in a total team effort.

Cohasset now takes an overall record of 10-8 into a February vacation break, and returns to the hard court on Saturday the 21st at Hanson, and home against rival Hull on Sunday, February 22 at 1 pm. Go Blue!

Coastal Nissan Presents "South Shore Athlete of the Month" Award to Maggie McGoldrick

Coastal Nissan of Norwell recently selected Maggie McGoldrick, a Cohasset High School senior, as "Athlete of the Month." Each month, Coastal Nissan chooses a student for this award, recognizing his or her outstanding athletic and academic performance, sportsmanship, and overall team contributions. Coastal Nissan donates $500 on the student's behalf to the athletic department of his or her school. Consequently, $500 was awarded to the Cohasset Athletic Fund in McGoldrick's name.

As senior captain of the women's varsity soccer team, McGoldrick was chosen for scoring 16 goals and providing six assists this season, and for her leadership on the field, which enabled her teammates to excel as well. Mc Goldrick was also unanimously voted the number-one player in the South Shore League.

WHAT IS CAMP? HOW DO I KNOW IT'S A CAMP?
WHAT ARE THE DIFFERENT OPTIONS?
Answered by, Bette Bussel, Executive Director American Camp Association, New England

What is Camp?
Camp/kaemp', > n. 1. a sustained experience which provides a creative, recreational and educational group living opportunity in the out-of-doors. Trained leadership and the resources of the natural surroundings contribute to each camper's mental, physical, social and spiritual growth.

How do you know it's a camp?
Camps are intentional communities—worlds created exclusively for campers' fun and learning. Take the time to discover why camps do what they do. At the heart of every camp's culture is: what activities are offered, how campers experience those activities (schedule) and why(philosophy). Summer Experiences go by many names: "camps", "options", "experiences", "adventures" and "programs" to list a few. Make sure you compare "apples to apples." And don't be afraid to ask: Who regulates your camp/summer program? To whom are you accountable?

Types of Camp
Day Camps typically serve children ages 3-15 during daytime only. Overnight/Resident/Sleepaway Camps usually serve children ages 6-17 for one to eight weeks at a time. Children sleep at camp. General Camps offer a range of activities. Many provide opportunities to focus on one or two activities while allowing campers to try a variety of others. Trip & Travel programs are often camp-based. Most trip and travel programs involve muscle-powered sports like biking, hiking and canoeing; adventure or wilderness exploration. Campers spend most of their time preparing to travel and traveling. Specialty Camps are based at day or resident camps. Opportunities to concentrate on certain program areas such as horseback riding, the arts, travel, sports or computers are most popular. Camps for Special Populations serve specific clientele like children or adults with particular medical conditions, disabilities or special needs. Some camps focus on campers who share very specific diagnoses while others are geared to meet a broader array of needs at any one time. Religiously-Affiliated Camps offer religious education formally and informally. Review materials carefully for explanations of how religion influences camp culture.

Heartbreak followed by elation

the ball back in the net from the weak side and Mashpee won 62-61.

"We were down at the half as Mashpee shot the ball very well but even still we played a solid game," coach Bo Ruggiero said. "We made a few adjustments and came out to not only tie the game but go ahead and I thought we were going to pull out another come from behind victory. But we had some serious mental lapses in the closing minute of the game. We only had 15 turnovers and in such a high paced game that is a pretty good count. We shot 46 percent from the floor and Danny had a double double. We were only 54 percent from the free throw line and that hurt. It was a very good game that we just ended up on the wrong side of the glass and the wrong side of the score."

Next up was Hull. Early in the season, the Skippers lost to rival Hull by 10. With the pep band and a great crowd on their side, the boys in blue were not only looking to even the score against Hull, they needed to come back after the one point loss to Mashpee.

"We were in control from the get go," Ruggiero said. "We ran and pressed and executed our stuff. It was one of our top three games of the year".

Sturino (6 points) got the scoring started off double picks set by Jones and Maher.

Martin worked the paint well scoring from underneath. Landon set great picks for Martin to work his game down low. The Skippers lead 16-6 after one, and 30-25 at the half.

Charles was a perfect six-for-six from the free throw line in the first half, and nine- for-10 in the game. The Coho press worked against the slower Hull team. The Pirates had frequent substitutions as their big guys couldn't keep up the with the well conditioned and quicker Skippers. Getting the ball inside to Martin and getting Hull to foul was the game plan and it worked.

"We only had 11 turnovers, we shot the ball well from the floor at 48 percent and we were terrific from the free throw line at 76 percent," Ruggiero continued. "Marcus Charles had a 25 point game, his highest of the year and he had 4 assists and once again had a HUGE steal down the stretch (4 total). Robert Jones had 12 points and led the break and the offense and he distributed the ball very well, tallying 9 assists".

The fans were entertained at the half by the boys fourth grade travel basketball team who scrimmaged and delighted the crowd with their energy and enthusiasm.

Cohasset accelerated in the third quarter with intense pressure on the press and quick outlets off defensive boards for the fast break layups. Charles and Martin (20 total points, 10 rebounds) contributed 27 of the team's 35 second half points.

"Of course, Danny Martin continues to impress with a double double and 5 blocks. His dunk off a set play to start the second half got the juices flowing" Ruggiero remarked. "His partner on the boards, Johnny Maher had 7 defensive rebounds and kept the much bigger Hull players off the glass. John Sturino did his usual stellar job of getting fast break points, playing D and providing great energy. This was the third game in a row we had terrific contributions from Super Subs Owen Landon and Robbie Mahoney. In all three games this week they have been really impressive. We will need that come tournament time."

Ruggiero said the game was a fun one.

"The players just loved it – they were very happy beating Hull and quite frankly they deserved to feel excited. It was a very good win over a very good team. Hull is solid and they have big bodies and they are very well coached by Jim Quatramoni" Ruggiero said. "Now the team is 14 and 4 with 4 games remaining, three at home. With a few more wins, this looks like it could be a special year for Cohasset Boys Basketball."

Come cheer on the Skippers tonight at 6:30 at CMHS gym as they face Lynnfield in non-league action.

Worth waiting for

Wrestlers sweep weekend tri

By Emily Toomey
CHS CORRESPONDENT

It is commonly said that the best things in life are worth waiting for.

This was proven to be true last Friday when the Cohasset wrestling team defeated Milton 21-12, and, after a late arrival on the guests' side, also beat Jeremiah Burke 36-6.

With the Milton team shorthanded, there were only six matches in the meet.

Gus Helbock led Cohasset with a strong start, pinning with fifty seconds left in the first period. Two weight-classes later, freshman Chris Brash won with 22 points over his opponent's 15.

Billy Mack followed, pinning with thirty-seven seconds left in the first period, and Matt Brooks ended the meet by pinning in eighty-six seconds.

After much confusion and a change in scenery, the team relocated in order to face Jeremiah Burke, which was also lacking wrestlers.

Cohasset had a promising beginning with Rudy Helbock pinning in the second period of the first match. Jack Murphy continued the pattern with another pin during the third period with fifty-eight seconds left on the clock. Junior Sean MacCarthy was equally victorious, pinning with less than a minute left in the second period.

Captains David Toomey and Mike Froio had the same results, each making a pin in the second period.

Cam Washak finished the matches by pinning in the first period, leaving the overall score 36-6 in Cohasset's favor.

Having made two notable triumphs, the Cohasset wrestling team got the weekend off to a wonderful start.

just inside the near post.

An empty netter from McKenna closed out the scoring with 39 seconds to play.

Next Up

The Skippers (6-8-2 overall, 6-3-1 in SSL play) were slated to travel back to the Cape last night, but this time going all the way down to the Tony Kent Arena in Orleans to take on South Shore League rival Harwich. The CHS skaters dominated the Roughriders, 8-4, the first time around, but Walsh sounded anxious over the prospect of his young charges performing after the two-hour bus trek.

A win on the lower Cape would keep the Skippers in the running for a second place finish in the SSL. Of course, they'd need help to pull that off. Abington (7-2) currently sits in second place behind unbeaten Norwell (11-0, 12-2-2 overall). Of course, the Green Wave must still face off one more time each with Norwell and fourth place Mashpee, so there remained a realistic shot at the second place slotting.

Should Abington drop these two remaining league games, the Skippers would still have to top Carver in the regular season finale on Tuesday (8:40 a.m. start, Bridgewater Ice Arena) to finish a half game ahead of Abington in the standings.

All things considered, Walsh hopes it doesn't come down to the scenario that relies on two other teams to help his Skippers out.

"The only way we're looking at is we need to win three of our final games, period," said Walsh. "That's the only thing we can control, so it's the only thing we should be focusing on. It's one game at a time from here on out."

Sandwiched between these two league games are non-league grudge matches with Rockland this afternoon (3:20 p.m., Pilgrim Arena) and a Monday morning game with South Shore Voch Tech (10:30 a.m., Pilgrim). In initial go-rounds with these teams, the Skipeprs lost 4-2 and tied 1-1. Walsh feels his young charges have come a long way since these setbacks, and believes they are more than capable of taking wins this time around.

grabbed a pair on a follow up shot and Salerno hit one from the short corner. League leading scorer Kelly contributed with a layup off a fast break, Davis dropped in two from the foul line and Seraikas hit for two as well. At the halftime buzzer Cohasset led 36-6.

Mashpee tallied four points early in the third, but they could not contain Cohasset's scoring machine. Virtually all Cohasset points were generated on fast breaks and inbound plays. On a steal, Davis hit a streaking Seraikas for a breakaway layup, then took the honors herself, netting one from the corner on an inbound play. At the end of the quarter Cohasset was out front 46-21. The fourth quarter was slow going for Cohasset.

Mashpee drilled a 3-pointer taking the score to 48-25. The three senior co-captains took the floor with the team's newest members, freshman Seraikas and Kay Slamp.

Seraikas drove the baseline grabbing a foul and the basket. At the line she iced the 3-point conversion and Cohasset led 51-29.

With 4 minutes remaining the seniors exited the floor. Acknowledged by the announcer, they received a standing ovation from the crowd. Not to be left out, Rachel Fredey hit two shots in the final minutes of the quarter and Cohasset went home victorious 57-35. Clinching the South Shore League title with a record of 17-0, Cohasset extended its two-year winning streak to 38 games.

Cohasset traveled to Hull on Friday evening to face the Pirates. It did not take more than a nanosecond to get to full intensity. Having already clinched the South Shore Division title, Hull was out to be the team to hand Cohasset its first defeat in 39 outings.

Aware of the depth of the Cohasset squad, Hull matched up in a full court man-to-man defense. Cohasset attacked the basket with drives that drew fouls but they were all before the shot. The pace was fast and the tension high. Hull held an 11-6 lead five minutes into play, but their aggressive defensive strategy resulted in five team fouls tallied against them.

Hull's short court defense was so intense that Cohasset opted for a long ball on the inbound pass and Sammi Lehr iced the basket. Forwards Meredith Kelly and Tori Lehr worked well together to generate points for Cohasset. On the defensive end Kelly was a menace, tipping passes, blocking shots and stealing balls. Hull's offense was playing with abandon, driving head long into the Cohasset zone. It was apparent the strategy was to go for broke, get off the shot and hope to draw a foul. Cognizant of foul calls Carli Haggerty stood in and took a charge. But that one call did not stop Hull's assault on the paint. At the end of the quarter, Hull held the lead 16-14.

In the second half, Hull pulled back on its full court man-to-man. Cohasset did a good job of working the ball inside where Tori Lehr had success with her short game. At the five-minute mark, Kayla Farren hit one from the wing tying the score at 20-20.

She came back next play to put in one from the box on a perfect lead pass from Carly Salerno. Cohasset's press was well executed but Hull appeared to have perfected a method of breaking it and putting points on the board. When they pulled ahead by one point at 25-24, Meredith Kelly made sure they did not hold the lead for long.

Anticipating the pass, she exploded for a steal and a layup. Sensing a Cohasset run, Hull put the full court pressure back on and a charge call on Kelly gave Hull an emotional edge. Seconds to go to the half, a Hull foul put Tori Lehr on the line where she posted a point. Cohasset went to the locker room holding a hard fought 30-28 lead.

The first play of the second half had Cohasset working its patient set offense against Hull's man-to-man. Hull was doubling up on the ball so Tori Lehr worked her signature turn-around jumper to sky over the defense and score. On the heels of that shot, Carly Salerno put in a three-pointer and with just three minutes expired in the quarter Cohasset had pulled out to a 37-30 lead. Trapped after rebounding a long ball into the corner, Salerno snapped an overhead pass out to Kayla Farren to spark a break that ended with Kelly hitting a baseline layup. Hull could not get any offense going against Cohasset's relentless press and the depth of Cohasset's individual talent seemed impossible to contain. Cohasset pulled out to a 45-30 lead. Kelly kept the heat on, swishing one from the top of the key then stealing Hull's inbound pass, drawing a foul and earning two from the line. With 10 seconds left Rachel Fredey busted up court and put in a running layup over a Hull defender who had at least six inches on her. At the buzzer Cohasset had a commanding 53-35 lead.

For the next few plays, Cohasset ran a motion offense foregoing shots until the bitter end to burn down the clock. The players, so in sync with one another, were able to find the open man with mere seconds to go on the shot clock. One time that player was Carly Salerno who put one in clean from the corner. Two other times it was Meredith Kelly stepping into the elbow to ice the hoop. Two minutes to go in the game, Cohasset had the lead 63-42. In the final minutes Cohasset played keep away and Hull had to foul. But Cohasset went near perfect from the line with Rachel Fredey putting in 3 of 4 and Lindsay putting in her foul shot and the layup that put her there. Cohasset left the floor with their winning streak in tack with a 68-49 victory over the Pirates. Meredith Kelly led the scoring with 22-points, followed by Tori Lehr with 18, Carly Salerno with 7, Rachel Fredey and Sammi Lehr chipping in 6 a piece and Lindsay Davis dropping in 5.

The Junior Varsity squad played an outstanding game as well, but Hull pulled away with the victory in the closing moments with a score of 55-49. Tuesday night they were victorious over Abington for the second time this season, the first being an overtime victory.

Yearbook is starting to take shape

LIFE AT CHS

LAUREN MACK

Hello everybody! It seemed like the longest week in history, but now it's Friday and we've officially entered February Vacation! The next deadline for the '09 yearbook was met this Friday; 30 more pages down, 30 left to go. Any senior parents who'd like to see their child's face on the "When we were young" page, please give any pictures to either Derry Schwantner or one of the girls on the yearbook committee.

It's been an exciting season for all of our winter sports, and this weekend brings even more excitement: Boys swimming Sectionals are this Saturday, the girls swimming Sectionals are on Sunday, and the hockey team plays Rockland tonight at the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham. Also, it's getting to be that time of the year again — that's right! The Mr. Skipper Pageant is back this year and better than ever! The event will be held on Friday, March 13th and if you want to see the most eligible bachelors of CHS strut their stuff in this male beauty pageant, then arrive early because it's sure to be a sold out show. Details regarding the contestants will be released at a later date.

There have been many interesting happenings all over the school as of late; murals being painted by the Portfolio Art and Art Major classes are popping up all around the school and are looking beautiful. Look for these masterpieces in the halls, the library, or weight room, just to name a few.

Another phenomenon is that the once-glorious sub/wrap sandwich line in the cafeteria has ceased to exist, along with the newly added salad bad. While some students are outraged by their lack of teriyaki and salad, some see it as a relief to the long line that would normally eat up a large portion of their lunchtime. No pun intended. And with that, I leave you all to a safe and wonderful vacation, be sure to spread some love on Valentines Day! Sayonara!

Lauren Mack is a senior at CHS. Her column appears weekly during the school year..

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF FEB. 9, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Doing something nice for others is typical of the generous Arian. But be prepared for some jealous types who might try to question one of your more recent acts of kindness.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're eager to take on new responsibilities. But before you do, you might want to check out exactly what would be required of you so that you don't face any "surprises" later.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It might be best to put off an important decision until a fluctuating situation becomes more stable. Recently received news could help resolve a long-standing family matter.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) If you still have a problem getting that information gap closed, you might consider asking a higher authority to resolve the matter, leaving you free to move on to another project.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A family matter needs to be dealt with at the start of the week. Once it's resolved, the Big Cat can devote more attention to that new opportunity that seems to hold so much potential.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Pay attention to those niggling doubts. They could be warning you not to make any major decisions until you've checked them out — especially where money matters might be involved.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A business venture might need more of your attention than you are able to provide. Consider asking a trusted friend or family member to help you work through this time crunch.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A more positive aspect helps you get a clearer focus on how to handle your time so that you can deal with several responsibilities that are just now showing up on your schedule.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A very close friend (you know who that is!) has advice that could help you work through a confusing situation. So put your pride aside and ask for it. You'll be glad you did.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A workplace situation could turn a bit tense. The best way to handle it is to confront it and deal with it openly. Doing so can help reveal the underlying reasons for the problem.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A colleague's remarks appear to be especially cutting. But don't waste your time or your energy trying to deal with the situation. You have more important things to do.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Support for your work comes as a surprise from someone you thought was critical or, at least, indifferent. Your spouse or partner has big plans for the weekend.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Obituary

Craig Davidson Muir

Founded Fidelity Home Health Care

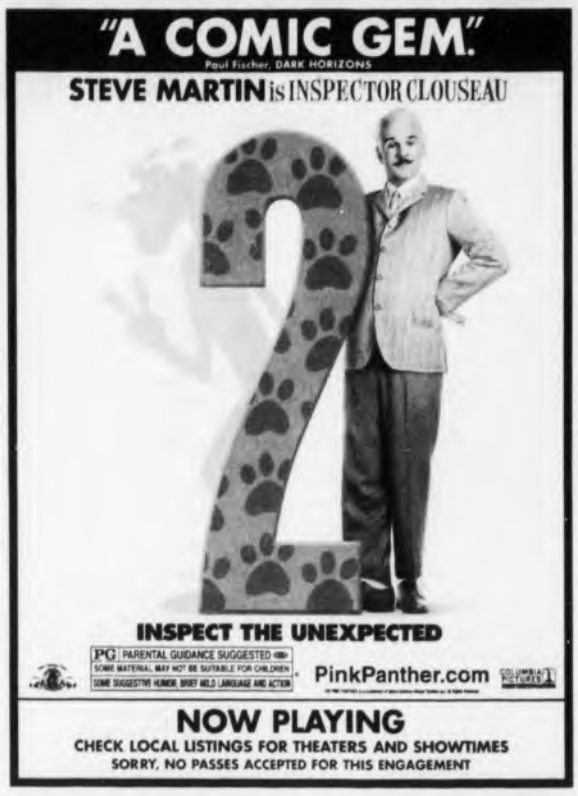
COURTESY PHOTO

Craig Davidson Muir

Craig Davidson Muir, age 60, died peacefully in his home surrounded by his family after a long and courageous battle with cancer.

Craig was born, raised, and lived in Cohasset and attended Cohasset Public Schools, graduating from Cohasset High School in 1966 where he was captain of the football team.

He attended Boston University where he rowed crew and graduated with a degree in finance in 1970 and a Masters in Business Administration in 1972.



He was an avid runner and long-term supporter of Cohasset Athletics. Craig founded and operated Fidelity Home Health Care of Cohasset. He held a strong commitment to the elderly and wanted to promote their independence by allowing them to stay in their own homes. He was rarely seen without his companion Carly, his beloved golden retriever. He was a lifelong member of the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset.

On his own initiative, Craig traveled from Cohasset to Ground Zero in 2001 as a first responder.

Craig was the son of Anne and George Muir II. He leaves his children Carrie, Christie, and Kenny, his wife Jean, his sister Heather, brother George and sister-in-law Judy, his nephews George, Justin, and Josh, and many loving friends.

His family asks that in lieu of flowers, donations be made to the Appalachia Service Project via the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset. A memorial service is scheduled for Saturday Feb. 21 at 2 pm at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset.

Company Theatre opens 'fantastick' 30th season

Celebration begins with longest-running musical ever

It may have taken a while, but the world's longest-running musical will finally make it to Norwell next week, when the Company Theatre opens its 30th anniversary season with "The Fantasticks."

The Harvey Schmidt and Tom Jones musical debuted in New York in 1960 and ran until 2002, re-opening off-Broadway four years later to continue an on-again, off-again run with its time-tested tale of a romance between young next-door neighbors whose fathers just happen to be feuding. The original production starred a then-unknown Jerry Orbach ("Law & Order") and featured songs including the ubiquitous "Try to Remember," which became the "Memory" ("Cats") of its day, thanks to chart-topping pop versions recorded by everyone from Ed Ames and Roger Williams to Gladys Knight & the Pips.

"I grew up listening to everybody, and by that I mean every cheese-ball performer in show business, singing 'Try to Remember' on 'The Mike Douglas Show.' I never knew much about 'The Fantasticks,' though, until I was in New York last year and saw it for the first time," said Michael Joseph, who co-directs the show with Michael Hammond.

"Quite honestly, I was very surprised at just how much I enjoyed the show. It was also easy to see why it has lasted so long. It deals with children defying their parents and the related issues of what constitutes good parenting in ways that are extremely identifiable for all kinds of people. It has timeless themes and it appeals to every age group.

"When we started planning for this season, I immediately thought of 'The Fantasticks' and didn't hesitate a minute to pitch it to my fellow producing artistic directors, Zoe Bradford and Jordie Saucerrman. I knew it would fit well with our plans to make this a feel-good season," said Joseph.

The Company Theatre has being making South Shore audiences feel good since staging its first production, "A Midsummer Night's Dream," in a Weymouth church basement in 1979. After leaving First Church, the then-fledgling community theater began presenting at the Weymouth's old South Junior High School.

"It was easy to see why ('The Fantasticks') has lasted so long. It deals with children defying their parents and the related issues of what constitutes good parenting in ways that are extremely identifiable for all kinds of people. It has timeless themes and it appeals to every age group."

Co-director Michael Jospeh

Not long after bankruptcy forced the late J. Arnold Nickerson to bring down the final curtain on his Equity theaters in Norwell and Sudbury, the Company Theatre took the bold, ultimately advantageous step of first renting and then buying Nickerson's Norwell building in 1993. In the years since finding a permanent home for their company, Joseph, Bradford and Saucerrman have presented an annual concert series and presided over a thriving Academy of the Company Theatre teen conservatory and youth program. Just a few years back, a Tuesday night cabaret series was added.

Frequent music director Joseph is especially enthusiastic about this year's three-part cabaret series, beginning March 3, which will highlight popular music of the last three decades. The Weymouth resident is also looking forward to Company's 2009 theater season which will include not only "The Fantasticks," but also "Godspell," "The Music Man," "Deathtrap," and perennial favorite "A Christmas Carol."

"We couldn't do exactly what we wanted to do this year. We tried for 'The Producers,' but we couldn't get the rights," explained Joseph. (Local amateur rights for "The Producers" went to Bay Colony Productions, which just concluded its run of the Mel Brooks musical at Foxboro's Orpheum Theatre.) "And we were a breath away from landing 'Rent' and a just a heartbeat away from being able to do 'Les Miserables,' but we're very pleased nonetheless with the season we have planned.

"A lot of people are struggling these days, including many of our fellow theater companies. We haven't had any problems so far. Indeed, our typical annual enrollment for our Academy is usually somewhere around 50 to 60 students, but last month, we had 120 kids show up, which was just fantastic. We are very thankful to be in excellent shape, especially in these difficult times," said Joseph.

The Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, will present "The Fantasticks" Feb. 18-22. For tickets, visit the box office, call 781-871-2787 or go online at companytheatre.com.

Company Theatre opens 'fantastick' 30th season

Celebration begins with longest-running musical ever

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

It may have taken a while, but the world's longest-running musical will finally make it to Norwell next week, when the Company Theatre opens its 30th anniversary season with "The Fantasticks."

The Harvey Schmidt and Tom Jones musical debuted in New York in 1960 and ran until 2002, re-opening off-Broadway four years later to continue an on-again, off-again run with its time-tested tale of a romance between young next-door neighbors whose fathers just happen to be feuding. The original production starred a then-unknown Jerry Orbach ("Law & Order") and featured songs including the ubiquitous "Try to Remember," which became the "Memory" ("Cats") of its day, thanks to chart-topping pop versions recorded by everyone from Ed Ames and Roger Williams to Gladys Knight & the Pips.

"I grew up listening to everybody, and by that I mean every cheese-ball performer in show business, singing 'Try to Remember' on 'The Mike Douglas Show.' I never knew much about 'The Fantasticks,' though, until I was in New York last year and saw it for the first time," said Michael Joseph, who co-directs the show with Michael Hammond.

"Quite honestly, I was very surprised at just how much I enjoyed the show. It was also easy to see why it has lasted so long. It deals with children defying their parents and the related issues of what constitutes good parenting in ways that are extremely identifiable for all kinds of people. It has timeless themes and it appeals to every age group.

"When we started planning for this season, I immediately thought of 'The Fantasticks' and didn't hesitate a minute to pitch it to my fellow producing artistic directors, Zoe Bradford and Jordie Saucerrman. I knew it would fit well with our plans to make this a feel-good season," said Joseph.

The Company Theatre has being making South Shore audiences feel good since staging its first production, "A Midsummer Night's Dream," in a Weymouth church basement in 1979. After leaving First Church, the then-fledgling community theater began presenting at the Weymouth's old South Junior High School.

Not long after bankruptcy forced the late J. Arnold Nickerson to bring down the final curtain on his Equity theaters in Norwell and Sudbury, the Company Theatre took the bold, ultimately advantageous step of first renting and then buying Nickerson's Norwell building in 1993. In the years since finding a permanent home for their company, Joseph, Bradford and Saucerrman have presented an annual concert series and presided over a thriving Academy of the Company Theatre teen conservatory and youth program. Just a few years back, a Tuesday night cabaret series was added.

Frequent music director Joseph is especially enthusiastic about this year's three-part cabaret series, beginning March 3, which will highlight popular music of the last three decades. The Weymouth resident is also looking forward to Company's 2009 theater season which will include not only "The Fantasticks," but also "Godspell," "The Music Man," "Deathtrap," and perennial favorite "A Christmas Carol."

"We couldn't do exactly what we wanted to do this year. We tried for 'The Producers,' but we couldn't get the rights," explained Joseph. (Local amateur rights for "The Producers" went to Bay Colony Productions, which just concluded its run of the Mel Brooks musical at Foxboro's Orpheum Theatre.) "And we were a breath away from landing 'Rent' and a just a heartbeat away from being able to do 'Les Miserables,' but we're very pleased nonetheless with the season we have planned.

"A lot of people are struggling these days, including many of our fellow theater companies. We haven't had any problems so far. Indeed, our typical annual enrollment for our Academy is usually somewhere around 50 to 60 students, but last month, we had 120 kids show up, which was just fantastic. We are very thankful to be in excellent shape, especially in these difficult times," said Joseph.

The Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, will present "The Fantasticks" Feb. 18-22. For tickets, visit the box office, call 781-871-2787 or go online at companytheatre.com.

Five romantic getaways you can drive to from Boston

Heather Eng
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Boston

If you're looking to spend some romantic time with your sweetie, you don't need to hop a flight to a far-flung, exotic locale. Nor do you need to limit your getaway to Valentine's Day. There are relatively nearby escapes that offer an array of amour-inspiring amenities for you and your main squeeze. Pack your bags and rev your engines — romance awaits in big cities and small towns, just down the road.

Portland, Maine: Pomegranate Inn

This stylish little B&B could be considered a work of art. The Pomegranate Inn is a stately 1884 house in Portland's historic Western Promenade neighborhood — Portland itself being a charming city to explore. Inside the inn, original paintings and sculptures line the walls, and splashes of rich colors from the carefully chosen textiles and furniture give the it an air of playful elegance. Each of the eight intimate guest rooms has a distinct personality and color scheme, but all are adorned with whimsical, hand-painted floral motifs by local artist Heidi Gerquest. Some feature romantic extras like working fireplaces and sitting areas — perfect places for cuddling and warming up after a day of exploring the Portland Museum of Art and numerous nearby galleries. Rooms from $105.

www.pomegranateinn.com, 800-356-0408

New York City: Library Hotel

Set in a historic brick building dating to 1900, the boutique Library Hotel has "romance" written all over it. Every floor is devoted to a Dewey Decimal System category such as literature, languages, and the arts. Each handsome room is then decorated in a sub-theme and comes adorned with paintings and a custom-selected book collection to match. Some rooms naturally inspire amorous feelings: the popular 11th floor Love room boasts a king-size bed, a private terrace and an array of books about the L-word. The Erotic Literature, Paintings and Ancient Religion rooms are equally as romantic — but you could also opt for the Money or Mystery rooms, if these topics are more of a turn-on. Once you've selected a room, make your stay extra special by booking the hotel's Cupid's Pink Romance Turndown package. You'll receive a bottle of Moet & Chandon Rose Imperial champagne, pink champagne truffles, a selection of love books arranged in your room and pink rose petals scattered across your bed at turndown. Feeling a little friskier? Then turn up the heat with the Erotica Package, which includes a chilled bottle of Mionetto Prosecca, a dozen red roses, strawberries and whipped cream, and an array of naughty goodies. Rooms from $325; the Cupid's Pink Romance Turndown package available year-round from $395 per night with a two-night minimum stay; the Erotica Package available year-round from $475 per night with two-night minimum stay.

Montreal: Le Place d'Armes Hotel & Suites

With its cobblestone streets, lantern-lit sidewalks, and European flavor, Old Montreal exudes an air of romance. Spend a weekend feeling the love at Le Place d'Armes Hotel & Suites, located in the heart of the old city. This boutique hotel lies within three interconnected heritage buildings from the late 19th century. Stately features, such as the gorgeous stone facades and exposed brickwork in many guest rooms, have been carefully preserved. But there are plenty of luxurious amenities that are 100 percent modern and meant for two: Rooms come with comfy Frette bathrobes, and many include rain showers, Jacuzzis and electric fireplaces. Book the two-night "Passion for Two" package. You and your loved one will receive champagne, chocolates and a bouquet of flowers upon arrival. Then you can increase the passion while sharing an intimate three-course dinner at the hotel's award-winning Aix Cuisine du Terroir restaurant and savoring one-hour Swedish massages at the posh Rainspa. Rooms from $136; Passion for Two package available through April 30, for $636 for a two-night stay.

West Townshend, Vermont: Windham Hill Inn

If your dream romantic escape is a luxurious B&B secluded in a rural, winter wonderland, then you'll certainly find bliss here. Set on 160 acres of pristine land, the Windham Hill Inn consists of a remodeled 1820s farmhouse and white barn. Each of the 21 elegant, country-style guest rooms is outfitted with antiques or furniture crafted by local artisans. All offer spectacular views of snow-covered mountains and meadows. Special touches in most rooms, like private porches, window seats, roaring gas fireplaces, and posh soaking tubs invite you and your significant other to cuddle up and savor the special setting. Take advantage of the inn's two-night "Romantic Getaway" package. You and your honey will receive two half-hour in-room massages, one bottle of chilled Domaine Chandon champagne, and six decadent chocolate-covered strawberries. The two of you will also enjoy a candlelit dinner at the renowned Windham Hill Restaurant, located in the main farmhouse, where the menu features fresh, local ingredients and changes several times per season. With all those indoor indulgences, there's little reason to bundle up and venture out into the cold. But if you feel like getting lost together, if only for a little while, then strap on snowshoes and explore four miles of gorgeous, forest trails on the inn's grounds. Rooms from $215; Romantic Getaway package available through September 20, from $660 for a two-night stay.

Seekonk, Mass.: Jacob Hill Inn

The Jacob Hill property, 10 minutes outside of Providence, was once home to some of New England's biggest names. Established in 1723, the original farm was purchased by the prominent Jacob family in the late 1700s and passed down from generation to generation for more than 100 years. It later changed hands to the wealthy Grosvenor family and in the 1920s, became the exclusive Jacob Hill Hunt Club, boasting such noble members as the Vanderbilts, Firestones, and Chaffees. With such a legacy it's no wonder that the Jacob Hill Inn, which now occupies the property, has a way of making guests feel a bit like New England royalty. Innkeepers Bill and Eleonora Rezek have lovingly renovated the original farmhouse and 1920s white barn themselves. Each of the 12 unique, country-chic rooms and suites come adorned with special, romantic touches like fireplaces and the Rezek's own family heirlooms. Spend a weekend snuggling in the ultra-romantic Grand Suite or Newport Suite — both have luxurious, four-post king beds and two-person Jacuzzis. But don't get too caught up in romance and miss out on breakfast. Right down to its colors, Eleonora's raspberry preserves and cream cheese-stuffed French toast is the perfect morning meal for two. Rooms from $179.

COHASSET MARINER

Community Newspaper Company | www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset | FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 2009 | 44 Pages ■ 4 Sections ■ Vol. 30, No. 8 ■ $1.00

The Best & The Brightest

We at Community Newspaper Company know there are many bright, talented and caring young people in our communities and, once again, we are sponsoring "The Best & The Brightest," a program developed to celebrate their accomplishments.

Do you know an individual between the ages of 16 and 21 who should be honored for academic achievement, volunteerism, athletic prowess, artistic acumen or the pursuit of excellence in another field? Look for the nomination form on Page 18 in this issue. The nomination form will run for several weeks. It is also available online at www.wickedlocalspecials.com/best/cohasset-mariner.pdf

A selection committee, comprising local educators, businessmen and community members, will read each nomination form and choose the area's best and brightest teens and young adults.

This spring, your newspaper will include "The Best & The Brightest," a special section devoted to sharing as many of the stories and photographs of those nominated as possible.

We look forward to receiving your nominations by March 30 and hope you'll share in our excitement to recognize these outstanding individuals.

Recreation debuts fencing program

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Luke Skywalker and Darth Vader did it in "Star Wars."

Captain Jack Sparrow and Will Turner did it in "Pirates of the Caribbean."

Zorro did it on every television episode he was in.

Now, each Friday night, Cohasset kids are learning to duel, too.

The Recreation Department debuted a new course in fencing this winter. On Friday nights, fencing coach Jim Mullarkey, 54, teaches beginner fencers the basics of the sport.

"No matter what other sport a kid may play, those skills are going to help him or her."
— Jim Mullarkey, instructor

Mullarkey, a Scituate resident, readily admits he might be a little bias, but he sees fencing as the most advantageous sport in which to cross train. The fighting sport teaches hand, eye, and foot coordination, improves peripheral vision, increases speed and decreases reaction time.

"No matter what other sport a kid may play, those skills are going to help him or her," said Mullarkey.

At its roots, fencing duels were a competition to the death, "it's been around since cavemen picked up sticks and fought over a piece of meat," said Mullarkey.

Emily Lyons, 9 right, of Cohasset practices a Ballestra Lunge with the rest of the fencing class on a recent Friday. The class is offered by the Recreation Department and is held at the Rec Center (Teen Garage) behind the Red Lion Inn.

Now, the sport is much more sophisticated. Mullarkey said fencing is as much about brain as it is brawn.

"I call it physical chess…in order to overpower your opponent you have to out think them, thinking two or three moves down the road," Mullarkey explains.

It's been 46 years since Mullarkey picked up his first foil (one of the types of sword used for fencing) and he still has a passion for the sport. Along with his two brothers, Mullarkey learned the sport of fencing in between two fire trucks in Peabody. His father's fellow firefighter, Joe Pechinsky, began teaching the brothers the sport of fencing and they never stopped learning — or teaching.

"I started teaching almost as soon as I started to learn," said Mullarkey. "When you are teaching others you want to do it perfectly yourself, it really ingrains it in you."

Pechinsky went on to become a mentor, teacher, friend and a world-renowned fencing coach.

Serving veterans

McElroy named to town position

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When Cohasset veterans need somewhere to turn, Joe McElroy has his door wide open.

The longtime Cohasset resident was recently appointed as the director of veteran services.

In that role, McElroy hopes to aid veterans that served in World War II to those just returning from Iraq and Afghanistan realize the benefits they are entitled to receive.

"Sometimes veterans immediate families don't know help is out there or older vets think they have lost their opportunity for benefits," McElroy said while sitting as his kitchen table earlier this week. He explained he envisions most of his business as director of veterans' services would be conducted over a kitchen table.

"They can come here or I can go to the them," said McElroy, 67, who retired with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel from the US Army in 1984.

Although new to the position in Cohasset, McElroy is not coming completely cold to the issue. McElroy has been active with the local chapter of the Disabled American Veterans group

Bear Hill water tank could hold cell antenna

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For years, Cohasset has struggled with spotty cell phone coverage, but a remedy could be coming down the line.

Two major cell phone carriers have expressed interest in placing a flat antenna on top of the Bear Hill water tank, located behind the Middle-High School.

The potential project still has to go through the paces. The major cell phone carriers will have to go before the Zoning Board of Appeals in order to get a height variance.

The antenna would be just under six feet high and about 11 feet wide. It would sit like a crown at the top of the water tank. Cables would run flat to the tank to a small 12 by 20 foot shed inside a security fence.

"All towers have these communication sheds or shelters," said Tom Keeffe of Tutela Engineering Associates, who is providing support to the Water Commission for the project.

Water tank cell phone towers are commonplace and are found in many other towns, said Keeffe. This type of antenna utilizes the height inherent in the

Town Census for 2009

The Town Census for 2009 is being mailed each household. Information obtained from the census is used to prepare the street list, annual registry of voters, school list, dog owner list and jury list. It also establishes eligibility for resident's tuition at state colleges, for veteran reimbursement, for senior citizen programs and other benefits. The census provides information to various departments throughout the town.

Dog forms are on a tear-off portion of the census forms. The licenses are valid through Dec. 31, 2009. Dog forms need to be returned as soon as possible with a current rabies certificate although residents may have recently renewed a 2008 license.

If a census was not received, call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100.

Department of Corrections

In last week's article "Senior Center headed to Town Meeting," the Mariner incorrectly reported the parcel size required to build the Senior Center on the most advantageous piece of land. A portion of Swim Center land (approximately 1,300 square feet adjacent to the Swim Center parking lot) would need to be transferred to the town to build.

Cohasset Mariner 'drop box'

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter near the greeting cards in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Lieutenant saves baby from choking

Cohasset police received a 9-1-1 call from Kelly Fleming at 31 South Main St. at 5:23 p.m. Friday (Feb. 13) reporting that her baby was choking.

According to news reports on television featuring the Fleming family, eight-month-old Tommy was choking on a teething biscuit.

Mrs. Fleming had tried unsuccessfully to dislodge the biscuit.

Police Lt. William Quigley rushed to the scene and found the mother outside the apartment, carrying the baby in her arms.

He took Tommy, turned him over and administered several back blows, dislodging the biscuit.

Lt. Gregory Lennon said the police department is extremely proud of Quigley's actions. Lennon is serving as acting chief while Chief James Hussey is out of state.

"Lt. Quigley arrived within 30 seconds of the call and skillfully performed an emergency procedure that very likely prevented a tragedy," Lennon said.

In a phone interview, Quigley said that Mrs. Fleming did the right thing by coming outside and meeting him on the street where she handed him the baby. Once the biscuit was dislodged, Tommy started to cry.

"He wanted his mother back," Quigley said.

"Lt. Quigley arrived within 30 seconds of the call and skillfully performed an emergency procedure that very likely prevented a tragedy."

— Lt. Gregory Lennon

The paramedics arrived within minutes and made sure his oxygen levels were good, Quigley said. They also provided Mrs. Fleming with follow-up instructions. The baby was not transported to the hospital.

Quigley explained that all police officers are trained as first responders, which means they have first aid and CPR training. "We respond to every medical call in town with the fire department," he said. Often a police officer is first on the scene because the officer is already out on the road and can get to the incident faster.

In this case, when the 9-1-1 call came in, Quigley jumped in a cruiser and drove over. The village apartment is just around the corner from the station.

Barrow trial set for next week

The trial of Christopher Barrow, the driver in a Cohasset crash last winter that took the life of 16-year-old Timothy Mahoney of Scituate, is set for jury trial at Quincy District Court on Wed. Feb. 25.

Barrow, 19 years old and a Scituate resident, will be tried on one count of motor vehicle homicide by negligent operation.

The car accident happened shortly before 1a.m. on Saturday, Feb. 2, 2008 on Route 3A near Pond Street. Barrow suffered serious injuries in the accident and is now in a wheelchair.

During a pretrial hearing at Quincy District Court in October Barrow's attorney, Robert Jubinville, a Milton-based criminal lawyer, asked for a continuance as he hoped to resolve the case without going to trial and explained he needed extra time. Judge Sydney Hanlon granted the continuance. When Barrow appeared again on Dec. 5, no plea agreement had been made and the trial date was set.

POLICE BEAT

'Flashlight burglar' breaking into her own home

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

An alert resident called police last week reporting that people with flashlights were in a neighbor's yard after dark. The call came in at 9:06 p.m. on Thursday (Feb. 12). As it turned out, the person with the flashlight was the caller's neighbor, who was breaking into her own house because she had locked herself out. Police confirmed this with the homeowner.

Accidents

• At 7:09 p.m. on Monday (Feb. 9), a 2007 Nissan Altima driven by a 32-year-old Holbrook woman attempted to make a left from Route 3A onto Sohier Street. She cut off a 1994 Pontiac Grand Prix, operated by a 41-year-old Hull man, police said. The cars collided; the Nissan was towed and there were no reported injuries. The Holbrook woman was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic.

• At 4:49 p.m. on Friday (Feb. 13), a 2008 GMC Yukon, driven by a 45-year-old Duxbury man, pulled out to take a left onto Route 3A by the Cohasset Greenbush Station. The Yukon pulled out in front of a 1998 Jeep Grand Cherokee, which was southbound and swerved into oncoming traffic to avoid a collision, striking the side of the Yukon. Both the Jeep, which was operated by a 27-year-old Cohasset man, and the Yukon pulled over. The Duxbury man was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic. There were no tows and no reported injuries.

• At 9:49 p.m. on Sunday (Feb. 15), a motorist from Cohasset lost control of his Volvo and hit the seawall at the foot of Jerusalem Road at Forest Avenue. There were no signs of alcohol. The man was transported to the hospital.

Traffic complaints

An irate caller complained about speeding cars on Elm Street in the Cove area last week and said the problem has been ongoing. Police have stepped up enforcement in the area. The speed board, which is a familiar sight in the summer months and can act as a deterrent because it illuminates the speed a car is traveling, is not used in the winter due to snow on the sides of the roads. Also, the battery, which powers the equipment, does not do well in the cold, police said. Police go over any traffic complaints during roll call and alert the officers handling the sector where the complaint came in to pay extra attention.

Paintball

A 14-year-old boy hit a special education van with a paintball launched from a slingshot last week. The van driver reported the incident that occurred near the library. Police found the house where the boy lives and spoke to the boy and his mother. Police said they do not expect to have any further problems of this nature. The boy cleaned the bus, which was not damaged in the incident.

Sinkholes

Current weather conditions and road construction have created the "perfect storm" transforming potholes into sinkholes that can swallow parts of cars, police said. The police log continues to be peppered with complaints about large sinkholes in the roadways. Police notify the contractor when a complaint comes in and the contractor sends workers to fix the problems. Currently the most pothole prone areas are Atlantic Avenue and Beach Street.

Transponder

When there is a drive-off at a local gas station, in most instances it is due to a faulty transponder used by the customer that automatically bills a credit card. Last week, police were notified about a "drive-off" of $20. Gas stations are equipped with cameras and the customer can usually be found. In this instance, the motorist lived in Hull and was going to return to pay for the gas.

Coyote

Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy is following up with a Lamberts Lane homeowner who reported that a coyote has been living in her yard. Coyotes may be attracted to the Cohasset Golf Club area because of the geese population, police said.

Dog complaints

Police continue to get complaints about wandering dogs. The animal control officer is following up with the owner of a black lab that lives on Margin Street and has been out and about despite having an electric collar.

Another large dog, known for wandering the village, was out again despite the fact that its owner is being summonsed to court for non-payment of dog fines and for town bylaw violations regarding her dog.

Argument

Police were called to keep the peace last week in a dispute between a Sheldon Road resident and the contractor installing pipes in the road, which is plowed and maintained by the town. The dispute over installation of the pipes is a civil matter, police said.

Found items

Police collected a driver's license and a debit card that were found in the Linden Drive area last week and are returning them to the owners, a 19-year-old Cohasset woman and a 19-year-old Scituate woman. The items had been missing for some time when some local boys found them, police said.

Car break-in

A 41-year-old Scituate woman reported that her unlocked, 2003 Honda Odyssey, was broken into while she was walking in Whitney Woods off Route 3A on Saturday (Feb. 14). When she returned to the car her Coach bag and wallet that contained some cash, her license and credit cards, were missing. Detectives are investigating.

Cautious driver

A report of an erratically operated 1993 Audi that was all over North Main Street and being driven very slowly turned out to be driven by an 82-year-old Hingham man returning to his house on East Street. He was being overly cautious due to the weather and was not used to driving at night, police said. The call came in at 6:20 p.m. on Saturday (Feb. 14).

Bone

A bone that does not appear to be human was brought to the station Sunday (Feb. 15) by a woman who had been walking her dog on the beach and discovered the bone. Police inspected the beach area and have not found any additional bones. The bone will be examined by the Chief Medical Examiner's Office, police said.

Winter parking

Winter parking regulations are in effect through April 1.

No overnight on-street parking between the hours of 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. is allowed during winter parking regulations.

Violators are subject to a fine of $25.

A simulation of what the antenna atop the Bear Hill water tank would look like.

Improved cell coverage could be coming structure instead of creating that height on a tower.

Water Commission member Nathaniel Palmer said the benefits for the town are two fold.

"This has been something the town has actively promoted in a number of locations over the years," said Palmer. "First of all, the town fundamentally has horrible cell service."

The second benefit, if the project came to fruition, would be to provide incremental revenue to the Water Department. Although it won't be a windfall for the Water Department, it is something to take emphasis off the water rate payers, said Palmer.

This type of antenna utilizes the height inherent in the structure instead of creating that height on a tower.

The water tank space would be leased from the Water Department.

The Bear Hill water tank is one of two water tanks in town; the other is located behind Sunrise Assisted Living off Route 3A. Built in the late 1960s, it holds two million gallons of water. The cell antennas would not interfere with the normal operation of the Water Department.

To minimize visual impact, Keeffe said the antenna would be painted a similar white to the current water tank.

"If you put something slightly different, it stands out that much more," said Keeffe.

Neither major cell phone carrier has contacted the town to file with the Zoning Board of Appeals. Like all zoning board applications a public hearing would be held concerning the project. The March ZBA meeting is closed for filings, so the earliest it would be before the Zoning Board is April.

Clean energy to save energy

AEC recommends energy management system for schools

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The town of Cohasset has a $13,000 burning a hole in its pocket. Through a state-matching program in conjunction with National Grid's Clean Energy Choice, the town has accumulated no less than $13,400 that can be used toward a renewable energy (or efficiency) project.

On Tuesday night, the Alternative Energy Committee (AEC) discussed what could be done with the grant money — and commented on how much the funds have grown in just over a year. Last January, the account has just over $7,000.

The way the program works is this: National Grid customers sign up for Clean Energy Choice and then pay an additional $5 to $10 on each month's electric bill. The household then knows it is supporting clean energy, the town earns money for clean energy projects and funds are put toward low-income assistance programs throughout Massachusetts.

For every dollar put toward Clean Energy a matching grant from the state gives towns and cities up to one dollar in funding. Towns and cities can use this money to fund clean energy projects within their communities.

Cohasset currently has roughly 55 households participating in the program, or just over 2 percent. Even with the small number of participant households, Cohasset has accumulated about $13,400, a number nearly double what it was last year.

While the Alternative Energy Committee can only make recommendations to Selectmen, who have jurisdiction over the grant money, the AEC is charged with primarily investigating ways the town can save money on energy.

The AEC has been exploring viable projects the town could put the grant money towards. At one point a photovoltaic solar array for the library was on the table, but is no longer being considered. The grant funds can be used for community projects from constructing renewable electricity generating equipment, to clean energy related educational materials, to energy efficiency measures.

Leading the project possibilities is a school-wide energy management system that would allow Facility Manager Brian Adams to adjust the air conditioning, heat and even lighting from the computer.

Leading the project possibilities is a school-wide energy management system that would allow Facility Manager Brian Adams to adjust the air conditioning, heat and even lighting from the computer. Being able to control the town's largest energy consuming buildings with the click of a mouse could save the town thousands in energy costs each year.

"It's a classic example of spending money to save money," said AEC member Mike Bliss.

The Clean Energy grant funding would roughly pay for the system at the Osgood School. In order to do all three school buildings, about $20,000 to $25,000 in town money would have to be sought from Town Meeting.

Estimates for the system developed in 2007 price the installation at Osgood at $15,500, Deer Hill at $14,400 and additional software/web server at $5,100. A more current estimate is being gathered this week.

"This is something we can actually do and get a lot of mileage out of," said AEC member Rod Young.

The AEC voted unanimously to recommend to the Board of Selectmen that the Clean Energy Choice grant money be used toward an energy management system. They will be before the Selectmen at an upcoming meeting.

To receive funds, the Board of Selectmen must provide the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative with a grant application describing what projects the grants will support.

AEC working toward turbine at RTF

With the help of funding from the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative, the town of Cohasset and the Alternative Energy Committee are making headway toward a wind turbine at the Recycling Transfer Facility.

The process started about two years ago with the raising of a meteorological (MET) tower on Turkey Hill. Twelve months of wind data was collected, which yielded evidence that there was enough wind in Cohasset to make a turbine feasible. From there, another MTC grant allowed the town to perform studies to determine a feasible site for a single turbine (the MTC will only financially support single turbine projects). KEMA, Inc. is currently performing the studies for the town.

KEMA has located five possible sites on the transfer facility property and favors two of them. The first site is tucked in the back corner next to the capped landfill. It is the farthest away from buildings and people. Minimal land clearing of forest is required and it yields a lower visual impact on the nearby neighborhood. Because of its location on the edge of the landfill cap it could have additional construction costs and it is near a wetland area.

The second most feasible site is located closer to Cedar Street, but still a distance from residences and buildings. It would be sited near trees, which could affect wind speeds and is close to property lines.

All the data collected to date is preliminary in nature and additional impact and other studies are ongoing.

The feasibility studies, like the MET tower, are being completely underwritten by the MTC. No town funds being used at this point in the project.

If a municipal turbine project were to proceed it would have to get a special permit from the Planning Board and any funding would have to be approved by Town Meeting.

Wind turbine hearings continue Mon., Feb. 23

After more than a month hiatus, the Planning Board will continue its public hearing on the proposed Cohasset Heights wind turbine project on Monday, Feb. 23 at 7:30p.m.

This will be the fourth public hearing installment for the applicant, CCI-Energy. The application is a landmark project as it is the first for the town and the first application under the Wind Energy Conversion Facility bylaw passed at the 2008 Annual Town Meeting.

The project application, put forth by a private developer, CCI-Energy, is proposing the installation of two AAER 1.65-megawatt sized wind turbines sited off Route 3A on the hill behind Graham Waste Services and Hingham Lumber.

Jim Sweeney, president of CCI-Energy, is the primary name on the applications. Since the last hearing, the applicant has submitted additional information including and updated aerial vicinity map showing the new location of the turbine closed to Route 3A and an updated sound study.

The turbines will be 100-meters (328-feet) tall from the ground to the hub, or nacelle, where the blades originate. The three blades will extend 41-meters off of that hub making the tip of the structure 462-feet (141-meters) above ground.

Domestic violence incidents are up

Police say economy could be reason

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

If current trends continue, Cohasset Police could see a sharp increase in domestic violence incidents this year.

Lt. William Quigley said in 2008 there were 20 calls for incidents including assaults in progress, reports of past domestic assault and violations of restraining orders.

But in January 2009 alone, there have been four calls for domestic incidents. That could put Cohasset on track for 48 calls this year.

Police believe increases in incidents of domestic violence are tied to the current economy.

Financial pressures are putting more stress on families, they say.

Neighboring Hingham, which has nearly three times the population of Cohasset, has noticed a sharp increase in domestic violence incidents across all economic strata in town since last October. Incidents have involved all relationships: husband/wife, boyfriend/girlfriend, parent/child, siblings, and same-sex partners, Hingham police spokesman Lt. Michael Peraino said.

From Oct. 1, 2008, to Feb. 16, 2009, Hingham police responded to 52 incidents of domestic violence as compared with 35 domestic calls over the same period 12 months before.

"We have seen a significant rise and in a lot of cases the incidents are related to the economy," Peraino said. "The people involved have been from all economic levels – the incidents are across the board."

Police officers are trained in how to respond to domestic violence calls and say in the majority of incidents, alcohol has played a factor.

Lt. Quigley also said Cohasset has seen an increase in larcenies over the past few months. Police are also seeing an increase in motor vehicles being repossessed in town.

Area police have also noticed that more motorists are driving without a current inspection sticker. In Hingham, for example, 143 vehicles have been stopped for having expired inspection stickers in the past four months as compared with 83 during the same period a year ago. Police believe the reason is that motorists cannot afford to have their cars repaired in order to pass inspection.

Filing for real estate tax exemptions

The Board of Assessors is accepting applications for FY 2009 real estate tax exemptions. The qualification date is July 1, 2008. Applicants who have filed tax exemption forms since July 1, 2008 are not required to file again. The deadline for filing is March 29. The following exemptions are available:

Persons Over 70 Years Of Age – $2,000 off: Clause 41C – if annual income is less that $18,000 (single person) or $23,000 (married couple), and the value of your assets, excluding your home, is less than $33,000 (single person) or $35,000 (married couple) and must own and occupy for previous 10 years.

Surviving Spouse (no age requirement) – $350 off: Clause 17D – also minors of deceased parents and persons over 70 years of age. There is no limit on income, but the value of your assets, excluding your home, must not exceed $40,000 and must own and occupy for previous five years.

Disabled Veterans – $800 Off: Clause 22 – At least 10 percent disabled as determined by the Veterans Administration. Purple Heart Award recipients qualify, as well as Congressional Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service Cross, Air Force Cross, Navy Cross. Other exemptions are available for more seriously disabled veterans and paraplegic veterans. Veteran must have been a Mass resident six months prior to enlisting OR live in Massachusetts for five consecutive years.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

Keeping Camp Budget Friendly

The state of the economy may have you worrying about your children missing out on the joys of childhood because the purse strings are simply pulled too tight. But one childhood joy that may still be within reach is a life-changing summer camp experience.

A number of summer camps offer value-priced summer camp opportunities. Here are some things to consider:

• Camps often offer scholarships or other financial aid – If you've found a camp that seems to be a good fit, but paying for it presents a challenge, contact the camp to ask about the options.

• It's important when doing your research not to rule out any camp – Camp websites are each different; but if you search carefully, you'll find quite a lot of information about navigating the financial aid application process.

• Don't wait too long to inquire about financial assistance – The sooner an application is submitted to various camps the better; there are limited scholarship dollars available.

• Additional Resources – Not all financial assistance has to come directly from the camp. Other places include church or synagogue, social services groups and child serving non-profit organizations in your community. Explore local funding streams with your town and school system, too.

Pizza woes

"The economy is bad, but people still need to eat."
— Alex Morseau, manager of the Victoria's Pizzeria

Cohasset Pizza House's Jessica Bachelder readies to place a "per slice" cheese pizza onto the warming rack Tuesday evening.

Route 3A Pizza and Grill delivery guy, Corey Chase, heads out on another delivery Tuesday evening.

Local shops feeling the pinch

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

At five locally owned pizza shops, times are getting tough.

With families cutting back on household expenditures, regular take out dialing or quick weekday lunches are getting fewer and farther between and pizza shops are beginning to feel the pinch of the economy.

"We've seeing (the economy) starting to affect us…we're feeling it," said Debbie Ryan, owner of Cohasset Pizza House.

At Cohasset Pizza House and down the road at Victoria's Pizzeria, they are seeing a decline in the number of times they are seeing regular customers every week. Customers who used to come daily are now coming just once or twice a week.

However, on the brighter side, there is anecdotal evidence that those establishments are picking up customers who in a good economy may have gone out to a sit down restaurant.

"The economy is bad, but people still need to eat," said Alex Morseau, manager of the Victoria's Pizzeria. For the pizza shops, they are hoping to be an affordable middle ground for nights when making dinner isn't an option.

Despite the economy, Morseau said Victoria's isn't doing anything drastic or different in order to woo in customers.

"We haven't changed anything at all," said Morseau and are counting on their long-standing reputation in the community and loyal customers to see them through the down time.

Likewise, head north on 3A to the Cohasset Pizza House and they are doing what they have been doing for 35 years.

With construction companies and the nearby Hingham Lumber doing less business, less of those workers are placing a daily order at the Pizza House, said Ryan.

Yet, Ryan isn't too worried. She recalls when the economy was bad in the early nineties, "we've been through it before and we survived…we still have our loyal customers."

She is counting on pizza still being an affordable dinner option for families.

"Families who can't afford a big restaurant dinner might be able to afford pizza and pizza is always good. You can feed the whole family and still have money left over for a movie," said Ryan.

At Cohasset Plaza, Papa Gino's is holding more or less steady in sales.

"Our sales are slightly down—about four percent," said store manager Nicole LaChance, but she had not noticed a decrease in regular customers.

In a slightly different situation than the more established Cohasset Pizza House, Victoria's and Papa Gino's are Route 3A Pizza and Grill and Simply Fresh. Those businesses are not only facing the challenges of the poor economy, but also the difficulties of being the new pizza shop on the block. Both businesses underwent an ownership and name change in the last year.

At 3A Pizza and Grille, owner Roshdy Asaad bought the restaurant business formerly known as Pizza Zone during the second half of last year.

"Right now, we are reaching out and letting people know we are here," said Asaad. He is trying to stay positive and let the business build through customer experience, "any customer who comes in, they come back again."

3A Pizza and Grill, located next to Good Sport, is Asaad's first foray into small business ownership, but he has worked at other restaurants for the past decade. In recent months he unveiled a completely new menu with lower prices than the restaurant formerly in the space.

"If you have expensive pizza, people aren't going to buy it," said Asaad. He might be a little bias, but he is proud of his offerings, "everything is fresh and nice here now."

In order to drive new customers he has done menu mailings to Cohasset residences and surrounding communities. Lunch specials are offered daily and each menu comes with coupons.

In a similar situation, Simply Fresh Pizza located on Ripley Road opened its doors in the fall. Formerly known as Good Fellas, owner Michele Rizzo is slowly building up a clientele. During the transition they lost some customers, but are gaining news ones each week, she said.

"We're seeing the same people every week…Once they try the pizza, they come back," said Rizzo, who also co-owns Carmela Drew in the village. She reported the holidays and early part of January was slow, but Rizzo chalks that up to vacations, diets and New Year's resolutions.

"I think pizza is something people keep in their budget no matter what," said Rizzo. "We're kind of hoping pizza is recession proof."

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

VACATION WEEK

Hello Cohasset. I hope that everyone has enjoyed the school vacation week so far and will take some time over the weekend to enjoy some more. I know that I am sad for it to end but as they say, "all good things must come to an end!"

We have a few local students to recognize this week and then, some thanks and information about some local events to talk about.

ON THE MEND

First, we have a local resident who was in a nasty fall last week and needs for everyone in Cohasset to keep him in your prayers and thoughts. Bob Pattison is recovering in Tufts Medical Center in Boston from a fall off a roof last Wednesday. He had surgery Friday to repair injuries to his legs and is slowly feeling better. Bob will have a long recovery and will need good thoughts and support to help him through this difficult time. Take each day one at a time Bob and know that all around our town, people are sending you good thoughts and warm wishes!

BCH NHS

Kyle DeSisto and Patrick E. Hurley, Class of 2009, and Keegan R. Flynn, Paul O. Forrer, David M. Hernon, John M. Kearney, Robert C. McCunney, Thomas J. Pecca and Maxwell O. Shipp, Class of 2010, of Cohasset, students at Boston College High School, were among the 119 seniors and juniors inducted into the Robert J. Fulton, S.J. Chapter of the National Honor Society at an evening ceremony Jan. 8 at Boston College High School's Fahey-Hunter Commons.

The evening began with a processional march by the BC High Concert Band, followed by an invocation by Michael McGonagle, Class of 1970, vice principal of Ignatian Mission and Identity. The band then played the National Anthem, which was followed by the welcoming address by Nnamdi Obukwelu, president of the National Honor Society. Alfred Navarrete, moderator of the NHS did the recognition of the officers and Gregory Ouellette, secretary of the NHS, followed with the lighting of candles.

John Goddard, vice president of the NHS, introduced the guest speaker, Paul LaCamera, general manager of WBUR Boston (NPR) and an alumnus of BC High, Class of 1960.

After the induction, Michael Lavoie, historian of the NHS, read the NHS Pledge. A reception for the inductees and their parents followed the ceremonies.

The National Honor Society is established under the National Association of Secondary School Principals to provide recognition to high school students who have distinguished themselves in their school and community for scholarship, character, leadership and service

COLLEGE HONORS

Prescott Busk, a Cohasset student has been named to the dean's list for the fall 2008 semester at the University of Vermont. Prescott is a junior Business Administration major in the School of Business Administration. Nice job Prescott!

Two Cohasset students attending Stonehill College were recently named to the dean's list for the fall 2008 semester. Congratulations to Michael Pecca, a member of the class of 2010, and to Mary Previte, a member of the class of 2011.

Also, a congratulations is being sent out to Katherine Kuppens who earned Faculty Honors at Trinity College for the 2008 fall semester: Super work to all of you and keep it up.

The following students from Cohasset were named to the dean's list for academic achievement for the 2008 fall semester at Bentley University.

May Hortense McCarthy, a freshman majoring in undecided business; Robert Barr Meikleham, a sophomore majoring in finance; and Brandon W. Smith, a junior majoring in finance.

To be named to the dean's list at Bentley, a full-time student must have a grade point average of 3.3 or higher with no course grade below 2.0 during the term.

PLUNGERS

Here is a nice note to many here in our town. As the final numbers are being tallied, all the Cohasset Plungers for Special Olympics MA want to thank everyone who donated to this terrific cause and all those who came to Nantasket on Saturday to cheer them on. In four separate events, over 900 crazy souls Plunged and raised a total of $400,000.

On Valentine's Day, our Plungers braved 37 degree water and a wind chill that made the temperature feel much lower. Our Cohasset Plungers were led by Jay Nothnagle in his 9th consecutive Plunge. He was also the highest fundraiser in the State! Other veteran Plungers were Jeff Nothnagle, Doug Yeager, Jack Delorenzo, and Graham, Charlotte and Nick Sida, Brook Miele, Laurel Hickey, Brendon Michaud, and Rich Quebec. First time Plungers were Connie Afshar, Millie Chapell, and Hayes Keniley.

Again, the Special Olympics thank you for your support of over 11,680 Special Olympics athletes in Massachusetts and the 130 year-round competitions offered in 26 sports. The skills training and physical fitness these athletes acquire is important. The self-confidence and self-esteem they gain, "that's priceless". Donations will still be gratefully accepted at: www.passionplunge.org

COLLEGE NEWS

Michelle Daniels, a first-year student at the College of the Holy Cross, has been named to the dean's list for the first semester of the 2008-2009 academic year. She is the daughter of Rick and Mary Daniels of Cohasset, and majors in economics/accounting.

Susan Curry of Cohasset made the dean's list for the 2008 fall semester at Georgia Institute of Technology.

Undergraduate students earning an academic average of 3.0 or higher for the semester gain the distinction of being named to the dean's list.

NDA

Notre Dame Academy principal Kathleen Colin has announced the names of Cohasset students who made the honor roll for Term Two.

President's List: Olivia Adkins, Alexandra Butler, Katherine French and Kerry McCabe.

Principal's List: Courtney Culhane, Meaghan Leong, Claire Pozniak and Victoria Wade.

That is it for this week Cohasset. Send in all of your news no later than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm to have your news included in that week's Mariner.

Durkin Earns Certified Buyer Certification Designation

John Durkin

Cohasset, Massachusetts - Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage in New England is pleased to announce that Scituate resident John Durkin, of the Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage office in Cohasset, was awarded the Certified Buyer Representative* (CBR) professional designation by the Plymouth and South Shore Association of Realtors®.

Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage sales associates who obtain this designation are qualified to buyers in maximizing the opportunities that exist for them in the market place. Recent industry surveys indicate that today's consumers place a high value on their real estate agent's ability to guide them through the home buying process.

"In taking this course John is developing the knowledge and skills necessary to succeed in the real estate industry, and is demonstrating his dedication and commitment to his clients and customers," said Rick Loughlin, president of Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage in New England.

Durkin, who has been in the real estate business since 2004, was recognized by Coldwell Banker as a member of the Sterling Society for 2008, a distinguished honor presented to a group of top sales associates across the country.

Working with a Certified Buyer Representative will enhance a consumer's competitive position, and ensure that they are making well informed decisions throughout the process. John can be reached at 781-210-0371 or email john.durkin@nemoves.com.

This watercolor of the Healing Field by Mary Lou Clark was hung this week opposite the Veteran's Memorial Wall on the first floor.

Painting depicts Healing Field

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

If you're stopping by the Town Hall, there's new artwork outside the Town Clerk's office.

A watercolor painting of the Healing Field by Cohasset artist Mary Lou Clark was hung this week opposite the Veteran's Memorial Wall on the first floor.

Commander of the Sons of the American Legion Tom Wigmore presented the framed watercolor painting of the hundreds of red, white and blue flags to the Board of Selectmen last week.

Wigmore felt strongly that the painting belonged to the entire town — not just the American Legion members.

"It's been hanging in the Legion Post for over a year and I feel strongly that is belongs in a town building and to the townspeople," said Wigmore, who made the surprise presentation during the public comment period at the Feb. 9 meeting of the Board of Selectmen. The painting is on loan to the town for a permanent display.

Clark, an artist and a teacher at Quincy College, came upon the Healing Field last May and immediately felt inspired to paint the scene.

"It was so beautiful I just had to do a painting," said Clark. She later gave the painting to the Legion.

She dedicated the painting to her father, Admiral Joseph "Jocko" Clark. Clark served in World Wars I and II, as well as the Korean War. He was the first Native American to graduate from the United States Naval Academy, in 1917. A guided missile frigate was later named the USS Clark in honor of the late Naval hero.

At the Paul Pratt Memorial Library there are two books written about his life and accomplishments: "On the Warpath in the Pacific: Admiral Jocko Clark and the Fast Carriers" and "Carrier Admiral."

"The American flag is beautiful not purely as a symbol for patriotism, but in and of itself," said Clark.

'Healing Field' planned for Memorial Day

The Sons of the American Legion is again planning to install a Healing Field as part of the town's Memorial Day 2009 observances.

The flags sell for $25 and can be dedicated to anyone.

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, please visit www.healingfield.org/cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657.

McElroy named as town's Director of Veterans Services based in Weymouth for about six years. This year, he is serving as commander.

"I get great satisfaction in helping disabled veterans and surviving spouses get what they are entitled to receive from the government," said McElroy. He estimates that veterans only realize approximately 30 percent of their earned entitlements.

"The fact is primarily attributable to unawareness and difficulties encountered in navigating the complex state and federal entitlement rules," said McElroy. "We are still applying for benefits for WWII and Korea era veterans so that they can live the balance of their lives in dignity."

Through his work with the Disabled American Veterans chapter, he has aided over 100 veterans in receiving over a million dollars in deserved government benefits. Although less tangible, McElroy has gained many friends through the process as well.

"There are some fascinating cases out there," said McElroy. In order to complete the paperwork required for veterans' benefits, McElroy has to work with the veteran to reconstruct the circumstances in which they were injured. Often the process is difficult, but necessary.

McElroy served for over 20 years in the US Army as a combat engineer and supply officer. His stateside service included a stint at the Pentagon and he was stationed in Europe, Korea, Thailand and Vietnam. During his service he was awarded the bronze star, five meritorious service medals and four Army commendation medals, among others.

After retiring from the Army in 1984, McElroy moved to Cohasset with his family where he has been active in the community. He served on the Capital Budget Committee, School Committee, the Board of Directors for the Historical Society and was a co-founder and first president of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation.

Joe McElroy, a Vietnam Veteran and retired Army officer, has been active with the local chapter of the Disabled American Veterans group based in Weymouth for about six years. McElroy was recently appointed to the position of Director of Veterans Services in Cohasset.

"Many are intimidated by the complexity of the paperwork."
— Joe McElroy, Director of Veterans Services

McElroy's primary objective is to document to town officials and our citizens that an effective veterans' services operation will bring state and federal revenues into the town that improve the lives of the town's veterans while minimizing the cost to our town and volunteer nonprofit services.

In addition, one of McElroy's goals is to promote outreach in the community to raise awareness that veterans' benefits are out there. He has already touched base with the Legion, the Department of Elder Affairs, the Social Service League of Cohasset, and the Cohasset Food Pantry to let them know he is available. He has also made an effort to make veterans services more visible by insuring his phone number and relevant veteran services numbers at the state and federal level make their way into the 2009 Cohasset Rotary phonebook.

How to contact Joe McElroy, Veterans' Services

59 Windy Hill Road, Cohasset
781-383-0505
Fax: 781-383-9762
E-mail: cohjoe@aol.com

McElroy, now fully retired, has time to devote to the cases that will come his way.

"This is a small town, an affluent town and historically there are not a lot of cases in Cohasset. But I know for a fact there are more situations requiring my attention than have had time devoted to them in the past," said McElroy. He hopes though his outreach efforts more veterans will turn to him to get the help they need — and deserve.

"Many are intimidated by the complexity of the paperwork," said McElroy. He s working through a learning curve himself, but has a network of people ready and willing to answer his questions.

Appropriately enough, McElroy is no stranger to paperwork — he worked in the Pentagon on a General's staff while in the Army.

"You have to be able to handle paperwork in the Pentagon," he said with a laugh.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Sense of community

Our Cohasset Mariner readers may know that our staff also handles the Hingham Journal every week. While the Cohasset Mariner debuted in 1978 – the Journal dates back to 1827.

In the Journal, we have a weekly column compiled from our files that is called "Yesterdays," and provides a window into life in Hingham and surrounding towns 100, 75, 50 and 25 years ago.

Here ere are some highlights of the years Yesterdays covers (source: American Cultural History)

• One hundred years ago in 1909, women did not yet have the right to vote and the average worker made $12.98 for a 59-hour workweek. Life expectancy for women was 47 and for men 46 years of age.

Also during the 1900-1910 decade, the Wright Brothers made their first flight and the first cross-country automobile trip took 52 days.

• Seventy-five years ago in 1934, life expectancy for women was 61 and for men, 58. The average annual salary was $1368 and unemployment was 25 percent. The Social Security Act was still a year away and so was the popular board game, Monopoly, which debuted in 1935. Big Bands, baseball and radio, were all popular.

• Fifty years ago in 1959, life expectancy for women was 71 and for men, 66. Bomb shelter plans were readily available and annual car sales topped 6 million. That year Alaska and Hawaii became the 49th and 50th states. Just a few years earlier, in 1955 Dr. Jonas Salk developed a vaccine for polio. It was also the era of rock 'n' roll, poodle skirts and flat tops.

• Twenty-five years ago in 1984, left expectancy for women was 78 and for men, 70. The average annual salary was $15,757. Minimum wage was $3.10 an hour. AIDS was taking a tremendous toll. George Orwell's 1949 classic "1984" became a hot topic.

One thing we find that Yesterdays shows – particularly in the years of 1909, 1934 and 1959 – that local residents had fun despite what was going on in the world.

There were fancy dress balls and dances and social events at Agricultural Hall and at Loring Hall; people had whist, bridge and tea parties. Bowling teams battled their counterparts in neighboring towns, as did the town baseball, basketball and ice hockey teams. There were dozens of clubs, such as the Timely Topics Club. The Wompatuck Club (now the Hingham Community Center) hosted croquet tournaments. Most weddings took place at the home of the bride. And in winter roads were closed for coasting.

News of those recovering from illnesses, and trips even just to Boston, Nantasket or Cape Cod – were mentioned in the Journal.

Make no mistake about it – times were tough. In one Journal entry from 1932, it is noted:

"... Fifty unemployed are taking advantage of the Town's offer to grow potatoes on the 3-1/2 acre plot on Free street."

It seemed as though, people — while more were used to tough times — were perhaps better equipped psychologically to make it through. If they themselves were not experiencing difficulties – in most cases their parents had, and had instilled them with core values. But they still got together and had fun for little financial cost.

Maybe there is a way to turn back the clock.

Could senior proms, for example, be held in the high school gym again with the students making all the decorations?

Could we have more bridge nights and potluck suppers?

Clearly the library, churches community and senior centers are perfect venues for community events.

But that should not stop neighborhoods from bringing back the block party, having three-legged, sack and piggyback races and old-time games like pin-the-tail-on-on-the-donkey.

If there is a silver lining in the economic crisis/catastrophe, perhaps it will be a return to a true sense of community.

We also need to maintain our sense of humor. As the Journal reported in 1934:

"Old Man Depression has been blamed for everything so far, but if we believe our political spellbinders, 'Prosperity is just around the Corner.' In fact it has been 'just around the corner' for the past six months, but it certainly has a good hiding place."

MEETINGS

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:

Advisory Committee, Feb. 23 and March 3 & 10, 7 p.m.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Ya had to BEE there!

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Education Foundation expresses its sincere appreciation to the Spelling Bee Committee. Your hard work and the support of parental volunteers, school department employees and community members who volunteered as emcees, judges and timekeepers made Sunday's Bee a true success.

A special thanks to our sponsors:

• Bumble Bee sponsors: Black Rock Country Club, Boston School of Etiquette, Coastal Nissan, Harbor Medical Associates, Hill Realty Trust LLC, the Brown family, the Glavin family and the Whetstone family.

• Honey Bee sponsors: Del's Lemonade, the Devin family and the Schubert family.

• Hive Sponsors: Hannefords, Sea Bands, Shaw's, Stop & Shop and Trader Joes

It was truly a community event we should all be proud of!

POLITICAL NOTES

Democrats elect delegates to State Convention

Registered Democrats in Cohasset recently held a caucus to elect delegates to the 2009 Massachusetts Democratic Convention. Elected as delegates were Kathryn Callahan, Margaret Charles, Thomas Callahan, Edward Lappen, Judith Chute and Peter Pescatore. Also serving as ex officio delegates are Frederick Koed and Kevin McCarthy.

The convention will take place Saturday, June 6, at MassMutual Center in Springfield. At that time, Democrats from across the state will gather to vote on the Party Platform for the next four years. David Plouffe, campaign manager for Barack Obama's presidential campaign, will be the keynote speaker. According to party chairman, John Walsh, "David will share the insights he garnered during the campaign and his vision for where we need to go as a party to build on those successes."

"The non-election year convention is very important," said delegate Margy Charles. "The convention offers many workshops to educate delegates and inspire them to continually work for our Democratic principles."

Young people are welcome to attend the convention as youth delegates. Democratic Town Committee chairman Kevin McCarthy is encouraging high school and college students to take part in the second annual Youth Convention. Interested students who wish to take part can call McCarthy at 781-383-0305.

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee meets on the first Saturday of the month at 10 a.m. in the community room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. For more information on the Democratic Party or any of its meetings, contact McCarthy at kemccar68@comcast.net. For general information on the convention, call the Democratic State Committee at 617-776-2676.

Rep. Bradley's aide pays a visit

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE MULLEN

Gigi plans to be at the Senior Center, the third Wednesday of every month, when she will talk with anyone...

Old man winter certainly has put a crimp in our activities. Many of the January events had to be cancelled because of snow and ice.

However, Gretchen Mirarchi visited us early in the month. She is the legislative aide for Representative Garrett Bradley. Gigi plans to be at the Senior Center, the third Wednesday of every month, when she will talk with anyone who has questions about state related issues, such as health care, state income taxes, fuel assistance and more.

A representative from a Homecare Agency (Home Instead), Jennifer Moran, provided us with a delicious lunch at one of our meetings. She also gave us a tube of hand cream and instructed us in giving each other a gentle hand massage.

Red was the predominant color at the Valentine's Tea in Bates Hall on Feb. 12. The Hall was filled to capacity. While we munched on delicious tea sandwiches and other goodies prepared by Anna Abbuzzesse and other good friends, we enjoyed the music of the "Somethin Else Band." They played Oldies but Goodies.

It is nice to see the snow about gone. However, it remains to be seen what February and March dish out! I have heard birds singing in the morning and I guess that is a good sign.

If you enjoy a good corned beef and cabbage dinner, please get your reservations in for the St. Patrick's Day Dinner at St. Anthony's Parish Hall on March 17. Fran Collins will entertain us with great Irish Music. Call 781-383-9112 for more information.

Weather lousy for earth-workers

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Little Harbor Project – Alternate freezing and thawing weather is great for the maple syrup industry, but very poor for earth-works contractors. Our office and the project's office have been pelted with calls regarding the condition of the small side lanes that run off of Atlantic Avenue, as well as for Joy Place. The sewer and/or drain lines were installed in these lanes over the past several months while the ground surface was frozen. The trenches were backfilled, compacted and leveled under those conditions. But, when the thaws came this past week these lanes by and large turned to mush. Then, while the roads were soft we had an early morning rain on Thursday, Feb. 12, which made matters even worse. This type of weather is one of the contractor's worst nightmares.

When the temperature dropped below freezing at night, the roads firmed up a bit. But, during the day they would soften as the temperature rose. The conditions came to a head from the resident's standpoint a week ago on Thursday and Friday as the temperature during the day rose above freezing. Knowing that the conditions could not continue through the weekend, Coughlin Environmental Services, the lead project engineer for the project, worked with the contractor to bring two crews in to work on these roads over the weekend to stabilize them.

The contractor, LMH, had two crews working all day last Saturday, Feb. 14, and was able to make a substantial improvement to a number of the problematic roads. As one resident told us, "It's like a boulevard now." We think that's probably quite an overstatement, but by comparison with the prior condition it is quite an improvement.

The Tale of the Pole – Several articles ago we spoke about why several trees needed to be removed from the Jerusalem Road wall repair area. That tree removal work was done, all except for one tree, whose limbs were removed, but the trunk was left standing. Why, you ask? When we had the other trees removed, at least 5 different people look at the situation and missed the fact that there was a very thin guy wire running from the tree trunk to a power pole on the other side of the road. So, we had to deal with that guy wire and make it go away so that the tree trunk could be removed.

The reason the guy wire was there, was that it was pulling on the pole to keep it from moving to the side toward the marsh. So, why was the power company worried about possible pole movement? Well, it seems that if you follow the pole line to the next pole downhill, the reason becomes apparent (at least to the power pole aficionados). At the next pole there is a cross arm near the top of the pole that supported three main power wires. These power wires and the cross arm were arranged so that all three wires are mounted to one side of the pole. This configuration created a constant pull to that side on that pole. This pull force also transfers to the next pole, which is our problem pole with the guy wire. That's why the guy wire was there.

So, a creative, rather simple solution was to reset the wires on the downhill pole so that they are centered over the pole, and not off to one side. This way the wires don't pull the pole to either side. Then the problem of the wires pulling at this pole and the next pole goes away. Fortunately, National Grid was very cooperative, moved the wires and removed the problem guy wire. So now, all's well in pole land on this section of Jerusalem Road.

Stressed? Your skin doesn't lie

SKIN HEALTH

RICHARD EISEN, MD

With job losses and a bleak economic forecast for 2009 adding to our daily worries, stress levels are running high. Although you may believe you've hidden your stress well, signs of stress can be exhibited in your skin.

Stress affects your hormones, elevating Cortisol levels, which increase oil levels in your skin. Stress will aggravate skin conditions such as acne, eczema and psoriasis. Yet, it can also affect your nails and cause your hair to fall out.

There are two kinds of stress. Emotional stress pertains to the stress that goes along with stock market losses; the loss of a job or the loss of a loved one. Physical stress pertains to stress on the body due to pregnancy, illness or an operation. Both types of stress can affect your skin, nails and hair.

For those who are prone to acne, the elevated levels of Cortisol will lead to increase in acne outbreaks. With more outbreaks, people are less confident and often have lower self-esteem. This creates a negative feedback loop, or a cycle of stress, as they become stressed about their acne as well as everything else

A patient from our Cohasset office, Michelle who is a Hingham resident, explained, "I developed cystic acne during my first pregnancy. With my second pregnancy, I developed Rosacea. Pregnancy may have triggered these conditions, but the combination of hormones and stress really aggravated them. Medication for the conditions helped immediately."

Oftentimes a skin condition is triggered by emotional or physical stress, in Michelle's case it was the physical stress of pregnancy. Then the condition is aggravated by other stressors, and unless it is treated, may continue to worsen due to additional feelings of stress over the condition itself.

Under severe emotional stress such as the loss of job, the hormonal changes ensued can affect the hair cycle.

Some individuals try to reduce their acne by picking and scratching at it. This is actually a condition called acne excoriée and can lead to infection and scarring. It's important that the person with acne excoriée see a dermatologist for treatment.

Other skin conditions such as psoriasis, eczema and general itching are worsened by stress and breakouts will be more severe and more frequent. When a person is stressed, s/he has less of a threshold of pain for the itching and scratches even more.

Picking at the cuticles is another sign of stress. This damages the nail matrix, resulting in ridges in the nail that may take up to a year to grow out. If a stressed person keeps picking at her/his cuticles, s/he will end up with permanent nail changes, and ridges, that can't be reversed.

Stress will show on your face; from dark circles under the eyes to frowning and furrowing of the brow. More sleep will help to remedy the dark circles, but frowning and brow furrowing can lead to deep lines, which are more noticeable. Botox can relax the muscle used to frown and furrow the brow and stop the manifestation of stress.

Under severe emotional stress such as the loss of job, the hormonal changes ensued can affect the hair cycle. When the hair cycle is affected, more hair will be in the "resting phase" as opposed to the "growing phase". Typically 10-15 percent of hair is in the resting phase normally, which means 50-100 hairs per day will be shed without shampooing and 100-150 hairs will be shed with shampooing.

Both emotional stress and physical stress (such as that from pregnancy) will cause more hair to be in the resting phase, which is a condition called "telogen effluvium". When there is an excess of resting hairs, the stressed person will lose a noticeable amount of 200 or more hairs per day. Typically, the stress cycle is six months long before the stressed person will begin to see hair growing back.

Individuals who are experiencing more frequent acne outbreaks, acne excoriée or who have eczema, psoriasis or another skin concern should consult their dermatologist for treatment.

We offer several tips to help combat stress exhibited in the skin:

- Try to eat well. Don't skip meals or skimp on nutritious foods. Poor diet will only increase symptoms of stress.
- Try to get enough sleep.
- Try to exercise on a regular basis, at least three times a week. A brisk 20 to 30 minute walk can be beneficial and doesn't require special equipment or a gym membership.

Maureen Pace, a Cohasset resident who frequently receives compliments on how wonderful her skin looks noted, "I have always taken care of my skin. I have a daily skin regimen and go for a facial at South Shore Skin Center about once a month. I believe that facials provide incredible care for the skin and also reduce stress on the skin. Between the facial massage and the relaxing environment, the experience is phenomenal and a great way to 'de-stress'."

LIBRARY CORNER

Group to talk about Blight's book

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348.

Library Book Group – Join others for coffee and discussion of David Blight's book "A Slave No More" at 10 a.m., on Wednesday, Feb. 25. Blight's book compiles two former slave memoirs and sheds light on the story of emancipation. One former slave, John Washington, lived the last years of his life in Cohasset and is buried in Cohasset's Woodside Cemetery. The event is free and all are welcome.

Resume Writing Workshop – A free resume workshop, presented by Ellen McCurdy, professional resume writer at A-Script Career & Writing Services, will take place 6 to 8:45 p.m., on Tuesday, March 3. The workshop will cover self-assessment, format and presentation, accomplishment statements, polishing and finishing, and cover letters. Handouts and worksheets will be included. Registration begins at 5:30 p.m.

Movie Matinee – Can't get out at night to see a movie? Come and enjoy a free movie at 11 a.m., on Friday, March 6. This month's selection is "The Russians are Coming." The Russians are here! It's every man for himself! There's really no hurry, however, it turns out they're just as inept as we are. Still it's great fun watching a small New England coastal town turn into a bunch of would-be Paul Reveres attempting to thwart the "red peril." Stars Carl Reiner, Alan Arkin and Eva Marie Saint. Not rated; 125 min.; 1966. Free admission and refreshments provided courtesy of the Friends of the Library. Movie site license sponsored by Friends of the Library and Cohasset Democratic Town Committee.

FOR CHILDREN

Snowflake Coloring/Decorating Contest – Create a unique snowflake by decorating templates found on Mrs. Moody's desk. Markers, glitter, beads, etc. can be used to create a snowflake that reflects one's personality. Winners will be chosen in all age groups. The contest ends at 4:30 p.m., on Friday, Feb. 27. All winners will be called.

Free Drama Workshops – On Saturday, Feb. 28, at 10:15 a.m., in the Meeting Room, Drama Tykes will host a free developmental drama workshop for children ages 3 and 4. Drama Tykes uses songs and poems to build vocabulary and dramatic movement to develop coordination. At 11 a.m. in the Meeting Room Drama Kids will have a free workshop titled Drama Develops Kids for ages 5 through 8. Register now on the library Web site at cohassetlibrary.org; click on Calendar; click on 2/28/09; click the Register button and fill out the online form. For more information about Drama Kids go to their Web site at dramakids.com/ma2.

Cohasset Reads Together – The third annual town-wide reading program will take place through Feb. 27. Friends of Cohasset Library have provided copies of the book "Barefoot: Escape on the Underground Railroad" for all classrooms at the Joseph Osgood School and copies of the book "Sweet Clara and the Freedom Quilt" for all classrooms at Deer Hill School. These books are also on display in the Children's Room at the library along with other materials that support the theme of "Freedom." Cohasset Reads Together also supports the PSO annual Read-a-Thon that began Feb. 13. Students are encouraged to help make the third annual Cohasset Reads Together and the PSO Read-A-Thon a positive experience for all. See Mrs. Moody for assistance in selecting and obtaining books for the Read-A-Thon.

Pitfalls of being a kid

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Boy, am I glad I'm not a kid again.

I see by the papers that consuming that grand old staple of prepubescent youth diet, the peanut butter and jelly sandwich, has been declared as dangerous as fighting the Taliban in Afghanistan or whatever it was we were battling in Iraq.

It has something to do with salmonella, which has nothing to do with the fish of almost the same name but everything to do with the peanut butter, churned out by a factory in Georgia that can be lethal in young tummies.

I never cottoned to peanut butter and jelly sandwiches myself. My tastes leaned more toward peanut butter and sweet gherkins between two slices of bread. My son divided his noshes between Fluffer-nutters and onion sandwiches. Is that a weird family or what?

How long will it be before helmets are mandatory everywhere to avoid debris falling from an abandoned Russian satellite?

But I digress …

When I was young and ice covered most of the earth, the walk to and from the Thomas A. Watson School was a pleasant stroll with friends, pausing for a Coke at Nino Colletti's drug store and chatting with Chris Garland, the cop who helped us across Quincy Avenue.

Now it seems like it takes the First Marine Division to see the kids safely through the gauntlet of perverts and drug peddlers lined up along the route with tempting offers and worse. That nice friendly old man isn't always nice and coke isn't only Coca Cola anymore.

Safety isn't always found in school, either, not when adults have to be vetted for priors before they are allowed in the classroom and boys can be in imminent danger from horny teachers of the female persuasion. In my day we would have called it "getting lucky," so you can see how things have changed.

The path to maturity is particularly precarious in Florida where a little girl may not be safe even from her own mother as well as from that nice friendly old man who lives across the street and who asks nubile youngsters to help him find his lost cat.

Obesity is the latest hazard to childhood health, which is why their favorite soft drinks and sugar-laden noshes have disappeared from schoolhouse lunchrooms to be replaced by carrot juice and other unpopular "goodies." And stay away from the Big Macs and Whoppers when you're eating out, too.

Need I point out the necessity of wearing a helmet when riding a bicycle in case the rider falls off and strikes his or her head on the curb or runs into a stonewall. How long will it be before helmets are mandatory everywhere to avoid debris falling from an abandoned Russian satellite?

And how long will it be before the peanut butter and jelly sandwich is deemed safe enough to return to kids' menus? I'm not waiting for peanut butter and gherkins.

'Our Town' focuses on turbine opposition

"Our Town," co-hosts, Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin, sit down with members of the Cohasset Wind Advisory Committee. Members, Conrad Langenhagen and Jeffrey Patterson, will speak on the current plan before the Cohasset Planning Board to erect two, 460-foot windmills on the Graham Waste site and the impacts they may have on the surrounding areas as well as the town as a whole.

Tune in Monday, at 9 p.m., or Tuesday or Thursday, at 9 p.m., all on Comcast Channel 10.

Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan (at the podium) helps kick of the Read-a-thon by a reading of My Country,' Tis of Thee by Samuel Francis Smith and a display of the "freedom documents."

Let freedom read!

Read-a-thon takes off at Deer Hill, Osgood

The theme of the Read-a-thon this year is freedom, complimenting the Cohasset Reads Together initiative sponsored by the Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The fifth annual Cohasset PSO Read-a-thon is underway! After two inspired kick-off events at the Deer Hill School and the Osgood School on a recent Friday, the students are off and reading with enthusiasm. For 19 days, participating students will set reading goals and record their minutes spent reading. At the close of the Read-a-thon, students will collect pledges from family and friends supporting their efforts. The monies raised will support and maintain school enrichment and curriculum programs. Last year, over $19,000 was raised to support the Cohasset PSO.

The theme of the Read-a-thon this year is freedom, complimenting the Cohasset Reads Together initiative sponsored by the Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. This program is designed to foster a love of reading, a sense of community and to inspire an appreciation of personal freedom. The books chosen for the town-wide read are A Slave No More by David Blight, a book with deep Cohasset roots, and New Boy by Julian Houston. Both books, in different ways and vastly different time periods, observe a struggle for freedom. Students at the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools will read companion books generously provided by the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Osgood classrooms will share Barefoot: Escape on the Underground Railroad by Pamela Duncan Edwards. This beautifully illustrated and gentle plotline gives the story of travel along the Underground Railroad with various animals helping along the way to freedom. Deer Hill students will read Sweet Clara and the Freedom Quilt by Deborah Hopkinson, a story about a young woman who learns quilting as a means to provide direction along the Underground Railroad. This wonderful book is an uplifting story of dedication and perseverance.

Both elementary schools enjoyed enthusiastic kick-off events. The Osgood School celebrated freedom with a rendition of the song "America", a reading by principal, Janet Sheehan, of My Country,' Tis of Thee by Samuel Francis Smith and a display of the "freedom documents" The Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of America. Reading Specialist, Lynn Kenney, gave an excellent overview of reading materials for students in kindergarten to grade two. She also introduced a symbol of reading to share throughout the school day. The symbol is hands held open, palms up, in the shape of a book and children can quietly show their excitement in school by sharing this symbol with students and staff.

At an all-school assembly, Deer Hill staff participated in a passionate Jeopardy game based on the topic children's literature. The questions covered poetry, Greek gods, biographies and fiction, including everything from Alexander and the Terrible, Horrible, No-Good, Very Bad Day by Judith Viorst to Johnny Tremain by Esther Forbes. Students and staff alike delighted in the ups and downs of the game with cheers and, sometimes groans. It was a terrific way to generate thrills for books and get the students reading. Both events were a huge success and sent the students off to begin meeting their reading goals with inspiration from their schools.

HEATH NOTES

'Outsize upheaval going on'

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

We should consider new ideas that are now only dreams by engineers and scientists who will play a large part in giving us the tools to address trends only now beginning to become evident.

Change is fine, and goes on with or without our help. Massive change faces our health care system. There's a general recognition of the need, for example, to better maintain and perhaps automate health records and diagnostic procedures. Obvious. And the BoH will look and find methods that suit us and try to apply them. We've broadened our e-initiatives and are considering consolidating and combining some activities with nearby towns; reducing staff thereby, and possibly saving money. But the current upheaval requires the town itself take a broader look at the components of change to ensure its own health.

Not in recent memory has so much visible public works activity been going on in Cohasset, a town which, by nature, likes to stay away from active town administration. It's OK to have the Director of Finance maintain the books and the Town Manager know everything that's going on, but we don't hire a large cadre of administrators to manage our activities. We make boards, committees or commissions to assemble groups of citizens having appropriate expertise; they do their thing for one or a combination of three reasons: the need for change, the desire to help or the desire to get something from the town. And, for whatever reason, they become inactive; someone decides to remove the names from the town report and the group becomes history. Organisms change. It's up to us as individual citizens to ensure that our committees, boards and commissions make appropriate decisions to ensure proper governance during these times.

We have an outsize upheaval going on right now. We should be careful about the scope of our analysis of the way we are doing business. We know that widespread loss of jobs and income will necessitate some belt tightening, but what else? We should consider new ideas that are now only dreams by engineers and scientists who will play a large part in giving us the tools to address trends only now beginning to become evident. Consider, for example, the electric car on the drawing boards of every automobile maker in the world. Conversion from fossil fuels to electricity will have an unprecedented impact on the nation's electric distribution system, to the point that even now it is obvious that our National Grid will be unable to provide the terawatts of electricity to drive vehicles planned for the future.

The five sources of energy available locally to small communities are decomposition of vegetable matter, geothermal, solar, hydraulic activity and wind power. Nuclear energy necessitates building a reactor hopefully near a source of fissionable material and that's out for us. Besides, we have a national antipathy to nuclear because of Three Mile Island and the fact that our existing nuclear installations do not all share the same reactor technology. Any future nuclear development will probably go on near existing plants because of their supply of spent fissionable material that can be upgraded for use.

For decomposition of vegetable matter, read methane from a landfill, viable mostly where animal dung is available in quantity. Several local dairies utilize the constant production of dung from their cows to generate methane for heat and sometimes electricity. Cohasset has long since abandoned the production of dung.

Geothermal is the use of the earth's heat to warm houses in the summer and cool them in winter. Combined with solar, they offer economical sources of warmth and cooling, but are generally uneconomical for electric power generation.

That leaves us with hydraulic activity and wind power, the source of energy in Cohasset for over 200 years. Both Mill River and Bound Brook have driven our machines since before we were a town, and windmills were in regular use for over a hundred years. Wind has powered our pumps and our boats for longer.

As a town facing unpleasant consequences of burning fossil fuels and the sure shortage of electricity in the near future, we'd be foolish not to adopt an open mind toward windmills, not only at the proposed location, but on some of the rocky islands dotting our coastline; perfect foundations for them.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

And the candidates are...

The Town Clerk's Office has certified all the signatures for this year's batch of candidates. Every candidate who pulled papers returned them to the office by the deadline this week. Each seat up for re-election has a candidate; but not more than one. There are no races for any of the open seats.

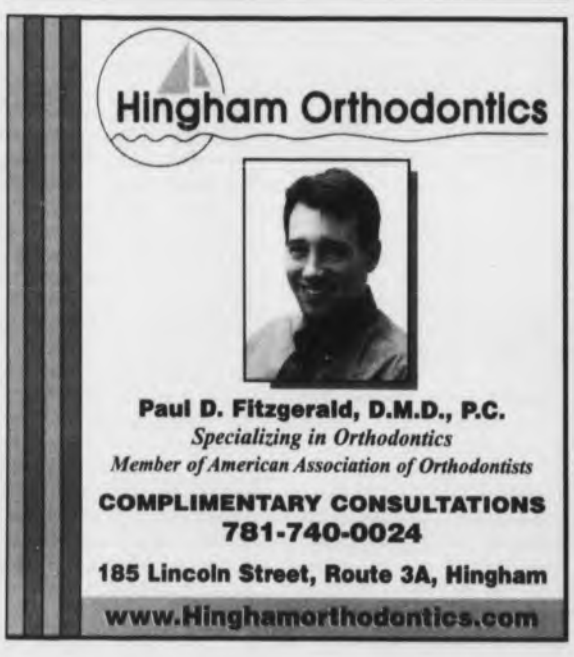
The Town Election will be held on Saturday, April 4.

Here are the candidates:

- Board of Selectmen (one seat, three year position): Edwin "Ted" Carr, 88 South Main St.
- School Committee (two seats, three year positions): Paul Schubert, 155 Sohier St. and Helene Lieb of 18 Deep Run
- Planning Board (one seat, five year position): Jean Healey Dippold, 93 South Main St.
- Recreation Commission (one seat, five year position): - Kathryn Lydon, 23 Forest Ave.
- Board of Health (one seat, three year position): Margaret Chapman, 25 Virginia Lane
- Board of Library Trustees (three seats, three year positions): Agnes McCann, 104 Doane St.; Patience Towle, 61 Highland Ave.; Roger Lowe, 100 Beach St.
- Board of Assessors (one seat, three year position): Michael Patrolia, 15 Cushing Road
- Sewer Commission (one seat, three year position): John Beck, 44 Nichols Road
- Water Commission (one seat, three year position): John McNabb, 53 Pond St.
- Housing Authority (one seat, five years): Nancy Barrett, 60 Elm St.

Friends of the CEA looking for members!

2009 should be a very exciting year for the Friend of Cohasset Elder Affairs and for all in our town. Plans are being to come together around our dream of building a new, first class senior center. A center for living, learning and caring, and a resource for outreach to all seniors providing transportation, meals, health and safety programs and ongoing activities. The Friend of CEA hopes to help with financial support to help this dream become a reality.



It is our hope to grow our membership to include all those interested in helping in our mission and to help us accomplish our dream of a new senior center. Please join use by calling Friend of CEA president John Campbell at 617-909-5687 or e-mailing jcamp3343@aol.com.

Annual membership, which includes subscription of the monthly "Vista," a publication of Cohasset Elder Affairs, is $10.

Recreation Department debuts fencing program and Ed, model their own fencing club named "3MB," which stands for the three Mullarkey Brothers, after Penchinsky's teaching. The club is based out of Beverly, but Mullarkey lives in Scituate and teaches at various locations on the South Shore. Their mission is to make the sport accessible to all from the young to the old.

"I encourage everybody to come and try it," said Mullarkey.

While fencing was once viewed as a sport for the rich and elite, Mullarkey said it is up and coming — and increasingly accessible. He teaches at other recreation departments and YMCAs.

About 10 kids have joined the Cohasset fencing program on Friday nights at 4:30p.m. Recreation Director Ted Carroll hopes to expand the beginners' class and add an adult and intermediate fencing class.

"The response from parents has been positive," said Carroll. "The class offers a unique alternative to traditional team sports with a nice history to it."

Fencing was one of the nine sporting disciplines at the first modern Olympic games in 1896.

There are regional competitions for fencers, but Mullarkey never pushes his students to compete.

"I tell them when I think they are ready and push them to be the best they can be," said Mullarkey, but competition is always second to developing a lifelong love of the sport.

"It is a fighting form and it has to be done correctly, but it is a lot of fun," said Mullarkey. "Come and try it, put on the gear, it's a blast."

'Warm hugs' from Junior Girl Scouts

Resident Kathleen Ryan accepts a new blanket from Girl Scout Jenny Wolfe.

Handmade blankets are Valentine's Day gifts

On Thursday, Feb. 12, nine Junior Girl Scouts in fourth grade delivered 27 handmade blankets to seniors at the Harborview Apartments on Elm Street. The girls have been visiting Harborview several times a year since the first grade and have formed friendships with a core group of women who always welcome the girls with a smile and a hug.

The troop had been exploring the idea of doing something special for Valentine's Day, and after a wonderful visit with the seniors for Christmas Carols in December, the idea of making blankets began to take root. The girls wanted to give their friends something to show how much they enjoyed visiting them and they also wanted something the seniors would have and use every day. With such a cold winter, the fleece blankets became a way to say Happy Valentine's Day and "here is a big warm hug from a Girl Scout".

The girls went with their families to purchase patterned and solid colored fleece, and then worked at a troop meeting where they each made their first blankets. The girls followed the no-sew pattern for making the blankets, which meant that they cut the fleece to size, put together two coordinated patterns, cut strips around the edge and then tied the two layers together. The girls had the assistance of their troop leaders and some parents, but did the majority of the work themselves. After the meeting, each girl worked at home with her mother. A total of 27 blankets were made. The girls put a lot of thought into the patterns and colors they picked, knowing that a personalized blanket means even more. They made one for a breast cancer survivor with pink ribbons on the fleece, another with a NASCAR pattern for a man who loves car racing, shamrocks for an Irish resident, a sports theme for a woman who loves sports, tea pots for another who loves tea, flags and eagles for a veteran, and lots of other wonderful colors and patterns.

The girls eagerly delivered their blankets and hugs and were graciously thanked by their friends at Harborview Apartments.

Cohasset wrestlers blast into States

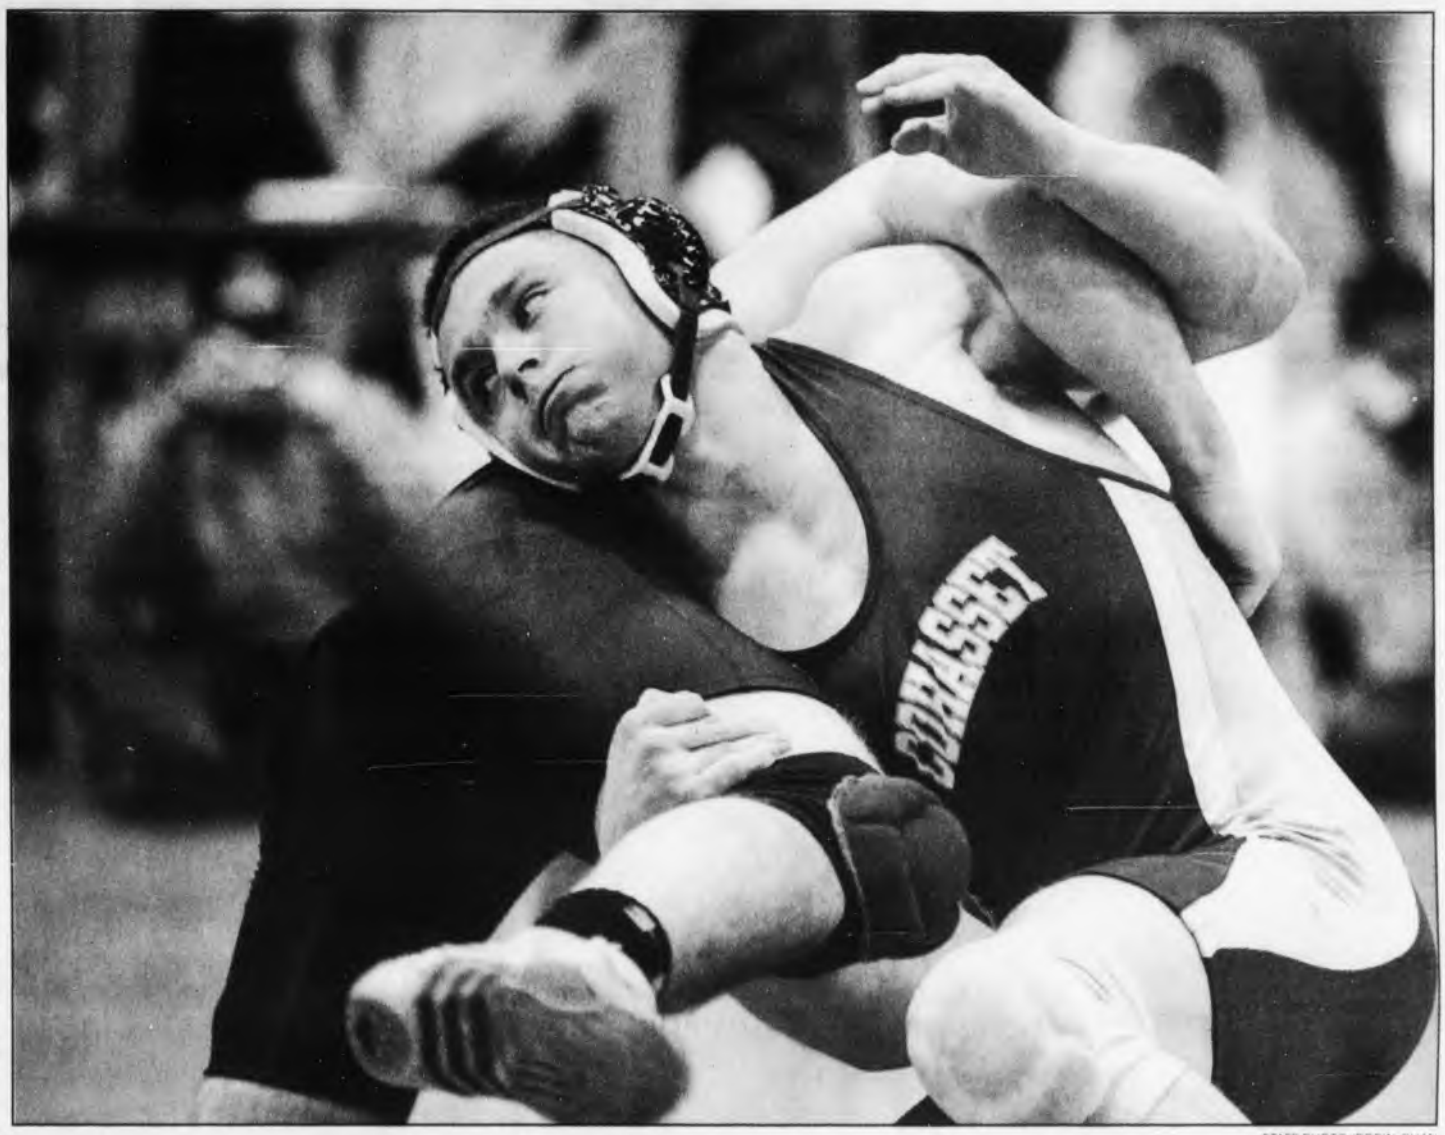
Team sends four to next level

By Emily Toomey
CHS CORRESPONDENT

When searching for the twilight zone where time is undefined, look no further than wrestling Sectionals tournaments.

Over a two day period, fans and teams enter a gymnasium where hours pass like minutes, and thirty seconds can make the difference between winning and losing. On Friday and Saturday, Cohasset wrestlers experienced this feeling at Pembroke High School.

The matches began Friday afternoon and carried on into the night.



Gus Helbock, the only freshman on the Cohasset team to wrestle in the Sectionals, and junior Matt Dooley each had two wins and were able to make it to the second day.

Robbie Hill, Chase Stebbins, and Rudy Helbock competed in the next weight classes along with Jack Murphy, who went undefeated on Friday.

Andrew Littauer and David Toomey both won two matches on the first day, qualifying them for the consolation semifinals. Sophomore Thomas Flibotte and junior Cam Washak followed their lead by winning twice and earning a spot in Saturday's matches.

Mike Froio continued on a route similar to Murphy's by

CHS skates into tournament

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High hockey team is already three games into its tourney run.

It started officially with a 4-3 loss to a bad Harwich team (4-18) last Wednesday. That loss dropped the Skippers to 6-9-2 overall, three games under the magic .500 mark with just three games remaining.

"It was a two-hour bus ride back from (Orleans) after the Harwich loss, but it seemed even longer," said Cohasset coach Bob Walsh. "I was pretty mad after that one. I just walked into the locker room and told them if we can't beat a three-win team we probably don't belong in the tourney. It was a pretty quiet bud ride after that too."

But the Skippers regrouped at practice the next day, and came together with a singular cause.

"We all knew that the next loss would essentially end our season," said Walsh. "None of these kids want that. We've got a lot of younger players, but they get it. They respond well with their backs against the wall."

And so they did. Three straight wins—over Rockland, South Shore Voc and Carver, respectively—have put the Skippers back in the Div. 3 south sectionals.

The MIAA will announce tourney seedings and pairing over the weekend, with games likely to start mid-week.

"We all knew that the next loss would essentially end our season. None of these kids want that. We've got a lot of younger players, but they get it. They respond well with their backs against the wall."
Cohasset coach Bob Walsh

The Skippers will likely get a low seed and quite possibly have to play a preliminary round game. It doesn't sound as if that matters a whole lot to Coach Walsh right now, however.

"Mission accomplished," declared the third year head coach. "We were in a tourney mindset, and we've won three in a row. These guys have responded very well to the challenge. I'm looking forward to seeing how they continue to respond."

Skippers 6, Rockland 5

Five unanswered Rockland goals very nearly made this do-or-die a one-and-done for the CHS skaters.

The host Skippers were posted to a 3-0 first period lead with tallies from Brendan Doonan, Anders Goetz and freshman Sean McKenna (his first varsity tally). McKenna notched his second goal with the big boys early in the middle fame to push the Skippers lead out to 4-0.

However, the visiting Bulldogs regained a little momentum with two goals before the second break, then positively wrestled it away with three scores in the third to complete the improbable comeback and take a 5-4 lead.

"You know, it's kind of weird, but I was never really worried," insisted Coach Walsh. "Even after Rockland took the lead, I just had a feeling we could turn it on and do what we needed to win it."

Sophomore defenseman Brian Scott rewarded the coach's faith with 3:50 to play. Some great cycling behind the net from junior Connor Queen and freshman Johnny Collins sucked down the Rockland forwards, allowing for Scott to move into the circle from his left point spot and unload with a well-placed slap shot to tie the game at 5-5.

After a short breath-catcher, Queenan came back onto the ice and delivered the gamewinner with 2:30 to play.

Senior Skippers shine in shootout

In a night filled with tradition, the senior members of the Cohasset boys basketball team, along with their parents were honored in a pregame ceremony complete with cheers and tears. It was a fitting prelude to the fun, high scoring game versus Marian High School that followed.

In honor of the evening, all four Cohasset seniors, Danny Martin, John Sturino, Marcus Charles and Owen Landon started, along with junior Johnny Maher.

They started and the Skippers never looked back, delivering a resounding 77-43 victory over the Marian Mustangs.

Martin led the Skippers with 18 points, 6 rebounds and 6 blocked shots.

He scored the first bucket of the game on the first possession off a nice feed from Landon (five assists, four-of-four from the free throw line). Landon had three assists in the first frame. Sturino (10 points) drove the baseline for a layup for the second score of the night. Landon fed Martin again who did a sweet reverse layup for the bucket. Landon came up with the ball on the defensive end of the court and hit Martin again for the bucket and an 'and one'. Charles (nine points, three steals) banged a three off a Sturino feed.

Maher hit a bunny from another Sturino pass.

Maher (six points) had six of his 11 defensive rebounds in the first quarter. Robert Jones (13 points) took the court, and led the fast break feeding both Sturino and Maher for layups. By the end of the quarter, the Skippers were on top 22-11.

The second quarter started quickly as Jones fed Landon who fed Martin for the bucket and a foul. On the press, Sturino had the quick hands feet as he stole the ball and took it to the hoop and was fouled. He sank both shots. The next offensive set saw terrific ball movement, swinging the ball quickly, getting the Marian defense out of position. It was Jones to Sturino for the baseline jumper and two.

Charles hit for a trey. Jones hit for a deuce off a Maher screen.

Jeff Charles (four points) fed Maher for a bucket that made the also remaining undefeated on Friday.

Froio had by far the most outstanding weekend, defeating a tough Hanover opponent, Frannie Armstrong, for the fourth time, earning first place in the 160 finals by tying the match with two seconds left and then winning in overtime.

Froio almost didn't get that last win over Pembroke's Kevin Meyer.

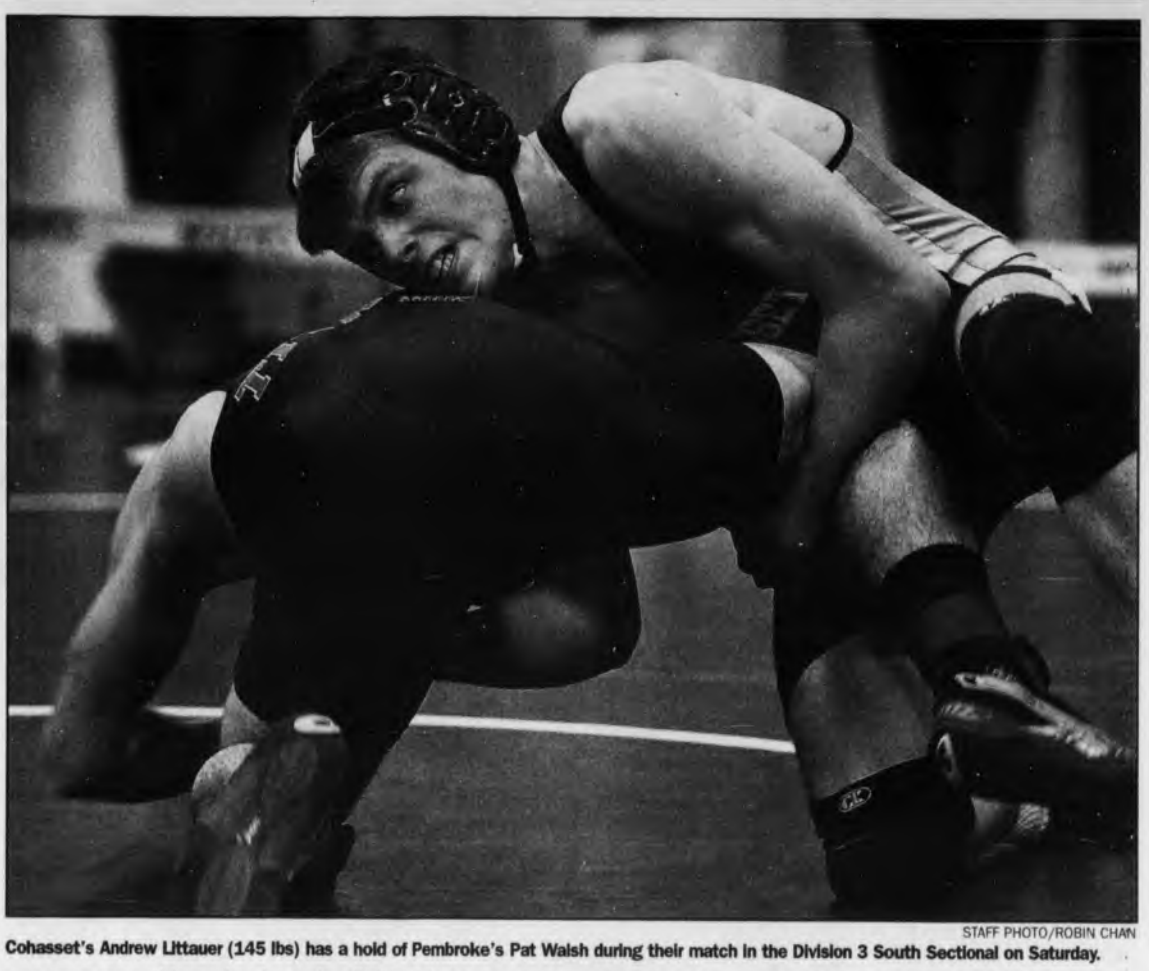
It took a bit of magic with a last-second escape for two points and a tie as time ran out in regulation.

Froio used the magic for a 4-2 overtime win and the title.

"He's worked really hard this year," Sweeney said of Froio. "He lost to Meyer earlier this season. This shows where he should be. The one he lost was like that too. It was in the last seconds."

With eight wrestlers still in the competition, the team headed back to Pembroke around eight o'clock on Saturday morning. Suffering some disappointing matches the previous night, Sweeney said he "told the kids to leave it all on the mat every match, win or lose." What began as an unsure circumstance turned out to be one of the most memorable days of Cohasset wrestling, said Sweeney.

In addition to jumping from tenth to sixth place in overall team scores, there were notable matches for each wrestler. At the 103 weight class, Helbock finished fifth and defeated a Norwell's Greg Butler 1-0 after losing to him in the beginning of January.



Dooley competed at 112 and, according to Sweeney, wrestled the best he has all year against the third and forth seeds. Murphy took third place in the 140 weight class, having a total sectional record of 5-1.

His only loss was to Pembroke's Pat Claflin, who finished second.

Wrestling at 145, Littauer's highlights included beating a tough Scituate competitor, Brendan Perkins 1-0 and pinning the three seed to get third place.

Toomey also won third for his 152 weight class, beating a Carver wrestler to whom he had previously lost in what Sweeney called a "courageous win."

Flibotte finished fifth in the 171 weight class with four strong wins, one of them being 12-10 in overtime against Norwell's Ross Parlon. When asked for last thoughts on the tournament, Sweeney responded that he is proud of his team's tremendous effort this season and is looking forward to a great finish in the state tournament this weekend. And so, with bumps, bruises, and new medals, the Cohasset wrestlers are off to Pittsfield.

Cohasset's Andrew Littauer (145 lbs) has a hold of Pembroke's Pat Walsh during their match in the Division 3 South Sectional on Saturday.

"As a team this is a s good as we've finished in sectionals in a few years," Sweeney said. "At least since 2005 when we won the State Tournament. We had six guys in the final round and all six had wins. We had a champ, three thirds and two fifths. It was a great way to finish. Yesterday was a little dis appointing. Today, the way we came back was great."

States is this weekend in Pittsfield.
